person-that-reads-small-print facts of the month: sex

For every 'normal' webpage, there are five porn pages.

Sex is biochemically no different from eating large quantities of chocolate.

A man's beard grows fastest when he anticipates sex.

Male bats have the highest rate of homosexuality of any mammal.

The average shelf-life of a latex condom is about two years.

"Formicophilia" is the fetish for having small insects crawl on your genitals.

Attraction. If I were free associating in a Mallet's Mallet* style scenario with myself it would go something like... attraction... magnets...tractor-field...pull...love....sex...eyelashes...lips...big wheel... rollercoaster...candy floss. I'm not sure whether that says more about me than the diverse meaning of the word 'attraction' but there you go. As it's our attraction issue we've looked at a few sides of it, examining the love point of view and problems associated with dating in Jersey (pg18) right through to a guide to Jersey visitor attractions for you to take your guests to this summer (pg16). We also look at the options for European festivals (pg22), one of the most attractive options for summer entertainment.

One of the most attractive things this month is the shoot. We were lucky enough to have M.A.C cosmetics fly one of their top make up artists over for our women's fashion shoot this month. Despite arriving at the crack of dawn and having to leave that afternoon James did a great job of making Toni look good enough to have every driver in Rue de Pres Trading Estate behaving like a kerb crawler. Check it out on page 68.

Before I go, I'd like to say a bit thanks to Rosie Monks, who's been our resident illustrator this month. You'll see her work throughout this issue. We hope you like them as much as we do.

Have a great July people.

At one with nature.

For the new roof they are hoping to transplant the top soil containing the seeds so that the new green roof will re-colonize naturally. Not a typical off the shelf sedum green roof.

samesame (but different)

meet the proposed new Watersplash (complete with permanent indoor wave)

Some people build businesses for business' sake, some for money, for success, for notoriety. Other people build their businesses based on a passion, a personal motivation and a desire to provide the best product or service no matter what. This business ethos can usually be seen in the product: the Innocent smoothies, the Howies, the ones who go that extra mile to try and offer us something we love.

That's the feeling I got when we were invited by David Seymour to a presentation on the new designs for the Watersplash. There have been rumours milling around about the future of the Splash ever since Seymour Hotels acquired the site in 2004. Speculation was rife over when the building would be flattened to make way for a big hotel, a fancy venue or something else that would lose the memories we all have associated with the Splash of old. It was a huge challenge therefore, in the face of public opinion, to undertake a plan to create a new Splash that would provide everything St Ouen's regulars want to maintain whilst creating something that extra bit special, something that has the potential to get our new generation of tourists excited.

The Seymour Group investigated other beach front entertainment venues and took inspiration from Quay Four in Cape Town and The Extreme Academy in Watergate Bay, Newquay. They enlisted the help of local architect Tim Skudder at Nigel Biggar and Partners to create a solution what would be in harmony both with the natural landscape of the Five Mile Road and its location beachside. As a surfer, Tim was brought up in his family's beachside inn and is well placed to empathise with the needs of a project like the Watersplash redevelopment.

New Surf Club Facilities

That blue trailer has a certain 'je ne sais quoi' but this is going to mean some decent facilities for the Surf Club and the perfect setting for comps with board store, club room, showers and judges' room.

Fine Dining Restaurant.

One to make the most of the view and eat well too. For dates and indoor and outdoor eating.

Got friends visiting that want to surf?

Tucked away at the side here is the new surf lodge. Accommodation for 24 with access out onto the skate bowl and climbing wall. Prepare for a big night and save yourself the bus back to town!

Skatebowl

Keeping it Underground.

All those memories of Mad Mark jumping on you lost forever? No way. We get a subterranean nightclub that will open onto the Wavehouse for some true club and surf events.

This innocent looking bit is the WaveHouse.

Established in Durban, South Africa in 2001., Wave House and Wave Loch are owned by inventor and entrepreneur Tom Lochtefeld. Tom was co-founder of Raging Waters theme parks, Lochtefeld invented 30 global patents for water rides and attractions, and built rides and theme parks across the world.

In 2002, Lochtefeld acquired the lease for Belmont Park in San Diego, a failed beachfront retail specialty center, and proceeded to revitalize the seven-acre facility by blending the original historic family-oriented amusement centre with state-of-the-art boardsport entertainment and beach recreational amenities.

A lifestyle centre for California surf culture, it's on real sand, overlooking the Pacific Ocean with a real boardwalk and shade palm trees. It is an outdoor restaurant with surfboard tables and plenty of bars, one of which was built from plans of the original Windansea Shack. It has live music and a beach volleyball court, and of course, 'the Wave' a.k.a. Bruticus Maximus.

If this all goes to plan the Splash will be the world's fourth Wavehouse after San Diego, Durban and Chile. Plans include a retractable roof. True surfers and boardriders globally can therefore travel to our little island to check out not only our waves but also our Wavehouse. Thing pro-tour style events and parties....bring it on!

'As a surfer this is a dream project. Working with the Seymour Hotel Group on a project that is at the very heart of Jersey's cultural and environmental heritage has been challenging and exciting. The new Watersplash will belong in St Ouen's Bay; the concept has been to use landscaping to minimize its impact and blend it into the bay. Special attention has been given to how the building will look as you approach the Watersplash from land and sea. It really is a 'win win' situation, islanders (especially surfers) and visitors will get a better version of the 'Splash they now enjoy with the same relaxed feel, club etc.. plus the Wavehouse!'

Tim Skuggar
Nigel Biggar and Partners

The development team is further assisted by the appointment of Dominic Cole as land use consultant. Dominic's experience includes being lead designer and planner for The Eden Project and current Chairman of the agardens and Parks Advisory Panel of The National Trust.

You can see therefore, how the new proposed building will morph into the St Ouen's landscape perfectly with sympathetic development and planting, assisted by Sedum roofs, allowing the building to sit comfortably with its surroundings.

This isn't a development for the sake of a development. This is the desire to create a truly world class destination attraction whilst maintaining everything Islanders want from the Splash as we know it and have known it.

All the items marked on the model on the previous spread show how the new proposal not only gives us everything we had but some really great new facilities.

One of the features of the Splash redevelopment will be the creation of a Channel Islands chapter of the Surfrider Foundation.

For those of you that have never heard of it, the Surfrider Foundation is a non-profit grassroots organization dedicated to the protection and enjoyment of our world's oceans, waves and beaches.

The organisation was founded in 1984 by a handful of surfers in Malibu, California and now maintains over 50,000 members and 80 chapters worldwide doing good for the surfers' habitat. They have chapters in Australia, Japan, France, and Brazil (and maybe Jersey soon).

Now. The Splash we know and love

Autumn 2009 (hopefully). The new Watersplash: all hidden into the St Ouen's landscape.

The Surfrider Foundation has adopted the following principles to guide and govern the activities of the organization .

1. SURFRIDER recognizes the biodiversity and ecological integrity of the planet's coasts are necessary and irreplaceable. SURFRIDER is committed to preserving natural living and non-living diversity and ecological integrity of the coastal environment.
2. SURFRIDER promotes the right of low-impact, free and open access to the world's waves and beaches for all people. SURFRIDER acts to preserve this right of access.
3. SURFRIDER is dedicated to enhancing wave-riding opportunities in ways which will not adversely impact nearshore ecosystems.
4. SURFRIDER believes environmental education is essential to the future health and well-being of the planet. SURFRIDER seeks to develop and utilize educational materials that are informative, factual, proactive, synergistic and fun.
5. SURFRIDER strives to be accurate and nonpartisan in its communications with its members and the general public. In addition, SURFRIDER will express the unique values inherent in wave-riding — individualism, camaraderie, non materialism, and an appreciation for human kind's historic relations with the Ocean.
6. SURFRIDER is a grassroots organization, effective through the participation of its members. SURFRIDER activities emphasize the value of an involved membership.

7. SURFRIDER encourages all commercial enterprises to adopt the Ceres Principles . Their determination to do so will favorably influence SURFRIDER's willingness to provide support. SURFRIDER will not permit sponsors to divert the Foundation from its mission or projects undertaken.

8. SURFRIDER does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, sex, or national origin for any reason. SURFRIDER promotes the healthy enjoyment of the coastal environment for all people.

9. SURFRIDER and its representatives, affiliations and chapters agree to abide by these principles and all rules and regulations governing non-profit organizations.

Follow our five rules of attraction and transform yourself into a love-magnet this summer...

The First Rule of Attraction: Always make a good impression

Looking a bit rough round the edges? Take yourself off to Elmina for a bit of a spruce-up with their Aveda men's grooming products. Try the brand new Pure-formance™ Exfoliating Shampoo for a head start. The organic formula reduces product build-up – which can cause dandruff – and clears scalp pores, leaving your hair flake-free and gleaming with health.

Aveda Men Pure-Formance™ Exfoliating Shampoo, £11.60 at Elmina, 71 King Street, St Helier. Tel: 610082

The Second Rule of Attraction: Be spontaneous

Too cash-strapped for a romantic weekend? Whisk your lover away to the market for a taste of the continent at a fraction of the cost. Le P'tit François serves that romantic classic, moules à la crème overlooking the central fountain – and don't forget, mussels are said to be an aphrodisiac...

Le P'tit François, Central Market, Halkett Street, St Helier.

The Third Rule of Attraction: Don't forget the details

Men always notice a woman's eyes. But women, well women look that bit further down. Women notice shoes. As worn by David Beckham, Brad Pitt and the England rugby team, Oliver Sweeney shoes are sought after by connoisseurs for their sleek styling and high-quality leather. The new season Stanzig, Mate and Heart shoes arrive at Mensclub this month, and there's already a waiting list – put your name down now.

Oliver Sweeney shoes, around £215 at Mensclub, 17 Halkett Place, St Helier. Tel: 731557

The Fourth Rule of Attraction: Expect to meet your dream partner...

...and throw away all those having-a-fat-day knickers. Studies have shown women behave differently when they are wearing sexy underwear. What better excuse for splurging on a fabulous set of undies? Plums is having a delivery of romantic, vintage-inspired lingerie from Californian-based lingerie store, Jonquil – just what you need to unleash your inner Marilyn....

Olivia chemise from Jonquil, around £120 at Plums, 7 La Colomberie, St Helier. Tel: 731302

The Fifth Rule of Attraction: The best accessory is a smile

So make sure yours is the brightest around with a professional teeth whitening treatment. After the first visit, impressions are made for thin gum shields which you use with special gel. Stay away from tea, coffee, red wine and curries during the treatment which should last a couple of weeks – and enjoy your new sparkling smile!

Professional teeth whitening - £295 with follow-up treatments at around £20-30 a time. Contact Stuart Duncan, B.D.S., Victoria House, Victoria Street. Tel: 502888.

CISA gets rocked to raise funds

The Channel Islands Skateboard Association (CISA), Little Green Rock and GreenRock Skateboards have teamed up to raise some money for the Jersey skate park.

Little Green Rock have done a limited number of their eco-friendly bamboo t-shirts with a special design and will donate £5 for each shirt purchased to the CISA to put into a fund for the Jersey skate park.

'I thought it was great news when I read that the island would finally be getting a proper skate park' said Buter from GreenRock Skateboards. 'I've been on the island for about six years now and this has been an issue for as long as I've been here. My boy has already started to skate and I really like the idea of there being a place where I know he can go and ride his skateboard all day and not get in trouble for doing it!'

With a large chunk of change already set aside by the States for the skate park, you might wonder why anyone is trying to raise more money for the project. When talking to Jake Hipwell, the president of the CISA, he simply says that they are looking for outside funding to provide the skateboarders on the island with the best skate park possible. Jake says that the CISA are also trying to ensure that there will be money to maintain the skate park and keep it safe after it is built.

'We printed 300 of these shirts for the skate park campaign', says Debbie from Little Green Rock, 'so we're aiming to raise £1,500 for the park fund. As we are still quite a small company we are trying to find another corporate sponsor to match our donations to bring the total to £3,000. It might not sound like a lot of money to some, but it certainly is to us and it will be put to good use.'

The shirts can be found on the Mens section on www.littlegreenrock.com.

For more information

Check out the CISA website (www.cisa.uk.com), www.littlegreenrock.com or call Buter on 077977331591.

AMAIZIN! MAZE - 9

The theme for the aMaizin! Maze this year is ancient civilizations and as always will not disappoint. New attractions include the mini maze, where you only have to find 5 clues which is ideal for young ones, and the dino dig where you can hunt for dinosaurs and become an archaeologist for the day. Although many of the activities are aimed at children and families, it really does have something for everyone and is a great place for the 'young at heart' to spend a day.

LES MUELLES - 12A

What was once a simple golf course now has so much more to offer. The Segway rally is a fantastic activity for competitive groups or those just after something a bit different. And the laser clay pigeon shooting and miniature golf course are two activities that should not be missed this summer. And after all that, what better way to recuperate than to head to Rocco's restaurant which, with its stunning views over St Ouen's Bay has gained a superb reputation for wonderful food and a relaxed atmosphere.

JERSEY LAVENDER FARM

The Lavender Farm is one of the most enjoyable, relaxing and educational ways to spend a couple of hours in Jersey. Unwind in peaceful, tranquil gardens and savour the stunning sights of lavender rows blooming in shades of blue, indigo and purple in the 9 acres of fields. You can also feed the chickens and doves that coo and cluck lazily around the place. A little known perk of the Lavender Farm is its lovely café that does an amazing breakfast - the perfect way to start the day. Don't forget to stock up on presents for friends and pampering goodies for yourself in their little shop!

LIVING LEGEND - 8A

Jersey's Living Legend Village is a must visit during the summer months. Whether it's to view the Jersey Experience, which provides a multi-dimensional insight into Jersey's heritage and history, or play a spot of crazy golf on one of the two 18 hole courses, the Jersey Karting Complex is a relatively new addition to the Living Legend and is a great way to spend an afternoon, whilst the Shopping Village offers a variety of crafts and trinkets and always has a fabulous end of season sale.

DURRELL - 3A, 3B

Durrell is one of the must-sees of Jersey. All islanders feel they should go more often and all tourists push it to the top of their to-do lists, and so they should. Durrell, although like a zoo is actually a conservation centre that breeds endangered species and works with places like Madagascar to educate people on the importance of bio-diversity. With animals and birds like gorillas, flamingos and orangutans it really is a top attraction.

Looking for something We've even included the excuse not to get out a

JERSEY SEA SPORT - 15, 12, 12A

Jersey Sea Sport is one of the largest and oldest established jet skiing centre in Europe, and has 8 three-seater "ride-on" type jetskis, 1 sports model jetski, a surf-jet motorised surfboard and 2 powerful skiboats. They also run banana rides, speedboat trips, water skiing and wakeboarding. Because of the high demand for activities like this across the island, booking is advisable if you are in a large group. Perfect for adrenaline junkies and thrill seekers.

JERSEY POTTERIES - 1, 1A, 1B

Excellent service and outstanding quality has been the brand's ethos for the past 50 years since the family company was first established. From humble beginnings as a small tourist attraction in 1946, today's thriving Jersey Pottery has become a world-renowned ceramics brand, with bespoke orders and classic ranges featuring in over 20 countries. Its base in Gorey is a wonderful day out as you can see the pottery being made, painted and glazed. You can also have a go yourself at Glaze Craze where you pick an item to paint and choose your own design. A real personal souvenir. And if that's not enough reason to visit, then the food is truly fantastic, be it a quick sandwich or a three-course meal.

JERSEY KAYAK ADVENTURES

This is a truly unique way to discover Jersey and is fast becoming a must do. You can experience the beauty and tranquillity of a sea kayak tour around the stunning coastline and reach remote beaches, explore cliffs, caves and see the wildlife. Tours can last from a couple of hours to a multi day trip and they offer tours suitable for paddlers of all ages and abilities including families with young children. Individual and group bookings are possible, no previous kayaking experience is needed and all equipment is provided.

PURE ADVENTURE

Pure Adventure is fast becoming the first port of call for a day of fun-filled activity in Jersey. There are over 25 different sporting and holiday pursuits lined up for you to experience, all set within Jersey's stunning natural environment. The brand new adventure centre at Les Ormes leisure centre in St Brelade has taken Pure Adventure to a whole new level. Check out the Aerial Trekking Adventure Play Ground, with high and low level challenges and for those who dare, zip wires and a parafan jump. Pure Adventure also offers activities like blo-karting, rock climbing, coasteering, jet skiing and kite surfing.

JERSEY MUSEUM - ALL ROUTES

Jersey Museum is a great introduction to life in Jersey. Enjoy the perfectly restored Victorian merchant's town house and explore the story of Jersey from the first inhabitants approximately 250,000 years ago, through the Bronze Age, the Roman period and right up to the modern day. On display are some of Jersey's best treasures, including mammoth bones from 150,000 years ago and the St Helier gold torque. It is the best way to brush up on your Jersey history.

THE WHEEL - ALL ROUTES

Met with mixed views across the island, the one thing that can't be said is that it has been seen before. This is a truly unique addition to Jersey's attractions and offers a new insight (literally) into the island. As the wheel goes around you get views across to St Aubin's, the castle and into town. Only here for 5 months - if you're thinking you will leave it till next summer think again. You wouldn't want to be the only one who missed the "Jersey Eye" would you?

AQUASPLASH - ALL ROUTES

The AquaSplash has Jersey's premiere aqua facilities all under one roof. For serious swimmers, the 25-metre swimming pool is designed for a whole range of aquatic activities as the depth varies with movable floor. Whilst for families, the leisure pool provides fun on the flumes, tyre ride, inflatable and lazy river and is just the ticket to keep everyone amused. The wave pool is a lot of fun and is in operation every half an hour during peak times, and swimming outside is a real luxury when the sun is out.

(with no apologies to Bradshaw – cause she had it easy)

"Ex, Ex, Ex"

Okay, I know this is all a bit clichéd, a bit SATC, a bit “done”, but I feel compelled to write, because frankly, Jersey, is a fucking weird place to be single. Even just being in a relationship is a bit “odder”, a bit harder here. But oddest, hardest and most fucked up of all of the different states of union, or non-union, on this little place we call home, is the Jersey Break-Up.

Seriously, could it be much worse? Could Josef Mengele have devised a more sophisticated or more drawn out form of mental torture? In a Jersey Break-Up, unless one of you moves away, or ideally, they do the decent thing and die a quick and painless death that in no way makes you feel guilty, then the horrors that await you are pretty much endless. Here is the list of how Jersey makes break-ups extra special!

NORMAL BREAK-UP

After period of mourning, you bump into ex in supermarket or similar, after a suitable amount of weight loss and a haircut.

If living together, the one who can afford the property takes it on. The other person moves sadly, but calmly on to an alternative home.

You see your ex with someone else. It hurts.

Eventually, in time, you move on. Friends embrace your new partners and leave your ex firmly in the past.

Your new partner is unlikely to have any connection to your ex.

In Jersey, with this pressure cooker, relationship stew we fester and mate in, it's either casual and slutty and no damn good for your head, or far too damn serious, because only one of you has "qualies" so you're living together in five minutes flat. And we all carry on, shagging or moving in with each other, and the Jersey Break-Up cycles continue.

Surprisingly, throughout my own recent Jersey Break-Up, although it's been tough, I have only felt jealous once. It wasn't seeing Him with another girl and it wasn't seeing my many happy-couple-friends with their alarming number of happy-couple-babies. It was when I was hanging out with this very cool teenager I know, a 14 year old surfer boy with freckles on his nose. I asked him "What ya doing today boy?" and he wrinkled his very cute nose at me and said "I'm gonna meet my girlfriend on the bus, then we're gonna buy CD's, then go to the beach, then maybe later I'll sleep at hers".

That was when I felt jealous. Don't get me wrong, I don't want a teenage boyfriend (that would be sick and wrong!), but I want a boyfriend in the teenage sense of the word. Someone to go see stuff with, to fool around with, who'll get on a bus with me and sometimes stay at mine. Someone who cares enough to call, to tell me I'm pretty, and maybe even make me a cup of tea when I'm ill - but won't even think about moving in!

(if you think this could be you, please email!!!!)

JERSEY BREAK-UP

After precisely NO period of mourning, because they did NOT do the decent thing and die, you see them the VERY next day on the way to work in traffic. You then repeatedly see them in Checkers, out in town, at a friend's birthday, down the beach, driving ANYWHERE. You do not have time to lose weight and get your hair done if you are a woman. You do not have time to get rid of signs of the self-pity hangover if you are a man. Everyone involved looks how they feel - like shit.

He with qualies wins. Or if the person with qualies, can't afford it, no-one wins. If neither of you have qualies, neither of you will now be able to afford to live. And if you both have qualies, you're probably related. It is all very bad.

You see your ex with someone else. Not only does it hurt, but you fucking know the person! You slept with THEIR ex once or was it their cousin?! They have a name and you probably know where they work. Everyone you know also knows them. Apparently they are "sound". Their face is now burned upon your mind. Everywhere you go you think you see them - because it's Jersey, you're not imagining it - you actually ARE seeing them! The only small benefit you can find in this endless hell is that all this knowledge makes stalking so much easier.

You will never move on. Oooohh, emotionally you may, (once you stop the stalking), but you will always be "such and such's" girl/ bloke. And you will always see them. Forever. Until they die. Just keep focusing on that.

Your new partner once slept with your ex's brother/father/cousin/ best friend/dog. Get over it.

EYE-SPY_
Metal Detector ManSignature Behaviour: Zig-zagging slowly across the beach, eyes glued to the sand, as a faint high-pitched beep-beep-beep comes from his metal detector.Distinctive Markings: A spade to dig up buried treasure, and pockets bulging with finds.Natural Enemies: The dog walkers who get to the lost pound coins first.Mating Call: "Would you like to see my collection of pre-war pennies?"

Ken doesn't like to call himself 'Metal Detector Man', or his hobby's proper name: a detectorist. In his mind he's a treasure hunter, savouring the adrenaline rush that comes from not knowing what buried hoards he'll find beneath the beaches of Jersey.

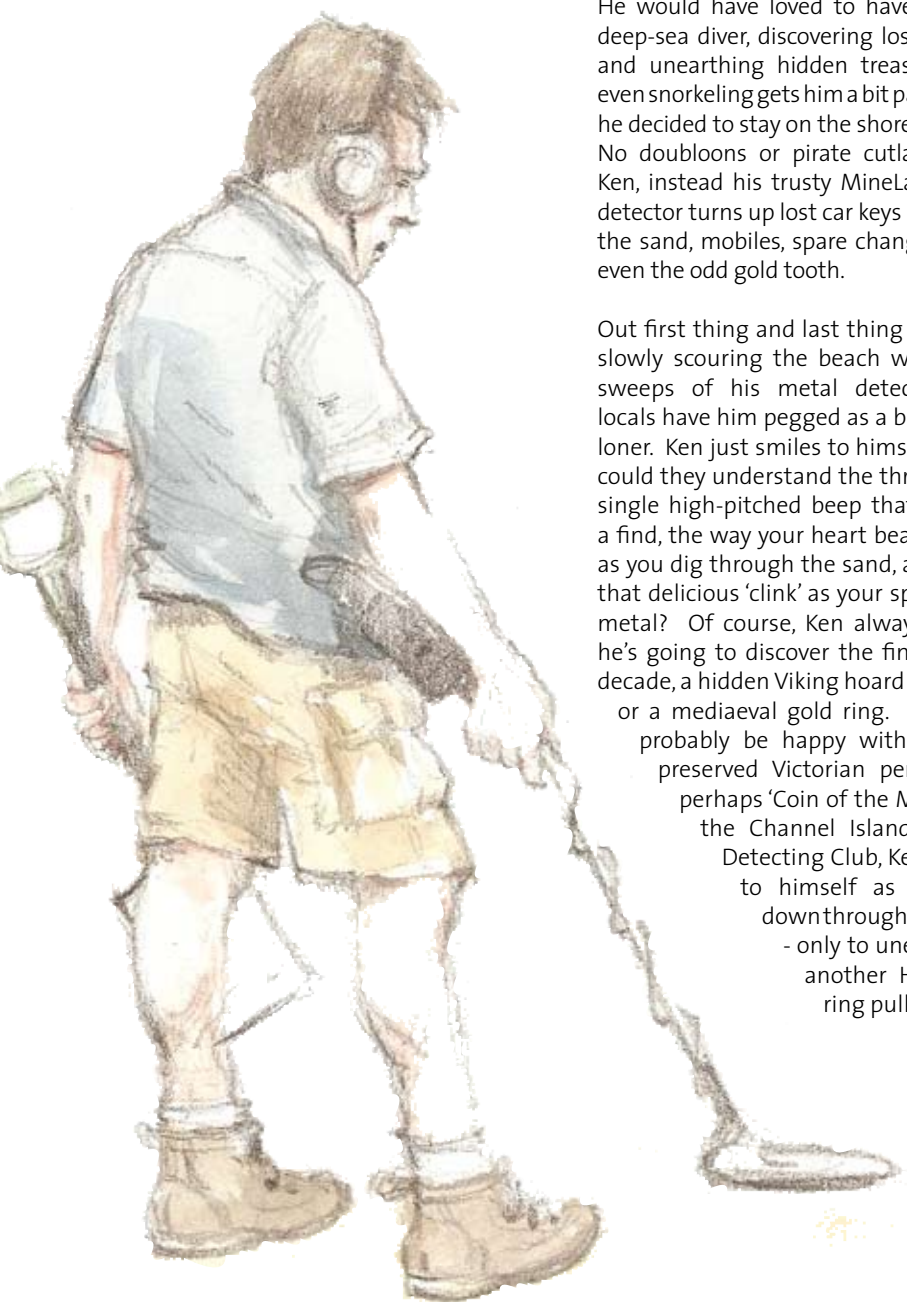

He would have loved to have been a deep-sea diver, discovering lost wrecks and unearthing hidden treasure, but even snorkeling gets him a bit panicky, so he decided to stay on the shore instead. No doubloons or pirate cutlasses for Ken, instead his trusty MineLab metal detector turns up lost car keys buried in the sand, mobiles, spare change – and even the odd gold tooth.

Out first thing and last thing at night, slowly scouring the beach with slow sweeps of his metal detector, the locals have him pegged as a bit odd. A loner. Ken just smiles to himself. How could they understand the thrill of the single high-pitched beep that signals a find, the way your heart beats faster as you dig through the sand, and then that delicious 'clink' as your spade hits metal? Of course, Ken always hopes he's going to discover the find of the decade, a hidden Viking hoard perhaps, or a mediaeval gold ring. But he'd probably be happy with a well-preserved Victorian penny and perhaps 'Coin of the Month' at the Channel Islands Metal Detecting Club, Ken thinks to himself as he digs down through the sand – only to unearth yet another Heineken ring pull.

It all started when he inherited an old metal detector from his pub quiz mate Stan. He started practice sweeps of his garden – it was a bit like Hoovering – and within minutes he'd turned up the spare car keys he'd lost back in 1992. Sue next door called him over to find her lost eternity ring, and it wasn't long before he was heading out to the beach every evening, metal detector in one hand, spade in the other, on the trail of buried treasure. He finds plenty of it as well – rings, brooches and coins – but they're more likely to have been dropped by someone from Rochdale rather than ancient Rome.

He targets the beach hotspots; around the ice-cream van, picnic sites, and that strip of soft sand just above the high-water mark where everyone leaves their towels. Ken can't believe how many people tuck their jewellery under the corner of a towel to go swimming, then forget it's there when they return dripping wet. By the time they've wiped the salt water out of their eyes, their precious signet ring has slipped out of sight under the sand. The dunes at St Ouen's normally turn up some interesting finds. He used to wonder why he found so many wedding rings lost in secluded spots, until he put two and two together. An illicit liaison, you slip your wedding ring off, put it in your pocket ... "and it's amazing what falls out of your pockets when, let's just say, your mind's on other things", chuckles Ken.

All those wedding rings add up – and with the price of gold sky-rocketing, Ken's onto a winner. He puts it all on Ebay – anything sold by JerseyBoy42 has normally come from under Jersey's golden sands. Along with all the loose change he finds, Ken's taking home a quite a bounty from his beachcombing. 'Not so daft now, am I?' mutters Ken as he slowly sweeps the beach again.

Gallery goes undercover to bring you an insider's look at some of Jersey's social stereotypes. Recognise anyone you know?!

ahead of the new Grassroots festival,
we look at its headliner.

Xavier Rudd

Those of you that have travelled in Australia may have picked this one up en route. Xavier Rudd is a one-man-band/multi-instrumentalist who plays guitars, Yidaki (didgeridoos), Weissenborn slide guitars, stomp box, harmonica, and percussion, Rudd made his US debut in 2004 with Solace. In the years since, his popularity and reputation have begun to mushroom for a string of conscious, heartfelt songs and an impressive stage show that finds him performing those songs' guitar, didgeridoo and various percussion parts simultaneously - using a unique set-up that finds him literally surrounded by his various instruments and singing from behind a stand holding three didgeridoos (of different keys).

A bona fide star in Australia, Rudd grew up in Bell's Beach in Southern Victoria, notable for its cameo in the memorable surf film Point Break. He was reared in a music-friendly environment, where his parents spun records by the likes of Neil Young and Paul Simon. In 2002, Rudd released his debut album in Australia, To Let, which was followed by Solace and in 2004 by Food in the Belly, his debut for Anti-. In his own country, he's collected a string of gold and platinum sales awards for his albums and DVDs. Over the past five years, his popularity has ballooned in the US, where he has amassed a burgeoning grass-roots fanbase and the admiration of the likes of Ani DiFranco and Jack Johnson, while hitting many of the country's top festivals, like Bonnaroo, Bumbershoot and Austin City Limits Festival.

The past few years have been a whirlwind for the singer. In between sold-out tours in Europe, Australia and the US, he's supported the likes of the Dave Matthews Band, Jack Johnson and Ben Harper, and has been working on the film score for fellow surfer and Rudd-enthusiast Matthew McConaughey's Surfer Dude, co-starring Woody Harrelson and Willie Nelson. In the meantime, he's earned a reputation as a great Australian activist, advocating for indigenous rights and environmental responsibility.

Apart from the touring and activism, recording proves a challenge. "What I do, musically, is not something that people know much about," he says. "It's kind of its own thing. So every time we go in to record, we learn new ways to approach it, to capture the right sound. There's a lot of spill in the different mics, and a lot of factors to consider. So with each recording, we've learned different ways to approach it. On White Moth, I opened the door for the possibilities in the studio, and got a vibe for what I could do. On Dark Shades of Blue, I think we captured what we do live, the thickness of it, the tone. I think we finally achieved what I've always wanted to hear on my recordings".

see him at St Ouens

Xavier will be playing at this summer's Grassroots festival, a festival of music, surf and ecological living in August.

After successfully organising the excellent Extreme Weekends, this year Linzi Wilson has turned her hand to something more organic. Linzi almost has Grassroots all planned out so look out for more information in next month's issue.

Love music, will travel. With so many music festivals crowding the European summer calendar, you could spend the entire season walking between stages. And that doesn't necessarily mean you'll be stuck in a boggy field in the middle of nowhere. Music fixes now come packaged in all sorts of picturesque locations: Serbia's Danube River, the Mediterranean coast in Spain and the rolling hills of Stradbally, Ireland are just some of the places you'll find this summer's best soundtracks. Grab your tent pegs and choose your poison.

3-6 July 2008,
Roskilde Festival
Roskilde, Denmark

One of the largest and most musically diverse festivals in northern Europe, the four-day-long Roskilde will be sure to satiate your sonic craving. It's been on the groove since 1971. These Danes know how to put on a well-orchestrated event: lethargic campers can even choose a pre-pitched tent option and all profits go to humanitarian causes. We went over two years ago and rocked out with the Danish. They burn the campsites when the festival ends, which is kind of weird but the facilities are excellent.
Headliners: The Chemical Brothers, Grinderman, Jay-Z, Radiohead.
£167.50 including camping (free admission if you're 60 or older!)

3-6 July 2008,
Eurockéennes
Belfort, France

Eurockéennes has been taking place on the peninsula of Malsaucy near Belfort, France since 1989. It's beautiful, surrounded by lakes and hills with one of the stages on the beach. The campsite is located a short walk along a disused rail line from the festival site although shuttles run regularly for those who don't fancy the scenic stroll. Gallery did this one in 2006 and it was excellent. Headliners: Moby, Massive Attack, CSS, Ben Harper & The Innocent Criminals, The Wombats, Cali, Cat Power, The Gossip, Babyshambles, N*E*R*D, The Offspring, Band of Horses, Calvin Harris.
Tickets: Day tickets 37 euros, 95 euros for three days.

10-13 July 2008,
Exit Festival
Novi Sad, Serbia

What started out in 2000 as a protest against the Milosevic regime has turned into an annual event, attracting more than 400,000 people over four days. EXIT prides itself on its political agenda - which includes campaigns around issues like drug trafficking and migration. The line-up has some major international acts.
Headliners: Sex Pistols, Gossip, Paul Weller, The Hives.
Tickets: £72 for four days of camping

4-19 July 2008,

Montreux Jazz Festival

Lake Geneva, Switzerland

Montreux Jazz Festival has been running on the sublime banks of Lake Geneva since 1967. Festival alumni include jazz greats like Miles Davis and Ray Charles, but in recent years the programming has expanded well beyond such refined sounds. The festival consists of a series of concerts that take place at a variety of venues around the lake, on a salsa train and a blues boat.

Headliners: Quincy Jones, Leonard Cohen, Etta James, N.E.R.D.

Tickets: Vary- free- £189

17-20 July 2008,

Benicàssim International Festival

Benicàssim, Spain

If the words 'Spain' and 'summer' aren't reason enough to go, then how about the fact that this festival takes place on the gorgeous Costa Azahar? Benicàssim has drawn an increasingly impressive number of indie and electronic acts to this Castilian paradise since 1995. As well as music, the festival includes tempting side-bars like a short-film festival and beach-side art exhibition. The official festival lasts four days, but you can stay and laze around for nine.

Headliners: Leonard Cohen, Gnarl Barkly, Sigur Ros, Roisin Murphy

Tickets: £170 four-day pass, including nine days free camping/one-day ticket coming soon

14-16 August 2008,

La Route Du Rock

St Malo, France

That's right, just over the water. We went last year. We wore tiaras and jumped up and down. A highlight of the French festival scene, and blessed with a great venue within the crumbling ramparts of an old castle in Saint-Malo, La Route du Rock has blossomed into a major musical event. Fantastic stuff and they also have one of the best systems for drink buying. This year is the 18th one, they must be doing something right. Crepes at midnight... mmm.

Headliners: Sigur Rós, The Do, The Breeders, The Notwist, Foals.

Tickets: Day tickets 15-27euros, 60 euros for three days.

Pukkelpop

Hasselt-Kiewit, Belgium

With a name like Pukkelpop, what's not to love? Belgium's best outdoor festival has drawn over 135,000 people and a very-now line-up in previous years. This year looks to be heading in the same direction.

Headliners: Metallica, The Killers, Flaming Lips, Serj Tankian.

Tickets: Day tickets 15-27 euros, 60 euros for three days.

12-18 August 2008,

Sziget Festival

Obudai Island, Hungary

More a self-contained universe than a festival, Sziget is a week-long extravaganza of leisure-making. Want big Brit-bands? Finnish glam rock? Every musical whim is catered for across Sziget's five stages. When your ears need a break there are cinemas, sports, restaurants and kids' activities.

Headliners: Sex Pistols, REM, Iron Maiden

Tickets: Advance booking 120/100 euros camping/non-camping; 32 euros day ticket

29-31 August 2008,

Electric Picnic

County Laois, Ireland

Set amidst the gentle landscape of Stradbelly, Electric Picnic has a killer line-up to go with its boutique philosophies. With felt-hat making, paintball, yoga, a foot spa salon and carbon blueprint talks on offer, Electric Picnic caters for body and soul as much as it does ears and eyes. Swanky camping options include beach huts, bivouacs, podpads, tipis or a double-decker 'bus-bed'.

Headliners: Sex Pistols, My Bloody Valentine, Underworld, Grinderman

Tickets: 240 euros for regular camping

5-7 September 2008,

Bestival

Isle of Wight, UK (interesting as it's on an island)

Curated by renowned British radio DJ Rob da Bank, Bestival is one of the newest kids on the block, but has already earned its title. Its benefits include boutique camping, the colourful Bollywood cocktail bar, an inflatable church for Vegas-style weddings, the Restival chill-out area and the Breastival baby temple for new mothers. Bestival punters can also take part in the giant fancy dress parade. This year's theme is yet to be announced, but in 2005 Bestival broke a Guinness World Record when 10,000 people hollered their way across the field dressed up as cowboys and Indians.

Headliners: My Bloody Valentine, Amy Winehouse, Underworld, The Breeders

Tickets: £130 including basic camping

Fake bus stop for Alzheimer's patients

A German nursing home has created a pretend bus stop to prevent Alzheimer's patients from wandering off.

The bus stop, outside the Benrath Senior Centre in Dusseldorf, is an exact replica of a standard stop but no buses call there.

The idea emerged after the centre was forced to rely on police to retrieve patients who wanted to return to their homes and families but had forgotten that in many cases neither existed any longer.

"If we can't find them then we have to alert the police," said Benrath's director Richard Neureither. "It can be particularly dangerous if this happens in winter and they spend the night out in the cold."

Without powers to detain patients, he said, Benrath teamed up with local care association, the Old Lions, and went to the Rheinbahn transport network which was happy to provide the bus stop to nowhere.

"It sounds funny," said Old Lions Chairman Franz-Josef Goebel, "but it helps. On average, our members are 84 years old".

"Their short-term memory hardly works at all, but the long-term memory is still active. They know the green and yellow bus sign and remember that waiting there means they will go home.

"We will approach them and say that the bus is coming later today and invite them in to the home for a coffee," said Mr Neureither. "Five minutes later they have completely forgotten they wanted to leave."

The idea has proved so successful that it has now been adopted by several other old folks' homes across Germany.

Bus Stop?

Thong-faced robbers

Police are hopeful of catching robbers who were caught on camera using thongs as masks. The skimpy ladies pants left most of the daft duo's faces visible, say police in Colorado. CCTV cameras caught the pair holding up a convenience store in Arvada, reports Sky News. One wore a green thong while the other opted for blue - but their noses, mouths and chins were barely covered. Officers also have a few more clues to work with as one of the men failed to cover up a distinctive tattoo on his arm. The men, believed to be in their 20s, were not armed. They stole cigarettes and cash which they stuffed in a pink backpack.

Boy, 4, in rehab for cigarette addiction in Taiwan

A four year-old boy is in rehab in Taiwan after he became addicted to smoking his father's cigars.

The father, of Gaoxiong city, started taking his sons, aged nine and four, to a rehabilitation centre after catching them stealing his cigarettes and cigars.

The boys admitted stealing and said they did it because they thought their father looked "cool" when he smoked.

The four-year-old admitted he even pleaded with his brother to borrow cigarettes from classmates when they failed to steal any from their father.

Bild mocks Brits on holiday

Germany's tabloid newspaper, Bild, has printed a guide on how to avoid British holidaymakers.

It was inspired by the case of a British man being awarded £750 after suing his travel company over a holiday at a resort filled with Germans.

David Barnish, 47, claimed his holiday in Greece had been spoilt by the number of German tourists, reports the BBC.

Bild quotes a German legal expert saying that Germans holidaying in all-British resorts would not have the same opportunity of suing.

It also ridicules British cuisine, binge-drinking, fashion and sport, says that "athletically they are not up to much, they can't even take penalties".

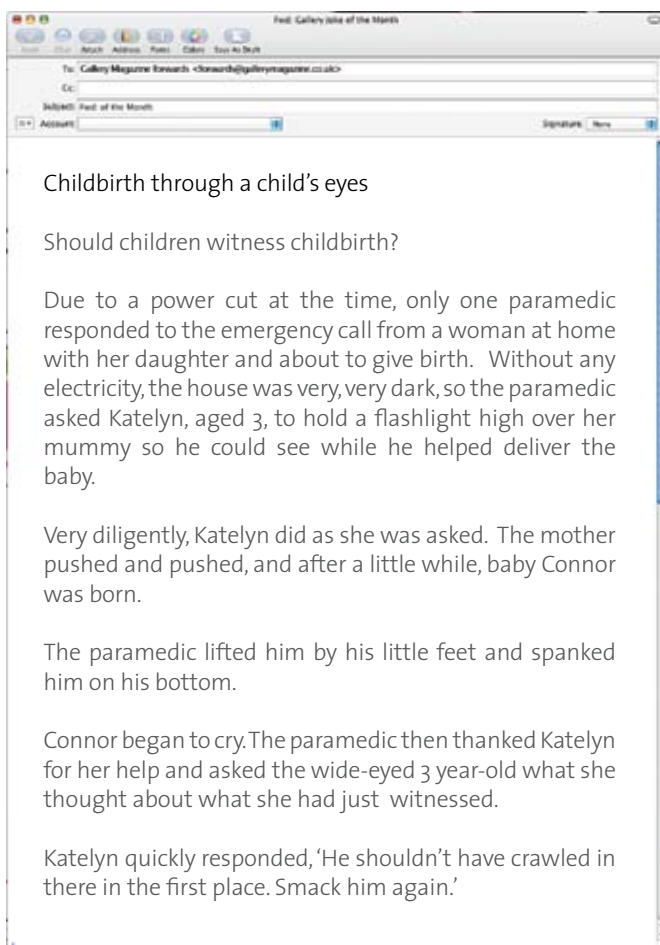

Bild recommends avoiding the most popular resorts for Brits and lists the top six 'black spots' as Palma, Majorca; San Antonio, Ibiza; Playa de las Americas, Tenerife; Ayia Napa, Cyprus; Faliraki, Rhodes; and Malia in Crete.

And it points out that Austria and Switzerland - the hosts of this summer's Euro 2008 football championships - will be largely Brit-free zones this year...

4am: German tourists begin preparations for 'operation reserve all of the sun loungers' in a predominantly British holiday resort.

youtube video of the month

www.youtube.com/watch?v=qRuNxHqwazs

According to our publisher, we've 'had a thing' about this video this month. I'm not sure what he means by that, but what I do know is that Gallery accounts for probably one fifth of the seven million, two hundred and eighteen thousand, two hundred and twenty nine times the video has been viewed at the time of writing. That's 1,443,645.8 times. Yep, we're so crazy that we watched it point eight of a time just to make the figures add up.

The Chronicles Of Narnia: Prince Caspian

It takes place about 1,300 years after the events of "The Lion the Witch and the Wardrobe" but in London, only one year passes between the events of "The Lion" and "Prince Caspian". The four intrepid children return to Narnia and meet an intriguing new character: Narnia's rightful heir to the throne, the young Prince Caspian, who has been forced into hiding as his uncle Miraz plots to kill him in order to place his own newborn son on the throne. With the help of a kindly dwarf, a courageous talking mouse named Reepicheep, a badger named Trufflehunter and a Black Dwarf, Nikabrik, the Kings and Queens of Narnia, led by the mighty knights Peter and Caspian, embark on a remarkable journey to find Aslan, rescue Narnia from Miraz's tyrannical hold, and restore magic and glory to the land.

Win your own masterpiece

We're offering the chance to win a framed copy of 'View of St Helier, 1833' by Philip Hutchings Rogers.

Philip Rogers was one of the many Victorian artists who visited Jersey, attracted by the unspoilt countryside and dramatic scenery.

The Victorian period was one of increased industrialisation and urban growth. As a reaction to this, artists often idealised the countryside in their paintings. They painted rural landscapes full of sentimentality which appealed to the taste of the day. In this painting, sunlight shines on the two figures in the foreground as they spin and knit. The Jersey cow did not develop as a breed until after this painting was made, so here the cows are painted in a variety of colours, as they would have looked at the time.

For your chance to win simply answer the following question:

How many animals are there in the painting?

Text your name and the answer to 07700 376 003. The more times you text, the more chances to win!

Competition rules

Open to all Jersey residents except employees of C&W Jersey or Jersey Heritage and their families. 2. The draw will take place on 28 July 2008 from all correct entries received before that date. 4. There will be one winner who will receive a framed copy of the painting View of St Helier by Philip Hutchings Rogers measuring 111cm x 174cm. 5. No cash alternative can be offered. 6. The judges' decision is final and no correspondence will be entered into. 7. Texts will cost your standard operator's rate.

Gallery Rally Closing Party in the P.O.S.H Bar at The Royal Yacht

This was a brilliant and happy evening, as everyone was reunited to chat about their Gallery Rally experiences. The whole bar was filled with chatter and laughter as people gathered around the television to see pictures from the trip.

Ben Davies, Gallery Magazine's publisher said, "it was great to see that literally every person who went on the rally came, and when the 2009 Gallery Rally to Barcelona was announced it was great to see that most people were keen to join us again".

Jet2.com Launch at Jersey Airport

A group of invited guests from the local business and leisure industry gathered recently at Jersey Airport to help celebrate the launch of Jet2.com's Jersey to Leeds low-cost air service. The airline was officially welcomed to Jersey by the Assistant Minister for Economic Development, Deputy Alan Maclean. The Managing Director of Jet2.com, Ian Doubtfire said, "this new air-link continues our desire to grow our network of routes from the UK". As well as opening up the county of Yorkshire to the Jersey leisure market, Leeds is the 3rd largest financial centre in the UK, so this new air service is sure to be warmly welcomed by the Island's business community.

One way fares from Jersey start from as little as £22.99 (including taxes) and can be booked online at www.jet2.com

Ray Quinn - Family Nursing & Home Care Ball at the Hotel De France

The Ball is an annual event to thank all those who have supported Family Nursing & Home Care and to raise money for the charity's work in the community. Ray Quinn said, "it's an honour to be performing in support of such an important local charity". Karen Huchet, CEO of Family Nursing & Home Care, said "the Ball is always a highlight of our year and we are thrilled to have Ray Quinn performing on the night".

Before Ray headed on stage we managed to grab him for a quick interview - here's what he said:

1.What attracts you to someone?

A lot of things really, looking good, nice hair and smile... umm what they wear.

2. What is your favourite attraction?

Swimming with dolphins in the sea in Jamaica.

3.What scent do you wear to attract women?

I like old school fresh smelling ones like Cool Water and Blue Jeans.

4.How do you like Jersey?

I've never been here before, I haven't had a chance to get out of the hotel yet. The drive from the airport to the hotel looked nice though!

5.Will you be on any more TV shows?

No I don't think so at the moment.

6.What is your favourite drink?

I go through stages... Coke, Tizer, Iron Bru, Vimto and a Coco Monkey is my favourite cocktail

7.Who is your favourite Simon, Sharon or Louis?

They're all very nice. Simon has done a lot for me, so I'd say him, but Sharon is really lovely too.

8.What have you been up to since XFactor?

I did the XFactor Tour and my tour, just been gigging and I did the show Baby Ballroom.

9. What is next?

I'm performing in the West End. I'm playing Doody in Greece. Rehearsals have been really good fun, I can't wait to start.

10.What's the best question you've ever been asked?

Any question about my car, or cars. I've just got a black Audi TT, and my dream car is a white Lamborghini. Cars are my thing.

Beach Cricket League Takes Off at the Oyster Box

Everyone was gathered outside the stunning new Oyster Box restaurant in St.Brelade Bay watching the first match of the The Oyster Box Beach Cricket League sponsored by Tetley Bitter. Drinks were flowing and delicious hors d'oeuvres were circling, giving spectators a chance to see what the Oyster Box has to offer.

The sun was beaming down on the beach, and a row of children sat with ice-creams happily cheering their fathers on. The supporters up the top were meant to be focusing on the game, however the food was so good it had everyone chatting with excited anticipation about the soon to be opened Oyster Box Bar and Restaurant. People were actually enquiring as to whether they could reserve one of the outside tables for the entire summer!

In the end the Victor Hugo Wines Team won, but it was a close match, and a brilliant way to spend the early evening after a day in the office.

Savills Launch Party

150 guests, over two evenings, took the opportunity to take a look around Savills new exclusive offices in Halkett Place, St Helier. The offices were full of guests enjoying drinks and chatting about their own property ventures. The launch was a success and I've been spotting lots of fellow guests out and about using their Savills bags, which were given out at the event.

Gary Bryant, Savills Associate Director and Head of Savills (Jersey) Limited, comments: "I am very pleased with what we have achieved in our first eight weeks of trading. I have a great team around me and our success is testament to their hard work and dedication. It gives me great delight to be able to showcase Savills, our philosophy and our facility in Halkett Place."

Credit Suisse Festival of Motoring

245 cars and bikes took part in this year's touring and racing. For all of those who came over from the UK for the event they were greeted by blazing sunshine and an excellent weekend of motoring celebrations.

Hundreds of people flocked to Peoples Park on the Saturday to look at the array of stunning cars on display there.

Glamping?

Glamping: glamorous camping, 'prompted in part by celebrity-studded festivals like Glastonbury, where the likes of Kate Moss and Sienna Miller make trudging through mud look chic'.

I don't go camping very often, partly because I was forced to do it as a child. Whilst all my friends were enjoying Florida and Disneyland each summer, I was bundled into the back of our Peugeot and whisked off to Brittany to experience the great outdoors. Watching my parents desperately trying to prevent our tent and belongings from being swept away during torrential downpours has put me off camping for all these years.

However, tour companies and resorts are now offering a new type of yurt holiday which, with nothing to do with Bear Grylls, is somewhat turning my interests back to enduring outdoor holidays. The standards for camping have been taken to a much higher level - nowadays you may find your tent complete with Persian carpets, wooden floors, crisp white sheets, down duvets, saunas, hot tubs, tent service and electricity. It's not your average communal showering, gas cooking camping style holiday by any means, but one you can find in almost every corner of the world now.

You don't need to venture half way across the world though to enjoy the luxuries of glamping when we have plenty of opportunities on our very doorstep. With our nation's increased environmental awareness and a recession close on the horizon, it seems that Britain's passion for this type of vacation is on the rise once more. Many of you may be camping this summer, whether at a festival in Europe, a weekend at St Ouen's or simply a night under the stars in your own back garden. And if Kate Moss can do it without looking completely dishevelled, surely there is some hope for us mere mortals?

Fortunately camping gear has improved, and there's a whole host of items out there to satisfy our every camping need. While a basic tent may keep you sheltered from freak storms, it does not offer protection from the cold, damp, noise and light. If you're the type of person to leave home with no less than a kitchen sink, good camping gear will be essential. Luckily it is now not only functional, but attractive, fun and stylish. British designer Cath Kidston, has been developing collections of various ultra-feminine floral teepees, windbreakers, ponchos and bedding for several years now. Her trademark feminine floral prints and splashes of colour brighten up the dull days as well as providing a striking landmark in busy campsites. Just make sure everyone else hasn't had the same idea. Designer tents are in ample supply, and Ted Baker has created his own line of blow up mattresses, sleeping bags and tents (reportedly complete with cuckoo clock and Chesterfield chair). Last year PUMA teamed up with Marcel Wanders to create the appropriately titled 'I hate Camping' range for those city dwelling folk who want to enjoy the outdoors but still look stylish. And the latest camping accommodation this season is the blackout tent from Ministry of Sound. Bearing in mind you may have had a late night and don't want to be woken by natural light, they have designed it with an extra dense fabric, leaving you with a nice red glow. It also comes in a pop up version from Millets if you can't face fighting those poles. But if you really don't want to mess around with tents at all www.myhab.com provides a ready assembled and recycled living compartment at the summer festivals. For £240, it will be erected when you arrive and dismantled when you leave, with luxury toilet and shower facilities included. They may not look like much, but they are dry with foam bedding and lockable security boxes.

If you are jumping aboard the glamping bandwagon this summer, you won't be leaving home without at least one home comfort. We've picked a few essentials to make your camping experience less basic.

Glamping tips...

- ★ If you can't take a fold up table, take some trays
- ★ Take a sheepskin to use as a blanket or as a rug and be the envy of your friends late at night!
- ★ Instead of lugging water around the camping ground, invest in a rollaround carrier
- ★ Don't forget baby wipes and hygiene gel
- ★ If you can't brush your teeth, try swilling some vodka - it's likely to kill most bacteria and a sip before bed time will keep you warm too
- ★ Try one of the solar showers from www.ethicalsuperstore.com - it heats up the water in 3 hours under the sun
- ★ Ear plugs and an eye mask are going to block out any unwanted distractions
- ★ Don't forget to pack your Jersey flag to lead your way home!

Angel

the jersey cat club best in show winner

Name: Champion and Imperial Grand Premier Bountiful Peekaboo

Alias: Angel

Breed: Devon Rex cat.

Age: 8 years and 8 months (DOB 7.9.99)

Likes: Admiration, Posing (to obtain admiration), attending cat shows (to obtain admiration) and playing with the kittens when she thinks no-one is looking.

Hates: Baths and her sister, Beanstalk.

If human, she would be: A beauty queen

Wants: To be admired, to be made a fuss of, to be 'top cat' in the household

Why was she chosen as a pet: My daughter, who knew absolutely nothing about show cats fell in love with her when she saw her as a young kitten.

Fascinating fact: The Devon Rex breed developed as a result of mating a cat to its mother; it is therefore important to 'outcross' to other breeds to widen the gene pool.

What is the most impressive thing she has ever done: Either becoming an Imperial grand champion (5 judges at 5 different shows have to agree that yours is the best grand champion in the class) or winning Overall Best cat in Show at this year's Jersey Cat Club show in May at the ripe old age of 8 years and 8 months! The latter, probably.

Never work with children or animals

Smart-alec kids can be really annoying. I can say this with complete confidence as I spent about ten years of my life being far too clever for my own good and suffering the consequences in the form of regular clips around the ear and occasional black eyes from my long-suffering parents and school friends.

Eventually (and this did take a while), I realised that the vast majority of people don't appreciate having their mistakes pointed out to them (the remainder being masochists who you probably don't want to hang around in case the conversation turns to leather underpants) and my life became a far less painful place.

Ironically, people now pay significant sums of cash for me to point out their mistakes on the basis that prevention is better than cure when you're about to sign up to a multi-million pound contract. I do however realise that even though I may not have enjoyed the aforementioned chastisements, they were in fact for my own good in that I became a much less unpleasant person to be around as a result.

Thank God, then, that I didn't grow up in Canada. Because in Canada, it turns out there is a law that lets children apply to the court to have their parents' decisions overturned (which can be found in sections 159 and 604 of the Quebec Civil Code, in case you were wondering). Can you imagine how insufferable a kid would be if he could take you to court for grounding him or delivering a well-earned smack to the back of the head? Even worse, can you imagine a lawyer that thinks that it is in any way a good idea to make this sort of application on behalf of a child? And the sort of judge that would rule in the child's favour?

Imagine no more - just a couple of weeks ago, Madam Justice Suzanne Tessier of the Quebec Superior Court ruled that a father's decision to ground his twelve year-old daughter for persistently posting on internet chatrooms after he told her to stop was unreasonable and should be overturned. The father (who was not named) had decided to stop the girl from going on a school trip and when she mentioned this to her lawyer Lucie Fortin (who had been appointed in connection with the divorce of her parents), Ms Fortin decided that the best thing to do would be to publicly undermine the authority of parents everywhere by getting the court to confirm that daddy doesn't know best.

In my eyes, this is a horrible consequence of the nanny state's idea of treating children like little adults by giving them rights and legislating for every possible danger that may befall them. It is very likely that smacking children will soon be made illegal due to the persistent high-pitched whining of lobbyists who say that children must be protected from the horrible adults who they are forced to live with and for whom anything that doesn't result in the child getting their own way amounts to abuse. A child must be perpetually coddled and loved, even if this results in a spoilt nightmare of a brat who makes everybody's life a misery and who will develop narcissistic and sociopathic tendencies in later life (and I admit that a surprising number of these seem to become lawyers).

“Ms Fortin decided that the best thing to do would be to publicly undermine the authority of parents everywhere by getting the court to confirm that daddy doesn't know best.”

Although there will always be cases where children who have suffered neglect or genuine abuse must be protected, I would argue that your average child has far more in common with a Labrador than, say, a nuclear physicist. A Labrador is capable of boundless love and affection but needs to be taught behavioural boundaries and there are only two ways of communicating these - by the use of rewards and the use of physical force. Obviously, it is preferable to use a reward-based system but unfortunately a Labrador, like many children, will not always respond to reasoned argument or realise that rights are paired with responsibilities and so the odd use of force can be eminently justifiable.

Likewise, it is an owner's responsibility to ensure that passers-by are not bitten or p*ssed on and so the Labrador must be trained - however it is shocking to see how many parents think that the education of their child is solely the responsibility of the child's school and believe the mindless mantra of a thousand soap operas and aeons of daytime TV - it doesn't matter how your kids turn out so long as you love them. Loving them apparently makes everything OK, even if they are illiterate thugs who have no hope of contributing anything to society beyond the provision of employment for social workers, probation officers and Jeremy Kyle.

At the other end of the social scale, far too many parents will automatically take their children's side in any argument, undermining the authority of teachers (and in some circumstances the police). The same parents are then as shocked as a nun stumbling into a brothel when their little snowflake tells them to f*ck off and stays out past midnight - however by then they have lost all hope of discipline because the child simply does not respect authority and has become so used to swearing at and ignoring the instructions of teachers that doing the same to their parents is a natural progression.

The upshot of all this is that in order to properly raise a Labrador child, parents need the will to impose discipline and to establish a respect for authority - how are they to do this when a kid can simply call up his or her lawyer and appeal every decision? Fortunately, the Canadian judgment above is now itself being appealed and so there is an outside chance that our moose-loving cousins will be spared the horror of a generation of obnoxious little know-it-alls (and the corresponding surge in applications to law schools in ten years' time).

JERSEY OPERA HOUSE

'Ice to meet you!'

The 51-England-Caps Rugby hero Kyran Bracken is bringing a fantastic ice skating attraction to Jersey this summer. 'Kyran Bracken's Ice Party' will be held at Fort Regent and is a project fuelled by Kyran's new passion for ice skating.

After winning ITV's Celebrity Dancing on Ice Competition in 2007 Kyran realised that he had found his new calling. The juxtaposing of the two sports is amusing and incredible - is there nothing this man can't do?

Kyran wanted to bring his show to Jersey because "you don't really get ice skating in Jersey and I love ice skating. I really hope this encourages other people to take up ice skating...We are putting on an extravaganza, you won't have seen a show like it. People will be shocked, amazed and there will be lots of laughing."

"I really hope this encourages other people to take up ice skating..."

Kyran has confirmed that Hollyoaks star Chris Fountain and former Hear'Say member Suzanne Shaw will both be coming over to Jersey to be part of the show. He also explained that people will be able to have ice skating lessons at Fort Regent as part of this project.

It sounds like it is going to be big and spectacular, Kyran really wants to bring something new to Jersey and hopefully if this first show is successful it will be returning to the island next summer as well!

Gallery Magazine Student Art Exhibition

This year's Gallery Magazine Student Art Exhibition is well underway, with the five finalists whittled from a multitude of entries sent in from local art students both home and away.

It took three judges around five hours and a significant amount of tea and coffee to argue it out (in a civilised manner, of course) and come to a decision about who the final five local art students to be shortlisted should be this year, and here they are; Danny Booth, Alex Chase White, Rachael Dorey, Jonny Milward and Helen Barnes.

The work chosen varies from three-dimensional pieces and photography to an oil painting, albeit not in the traditional sense. All of the finalists shown here all submitted work based upon well explained original concepts that also displayed exceptional attention to detail that caught the attention of the judges' eyes and minds, all of whom came from differing artistic backgrounds.

The prizes and winner, who is to be chosen by last year's winner Alexandra Dessain, will be announced at the preview on Monday 21st July between 5:30 and 7pm at the Jersey Arts Centre's Berni Gallery where it will remain on display until Saturday 9th August for the public to see, so why not drop by and take a look?

Peter Knight

Anyone familiar with the Jersey Arts World will recognise these unique abstracted, geometric hard-edged paintings depicting Jersey's varied coastline. Peter Knight, the artistic behind these pieces is exhibiting for the second time at The Sir John Cheshire Gallery this month.

His latest collection continues to focus on the Jersey Coastline, but incorporates new techniques and observations as one would expect from any artist developing and experimenting. His main style with strong colour will always be abundant, however alongside this more graphic approach, as an art teacher he encourages the use of varied media and has continued to experiment with materials to produce work with more texture and different surfaces resulting in a more tactile quality. Using slate, tissue, corrugated card and PVA adhesive in varied thicknesses, this has allowed him to make rhythmic trails, patterns, & movement across the canvas. He has been reinforcing this by working with several schools on Environmental and Re-cycling projects using these materials and others gathered from the seashore, culminating in large murals for long term display.

This new exhibition will include a number of canvasses on the theme of sand patterns and pools. Previously, two of his most successful paintings based on low tide were Plemont Surf and Plemont Rock Pools, which are easily recognisable. However, for recent studies on this theme Peter has used St Ouen's at low tide, which tends to focus on detail and does not directly relate to a specific location. Peter said of his work, "St Ouen's is constant source of inspiration for me, particularly in the vicinity of Rocco Tower. You have to move quickly if you see interesting sand patterns and pools because the beach changes quickly and they can change or disappear in hours rather than days. Gorey beach is another location for intricate patters at low tide and my most recent painting is based on a view there and of course the castle and harbour is an excellent backdrop".

Much of Peter's work can be viewed and purchased from The Harbour Gallery, and he also takes commissions. Visit www.peterknightartjersey.co.uk for more information.

International exhibitions International exhibitions (It's in New York so we named it twice)

If you're hopping over the pond this July and find yourself in New York, why not visit 'Artists Space' on 38 Greene Street and take a look at the current exhibition of contemporary architecture put together by Berlin-based realities:united?

Two digits of 7-segment display - formed using industrial fluorescent tubes - are suspended from the ceiling. The installation is light sign, information carrier, and light source at the same time.

As a 'display', the installation is used to show the current time in minutes. At the same time - as light installation - it is the only light source inside the exhibition space and therefore it serves as the necessary pragmatic lighting source. While the displayed information is changing every minute, the overall light intensity is kept on a constant level during all times, thus the appearance of the exhibition space is changed subtly but constantly.

The exhibition runs until the 28th and is open from 11am to 6pm.

Ian Rolls

'Outside Looking In' - an exhibition of recent work by Ian Rolls

The Framing Workshop will be hosting the latest collection from local artist Ian Rolls this month, entitled 'Outside Looking In', inspired by recent changes in his life.

Last September, Ian relocated to Devon with his wife Ruth and son Tom, to enable Tom to have an alternative and creative secondary education at the South Devon Steiner School. Having spent the majority of his life in Jersey, the change was both exciting and daunting. For him, it was exciting to have a beautiful new landscape to explore and be inspired by and a very vibrant cultural scene to tap into, but daunting to establish himself as an artist in a new place where he knew no-one and no-one knew of him.

By exploring locations, looking long and hard, drawing on the spot and getting a feel of the place, Ian established a new studio, painting, making contacts, painting, setting up exhibitions, painting, putting images into print, and more painting. "At every stage in my new life I was encouraged and motivated by what I had achieved in Jersey as an artist. I saw myself building on my Jersey success rather than trying to create something to replace it", explains Ian.

Showing this new collection of paintings in the island seems entirely appropriate to Ian, even though much of it may be of unfamiliar locations. When painting the Jersey landscape again it was with a renewed fondness and a fresh eye. Anyone who comes to see these new paintings at this exhibition will recognise Ian's wrong-handed wayward drawing style, the vivid use of watercolour and the same sense of fun and exhilaration to be living and working in a stunning place.

But less familiar will be the mega thick oil paintings (even thicker than those of the island coastline in the Arts Centre exhibition of a few years ago) and large detailed watercolours of architecture and river activity on the Thames in London. 'Outside Looking In' is essentially about looking, whether from outside or within the island is less important, "The painting is what matters, not necessarily what it is of".

Ben Robertson

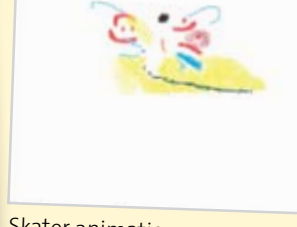

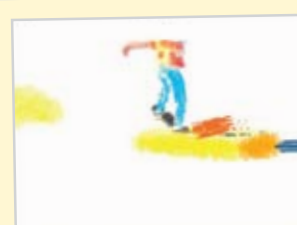

I have been drawing since I can remember. Art has always been my one true passion. During lessons at school I would draw from my overflowing imagination. I'm definitely a creative person. I have been at the University of Wolverhampton for two years now and wanted to see my drawings move which made me become interested in animation. There's a huge world of animation to explore, it sucks you in - big time.

Whenever I draw something now, in whatever medium, I wonder if it can be animated somehow. Whether I'm watching the world go by or I'm getting out of the shower and drawing on the steamed up mirror. After working on 5 seconds of animation, which would take about 4 to 5 full days of drawing, it is an amazing, fulfilling experience to see your drawings finally move.

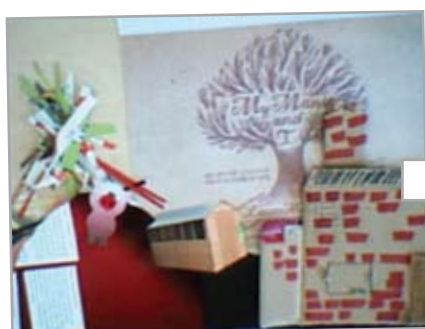

The process of animation can be tedious and time consuming so you have to be patient, but the result at the end is incredible and seeing people's reactions is always good - you need a bit of constructive criticism sometimes.

letters from london

Letters from London

Meltdown at the Southbank, Fiona Rae in Mayfair, confessions at the V&A and car boot sales with Sir Peter Blake. Our London based insider, Nina Hervé checks it all out and has a chinwag with Jersey born photographer Stacey Yates.

Stacey Yates

Former Beaulieu student and Jersey born photographer Stacey Yates moved to London after completing her degree in Wales in 2004. I caught up with Stacey and talked about her forthcoming exhibition and her hopes for the future.

How did you get into photography?

When I was bored at home as a kid I'd always drag out my parents old photo albums with the cheesy 70's sunset on the cover and pour over them for hours imagining their lives before they had children. They are still my favourite photographs. My Dad was a photographer in Jersey's vibrant days when tourism was huge and I spent a lot of time as a child with my mum while she sold photos to tourists doing the rounds at hotels and riding donkeys at Pontins! My Dad always said, "Stacey - a good picture is a sold picture" I never understood what he meant until I got older. I think it's bollks to be honest.

Why the move to London?

After studying for my BA in Documentary Photography in Wales there was really no reason for me to stay. The course in Wales was great. It really gave me the space to consider what I was looking at, and why and how I wanted to capture things. Moving to London seemed like the natural step after Wales. It was a good time to move to the city and get to grips with the art/photography scene. It's a pretty important and explosive time for photography as art right now.

Are you still interested in pursuing documentary based photography?

Yes but I think the term 'documentary photography' is pretty ambiguous. Documentary photography is generally associated with suffering and hardship. After college I watched lots of my classmates come back from assignments in third world countries covering AIDS, homelessness, war... you get the picture (excuse the pun). I learnt that I didn't feel comfortable photographing something that I didn't understand and know enough about emotionally or culturally. I didn't want to be responsible for telling a story I understood little about. I'd need a long time in those places before I could comfortably photograph and find a voice. Making pictures in the UK was something I could relate to more, and I wanted time to consider things not just rush, in a snap way - I think this led to my decision to make pictures around Disaster Recovery (my last exhibition in Jersey which took place at Hometown). I suppose this shift in feeling has led me to step out on to the art route but to me it's still documentary. I just want to talk about simple things sometimes. There is a lot of beauty in the simple things.

Can you tell me about your new forthcoming exhibition 'the seduction of place'?

The Seduction of Place is a collaboration with three other artists Sarah Finn, Dominic Hawgood, Louise Taylor - curated by Hannah Schlotter. It's an exhibition funded by the British Council and is very much about responding to space. The space we are focusing on is green belt land, which is basically the back door to London city and the beginning of the Essex countryside, which is marked by Aldborough Hatch farm. It's a space that has changed considerably over time and with the Olympics around the corner is very likely to disappear altogether. I'm interested in the ownership of the land and how the space feels in direct relationship to that ownership. The space between the city and the countryside wherever it may be is pretty blurry and hard to pin down. I want my pictures to reflect that.

What's next?

I have a few personal projects on the go that will pick up pace after this exhibition is complete. One of them is exploring the notion of unidentified people and how we imagine who they were and how they lived their lives. It's easy to go missing in the city and lots of people do, only leaving behind possessions that help us imagine who they might have been. I'd like to make photos around that - portraits without people. I'd also like to return to Jersey at some stage and do a photo project about the island in some capacity. Having distance from Jersey (i.e. living in London) makes you understand the island in a different way and I'd like to explore that. Long term, I'd like to study a masters in photography, teach part time and keep making and showing work.

Stacey's work can be seen as part of 'The Seduction of Place' from 31st July until 10th August at Studio 1.1 Gallery, Redchurch Street, London. It will then move to Aldborough Hall Farm, Essex as part of the Real Ale Festival from 28th August. For more information visit: www.staceyyates.com

It's all happening at London's South Bank...

The iconic riverside façade of the Tate Modern building has recently been taken over by an impressive line-up of acclaimed street artists. The external walls of the gallery are being used to display huge street art pieces by Brazilian graffiti artists Nunca and Os Gemeos, Sixeart from Barcelona, the Faile collective from New York, Parisian JR and Blu from Bologna.

Just a short stroll away at the Hayward Gallery, a boating pond on the gallery's roof and a giant plastic bubble observatory are installations that are part of the 'Psycho Buildings' exhibition (which is on show until 25th August 2008). As a centrepiece to the Hayward's 40th anniversary, ten international artists have created architecture-inspired works to fit inside, outside and around the gallery's famous brutalist concrete structure. As well as the skyline boating pond by Austrian artists Gelitin and the giant observatory with its floating ceiling by Argentinian Tomas Saraceno, the exhibition also includes a room frozen in a moment of explosive disaster by Cuban artists Los Carpinteros and an eerie village of over 200 dollhouses by Brit Rachel Whiteread.

Meanwhile at the Southbank Centre, legendary musicians Massive Attack, in their role as the Artistic Directors of this year's Meltdown Festival, recently took over the Royal Festival Hall and Queen Elizabeth Hall for nine days of concerts, DJ sets, talks, films and visual art. Guests included MC5, Grace Jones, Stiff Little Fingers and Tom Tom Club. Massive Attack also invited United Visual Artists to exhibit an installation outside on the riverside terrace. This outdoor piece, titled 'Volume', is an award winning sculpture consisting of a luminous array of light and sound emitting interactive columns that people could stroll around and enjoy.

Fiona Rae

An exhibition of new paintings by former Turner Prize nominee Fiona Rae was on show last month at Timothy Taylor Gallery. In these new paintings Rae, born in Hong Kong, reveals her continued fascination with graphic elements of the Far East. Brightly coloured flowers, butterflies, toys and cute cut-out cartoon characters feature on top of dark brooding palettes of paint suggesting dissolution and decay.

The Art Of Confession

Interactive exhibits, performances, celebrity authors, new media evangelicals and publishers investigated the future of personal storytelling at a Friday evening event at The Victoria & Albert Museum. Guest curators BAD IDEA magazine explored and celebrated the modern idea of confession, where voyeurism has replaced guilt and exhibitionism serves as absolution.

Confessionals took place in the Cast Courts with art collective ContainerPLUS offering realistic, modern solutions for your everyday problems whilst down the hall, short confessional films were being screened. Visitors also had the opportunity to submit their own confessions to the Tell All Printing Press, a modern printing press housed in a purpose built factory. A pamphlet was produced by BAD IDEA using the contributions and was made and distributed on the night. Scribbles on a confessional note whilst sat at a school desk were confiscated by actors and made into a mini plays and the art of online confession was revealed in a master class in blogging led by professional bloggers from Guardian Unlimited and BAD IDEA, teaching people how to turn their personal stories into a compelling and entertaining blog.

With DJ sets from Rough Trade's Geoff Travis and Scritti Politti's Green Gartside, this made an altogether interesting evening.

Art Car Boot Fair

Sisters and collaborators Karen Ashton and Helen Hayward formed 'Ashton & Hayward' in 2004 to produce the first proper Art Car Boot Fair in London. Initially conceived to be a bi-annual affair the 2006 boot fair proved so popular they decided to make it an annual summer event, whatever the weather. Their aim was for the Art Car Boot Fair to be a day when artists let their hair down and for all visitors to engage with art in a totally informal way, and to pick up some great deals.

This year amongst the many stall holders offering their wares, were two cars that were transformed with fantastic live graffiti street art, new artist designed tax disc holders were for sale to liven up your windscreens and the likes of Sir Peter Blake, Gavin Turk and Le Gun were selling their creations from the back of their cars.

With The Artists Choice Farmers Market and a Booty Stage hosted by Bethnal Green Working Mens' Club, all who went had a whole day of frivolous fun and art bargains.

'Probably the best-priced property in Jersey...

Michael Conway

I have just about seen it all. Inflation has sky-rocketed so high that some kind, generous, heart-filled being has decided to allow the first time buyer to purchase...

"Probably the best-priced property in Jersey?"

Well blow me down. Carlsberg have decided to take the property market by storm. A Samaritan for the middle-classed has been sent from the heavens to abolish 25 year olds from staying under the same roof as their parents. Who is this Saint you ask!? Old St John are the cries! Johnny boy isn't the first, he is the fourth and holds a tablet with a carefully selected text, chiselled upon its grainy texture.

- LOW MAINTENANCE STUDIO
- IDEAL FIRST STEP ON THE MARKET OR INVESTMENT
- CONVENIENT LOCATION
- MODERN FITTED KITCHEN
- RECENTLY FITTED SHOWER ROOM
- WALK IN CONDITION - OWNER MOTIVATED TO SELL

The kitchen is open-plan to the living-room/bedroom. Is this allowed? Two steps into the kitchen (this must be the legal requirement) now I'm standing at the sink, watching the bedside television. Shock horror. This is just one room with a glamorized bedpan attached! Within the potty room consists the usual "three-piece" bathroom suite, but wait...no shower curtain or unit to bathe myself morning, noon or night. Surely this isn't a wet-room!?! A walk-in spa with botanical fragrances and waterfalls? No. "A quick shave for Sir?" Old St John asks. "Yes, why not!?! (I kindly oblige). "I'll look in the reflection of these tiles to delicately slice my throat open shall I?!". Old St John hasn't even supplied a mirror within this price! If I were to break wind in bed, the living room will be out of bounds, as would the kitchen, oh and of course the bedroom. I shall hide in the bathroom... whoops, wrong door. I have locked myself out of my humble abode.

Yes, for sale is a studio flat for £109,500. Has the world gone mad? Am I going mad? No...we are all going mad. Let the men in white coats take me away!

Q What's your favourite attraction in Jersey?

A The Opera House – I have so many good memories of performing opera and concerts in this wonderful venue.

Q Do you like fairground rides, if so what's your favourite?

A I am nervous of fairgrounds ever since I went on a contraption called the "Rib Tickler" in Edinburgh a few years ago. Most of us felt, or got sick, and it didn't feel too much like fun.

Q Do you believe that opposites attract?

A Not necessarily. In terms of relationships, there has to be tension to preserve attraction. In the kitchen, sweet and sour are not always compatible.

Q Who would be your ideal man/ woman?

A Female – Katherine Jenkins for the body, Clara Schumann for the brain. Male – Gandhi or Mandela for the mind, Gordon Brown for the body.

Q In Fatal Attraction Glenn Close boiled a bunny, what would you boil?

A My socks, after a 100 mile walk.

Catherine Jenkins, Hayley Westenra and more recently legendary pianist and band leader Jools Holland are just a few of the talented musicians that we have been lucky enough to see perform in Jersey. Jools Holland blew the audience away last month with his rhythm and blues orchestra and guests including Marc Almond from 80's pop group Soft Cell, and next month it will be the turn of KT Tunstall.

The last 3 years has seen KT receive great success with her debut album Eye To The Telescope, which sold four million copies worldwide and she has been awarded numerous accolades including a Brit Award for Best British Female Solo Artist, the Ivor Novello Best Song award for writing Suddenly I See, a Q award for Track of the Year for Black Horse and the Cherry Tree, a Grammy nomination for Best Female Pop Vocal Performance and she also secured a Mercury Music Prize nomination. Outselling every other female artist in the UK in 2005, KT's music has led her to becoming a huge festival favourite and now she is headed for us, thanks to Dick Ray and Jersey International.

KT's modern folk and acoustic style of music has been inspired hugely by her life experiences growing up in Fife, Scotland. After Fife, her musical journey took her to Edinburgh, where she busked and hosted her own acoustic nights, Acoustic Extravaganza, which gave the Skye album its name and is still put on by friends under the name Acoustic Edinburgh. Finally, with the promise of a publishing deal, she begrudgingly moved to London, where her career eventually began to take off. Her most recent album Drastic Fantastic - a title that popped into her head as she was writing her journal on an aeroplane, is full of powerful lyrics, bold, colourful melodies and reflects her increased adventurous side. When talking of Drastic Fantastic, she says 'I wanted to be braver. I also wanted to push the musicality on the album... I really enjoyed playing lead guitar for the first time, as well as piano, rhodes, and ukelele. But also I felt my vocals were a little safe at times on the first album. I didn't mean that to happen but I was so inexperienced singing in a studio that I couldn't quite get my live voice into the booth. After three years of touring you get so good at just flipping yourself into gig mode; finding whatever underground stream it is inside that provides you with that magical lucidity. I've found that now I can tap into that really quickly. And for the first time, being in the studio was another stage. This time round, she was listening to the radio, mainly the new pop-indie output that has been booming with The White Stripes, Arcade Fire, The Killers, Bloc Party, as well as all those months on the festival.

KT will be supported in her Jersey concert by the winner of Radio 103's search for a support band, chosen by her management. For more information and tickets on the concert contact Fort Regent on 449827.

Brenda Edwards, best known for her stint on the second series of X-Factor, appeared at Club 72 for 3 performances last month and Gallery had the chance to find out what she has been up to.

C: So we've seen your fellow competitors Shayne, Chico, Maria and Andy go on to achieve success since the show, but what have you been doing since X-Factor?

B: Well whilst I was still on the X-Factor, unknown to me at the time, the general managers of Chicago had approached Sharon after hearing me sing Son of a Preacher and so when the show and tour had ended, I went on to play Mama Morton in London's West End for a year, and then on to Carmen Jones. I have also sung at corporate events, one was supporting Smokey Robinson and the Bandits, and to 40,000 people at Cardiff's Millennium Stadium. I have been GMTV's X-Factor correspondent for several years and over the last 18 months, I've been putting my band together and been gigging with them, playing a mix of songs you will remember from the show, some new ones and some ones you wouldn't maybe expect from me.

C: Do you still speak to anyone from the programme?

B: Yes I spoke to Chico last week, we went to see a Journey South gig recently. Also Nicholas (the good looking one, and no, I can't give you his number) and also Maria and Andy. It's nice to touch base every so often. On the show we were friends first and foremost and keeping the relationship is a testament to our unit.

C: What did you think of Andy's shot at Eurovision? Is it something you would ever consider doing?

B: I was so upset, he should have been in the top three if not the winner. The song was really good, and he worked really hard on it, it's a shame they don't appreciate the quality in the contest. I would never enter, it's too political and they don't respect good music.

C: How has X-Factor changed your life?

B: I'm still the same person, I just can't go shopping as easily as I used to. I get paid lots of money now to do something I love. I have also been very fortunate to work with some fantastic artists and lovely people who I have grown from. I was also very proud when I was voted Favourite Reality Show Person at Screen Nation's Black BAFTAs. I was glad people voted for me and now I can give something back, because without the people you are nothing.

C: So what are your plans for the future now?

B: I've been working on an album, which I will be testing out tonight to see what you think. It's got a funky sound and a bit of soul. Gospel is my background but I love soul music. I have worked with various producers but the main thing is my band, I really feed off them. It should be out this year if not the next. I really wanted to create a good album and not release one too early just for the sake of it.

C: Where do you see yourself in 5 years time?

B: Maybe doing West End shows overseas like Vegas, and with at least one album, go on tour. As Arnie says; "I'll be back!"

You can hear Brenda perform with Paul Gambaccini, the BBC orchestra and other guests on BBC Radio 2 on July 4th to celebrate American Independence Day.

film releases:

IT'S HERO TIME.

We're in summer blockbuster season and the studios are getting out their big guns. What better way than to compete for hearts, minds and pick&mix revenue than opening three movies about superheroes / aliens in one month? What if they all had a fight? Would Batman have something on his utility belt to beat a washed up superhero-elect? I'm pretty sure he could take Eddie Murphy in any guise. He hasn't been the same since 'Raw'...

THE DARK KNIGHT (TBC)

DIRECTED BY: CHRISTOPHER NOLAN

STARRING: CHRISTIAN BALE,
HEATH LEDGER, AARON ECKHART

RELEASE DATE: 25/07/2008

The sequel of Batman Begins sees the man himself return to fight against the crime and corruption that is engulfing the streets of Gotham City. Aided by Lieutenant Jim Gordon (Gary Oldman) and newly appointed District Attorney Harvey Dent (Aaron Eckhart), Batman (Christian Bale) is succeeding in his masked quest to bring Gotham's criminals to justice - until the explosive arrival of a psychotic criminal known only as 'The Joker'.

The sadistic newcomer unleashes a reign of terror and obliteration of the citizens of Gotham, and Batman realises that he has undoubtedly met his match. As chaos and panic ensues, even the most futuristic, super-high-tech weaponry in Batman's possession is not enough to put a stop to The Joker's evil plans.

As the stakes are raised, the battle becomes personal and Batman is faced with a moral dilemma – he is forced to turn his back on everything he believes in to save the people of Gotham from deadly hurricane of The Joker.

HANCOCK (12A)

DIRECTED BY: PETER BERG

STARRING: WILL SMITH, CHARLIZE THERON, JASON BATEMAN

RELEASE DATE: 2/07/2008

Stereotypically, you would expect superheroes to be strong, brave, kind-hearted, courageous martyrs of the universe – but not Hancock. Homeless, alcoholic and obnoxious, Hancock (Will Smith) may only be going about his business saving the lives of the people of Los Angeles, but the trail of destruction he always leaves behind does him no favours. Hancock is ignorant to the fact that using his powers irresponsibly will inevitably result in disaster – making him an unpopular and misunderstood member of the community. Hancock continues to storm through life, saving lives and creating more destruction along the way - until one life-changing day, when Hancock comes to the rescue of top PR Executive, Ray Embrey (Jason Bateman). Insistent on returning the good deed, Ray is determined to salvage the reputation of this controversial superhero. However, whilst Ray's attention is focused on cleaning up Hancock's image and attempting to rehabilitate him as a loveable hero, Hancock is busy hitting on Ray's wife Mary (Charlize Theron). Mary is convinced that Hancock is a waste of space and time, a lost cause beyond help – but will she come round when she realises that sarcastic, arrogant Hancock may have a vulnerable side after all?

IMDB 6.8

MEET DAVE (PG)

DIRECTED BY: BRIAN ROBBINS

STARRING: EDDIE MURPHY, ELIZABETH BANKS, SCOTT CAAN

RELEASE DATE: 18/07/2008

When a mammoth extraterrestrial fireball lands in New York's Central Park, everyone is stunned to see a seemingly normal man emerge without a scratch. But there is something out of the ordinary about Dave Ming Chang, something that no one can quite put their finger on. Dave (Eddie Murphy) appears to be rather uneasy and awkward in his own body, unsure of standard human behaviour. He sticks out like a sore thumb, and in New York City, that isn't easily achieved. The truth is, Dave isn't a regular person; he is a human-sized spaceship created as a carbon copy of his miniature-sized captain. The captain, along with his crew of 100 quarter-inch human-like aliens, is endeavouring to find a way to save their planet from ruin.

As if this isn't complicated enough, the aliens come across a predicament when their ship becomes besotted with a beautiful, bona fide human being, Elizabeth. This woman has only ever fallen for bad guys who break hearts, but now she has found someone who isn't like all other men – literally.

Since resolving to spend the winter of 2006/07 in the studio working exclusively on new material, Musicroom have come up with an abundance of ideas and over the past year have sifted out the gems, developed and road-tested them before hitting record. The end result is 1000 Things, the band's debut EP, a record which showcases this emerging Jersey band as a songwriting team, yet captures the energy and spirit of their live performances.

Roaring in with a thumping tom-tom rhythm, opener The Gap charges along with a punchy guitar and keyboard riff. Rock ballad Make Amends follows, before The Circle's arresting guitar motif and simple but memorable melody. Finally, the title track returns to an up-tempo swing, closing the record with intricate piano and searing guitar lead.

The four well-written tracks are diverse in their scope, as befits a band whose members bring to the table hugely different backgrounds and influences. Founder member Simon Larbalestier found success in Jersey and beyond with progressive and electronic bands like Heaven Can Wait, Pressure Point and Pagan Daughters in the 80s and 90s. Simon now handles both keyboard and bass duties with aplomb, linking well with the powerhouse drumming of Craig Armstrong, who draws inspiration from everywhere from metal to jazz and fusion. Up front, Matt McManus's raw, bluesy Gibson guitar proves the perfect foil for Lesina Davies, the band's Samoan diva, whose voice carries over riffs and frantic beats alike while retaining its darkly soulful centre.

This line-up has now been settled for long enough to really gel as a live band. Musicroom love to play live and will follow a busy 2007 which saw well-received sets at Gorey Fete, Battle of Flowers, Live Lounge (to name but a few) with more of the same in 2008. The band's live show is thoroughly compelling and well worth witnessing; all four members attack the songs with passion and feed off each others' play, bringing the mix of originals and eclectic covers alive on stage.

Since coming into being in 2002 as a vehicle for Simon's own material, Musicroom has evolved through various guises including a spell playing almost exclusively covers. However, with its best ever line-up and a renewed commitment to new material, this Jersey band is ready to step up to the next level in 2008. 1000 Things represents the first fruits of this, but there is more to come. Behind the scenes, new tracks (Honey Honey, Cessez, Long Way) continue to emerge and seem destined to appear on the Musicroom setlist this summer, and the band are already talking about EP number 2.

Musicroom headline their own show at Blue Note Bar, St Helier on Saturday 5th July.

album release

love&death

A regular on the Jersey music scene, Bob Vincent has just released his new album, Love&Death.

A folky acoustic guitar voyage, the album has elements of American southern blues and snappy guitar riffs that make you nod along and imagine you're driving down the beach. The familiar lyrics and spoken word style is calming and has helped relax us over deadline. We like 'Danielle' and the harmonica in 'Wish List'.

You can buy the new CD and learn more about Bob at his MySpace page www.myspace.com/bobvincent. His site is www.jerseybob.com - but it won't let us in to look, check there in future.

BEHIND THE SCENES...

M.A.C Make up's Senior Artist James Molloy flew over to Jersey to create our July cover look. We managed to get all the latest tips & hints from him so you can create stunning looks this summer.

"You need a great moisturiser to make skin look and feel great. I'm going to use M.A.C Moisture Lush on the model because you get an amazing sheen, which is great for a flawless dewy look. It also makes foundation glide on and stay put!"

"In the summer you don't want to be using a heavy foundation so I'm going to use M.A.C Skin Tint Seethrough Foundation, it's got an SPF of 15 and it really lets skin breathe. Gently use a brush to blend it in and you can build up in layers where you need extra coverage. This summer you should opt for more of a natural honey-tone, as opposed to last season's 'as-bronze-as-you-can-go' look."

"I'm going to use M.A.C's moisturising concealer, the best way to apply concealer is with an eye shadow brush (James uses the M.A.C 224 Brush), you just place three dots under the eye then gently blend them together with the brush."

"Lipstick has made a huge comeback this season. And one of our hottest colours is Neon Electro Orange – if you do one thing this summer make sure you treat yourself to a bright bold lipstick!"

"If you are doing hot lips you want to accessorise with cool eyes. It is all about hot versus cool. You also want the texture of the eye-shadow to mirror the dewiness on the skin, so the one I have used has a slight shimmer to it. This makes the look all come together."

"Finishing the face is really important. Mineral products are really big on the market at the moment and our one keeps the skin's dewiness but stops the shine. It is best applied with a 130 powder brush, and dust lightly on the nose, chin and forehead."

"We've got a great Fibre Rich Lash Mascara, I really love the wand, and it is a good jet black colour. My tip is to wiggle the brush at the root of the eyelash so that each one gets caught in the wand so that every one gets covered."

Fantastic New Body Sculpting Treatment

'lonithermie' at Spa Sirène in The Royal Yacht

This is such a brilliant treatment that the Spa Sirène girls celebrated its arrival with a launch party! Lots of specially invited guests turned up to The Royal Yacht Lazyjack Lounge to drink, mingle and learn more about this 'miracle' treatment.

lonithermie targets specific body areas to aid circulation, reduce water retention, and ultimately achieve weight loss. The treatment uses an algae clay mask, which contains essential marine nutrients. Strategically placed pads emit faradic and galvanic electrical impulses which are conducted through the mask and stimulate the muscles. The 30 minutes of continued muscular contraction and relaxation is equivalent to repetitive use of the target muscles. This leaves muscles feeling exercised and toned. The electrical impulses also continue working the muscles up to 48 hours after the treatment!

Spa Sirène manager, Geraldine Doherty commented "We have had a very exciting launch of our new tried and tested lonithermie treatment and have had great feedback from everybody invited along. We are all enthused about the up and coming months and working with such a great product!"

hello boys!

If you are a man that realises a certain amount of preening and washing is essential and beneficial - then here are a few of the latest and best products on the market. Thank the Lord that the world has finally realised men get dry patches, spots and skin irritations too. Cosmetic scientists are hard at work using the latest technology to come up with products made especially for men. Gone are the days of having to sneak about using your mum's or girlfriend's products - there are now whole ranges out there designed exclusively for men. Revel in it, and more importantly, wash with it.

- 1 Bed Head Tigi For Men Clean Up Shampoo £6.75
This great product contains sunflower seed & lemongrass extracts which contribute to healthy hair growth.
- 2 Clinique Men Non-Streak Bronzer £11.50
This instant tan is easy to apply and won't come off in the rain, or whilst swimming!
- 3 Rituals Face No2 Gentle Face Scrub £8.90
This brand combines advanced technology with ancient Far Eastern rituals to produce great affordable products
- 4 Cowshed Pocket Cow Bullocks for Men £18.50
This little kit has all you need for a stylish weekend away.
- 5 Dermologica Professional Shave £16.15
Ultra-smooth shaving remedy that forms a cushion between skin and razor for a close, non-irritating shave.
- 6 Aveda Men After-Shave Balm £13.00
Calm just-shaved skin with this cooling, refreshingly aromatic balm.
- 7 REN Tamanu High Glide Shaving Oil £15.00
Fantastic products containing tamanu oil to soothe and nourish the skin.
- 8 Matis Reponse Homme Anti-Fatigue Energizing Gel £24.95
This recharges the skin with energy to help it combat signs of fatigue and lack of radiance.
- 9 Vichy Homme Sensi-baume Balm for Sensitive Skin £11.00
This will immediately calm and soothe sensitive skin, leaving it smooth and supple.
- 10 Clarins Men After Shave Soother £17.75
This protects skin from dehydration and gradually reduces its sensitivity to shaving.
- 11 Decleor Men Essentials Smooth Shave Foam £11.00
This clever gel isolates the skin from the razor to help it glide smoothly over the skin without causing irritation.
- 12 Spiezia 100% Organic Men's Body Oil £20.00
This masculine fragranced oil deeply moisturizes and softens skin. Try convincing your girlfriend to massage it in.
- 13 Dr Sebagh Foaming Cleanser exclusive to de Gruchy £19.30
This fantastic cleanser will keep spots and blemishes at bay, simply use 3 times a week to rid your skin of impurities
- 14 ZO1 Invisible Protection Stick Sport SPF30+ £10.95

Thalgo Micro-Dermabrasion 1 session 1hr approx - £88 (inc. GST)

I was a little apprehensive of this treatment. I had heard horror stories of chemical peels and other intense facial treatments, but was quickly re-assured by my therapist. Micro-dermabrasion varies from salon to salon, but at Les Roches Spa, they use the latest and most advanced Medi-Spa treatment, the 'Thalgo Skin Expert' machine which combines micro-dermabrasion, skinlight therapy and a natural chemical peel all carried out by fully trained staff.

Micro-dermabrasion is aimed at those of you who are concerned with fine lines and wrinkles, sun damaged skin, pigmentation, scarring, spots and blemishes, blackheads and uneven skin or anyone who wants their skin to look and feel more youthful and radiant. Following years of mild acne and hours spent in the sun, my skin was a prime candidate for this treatment.

The treatment involved 3 steps. The first was a mechanical exfoliation of the skin using crystals dispersed onto my skin and removed using a turbo flow system which gave an in-depth exfoliation of my skin. This process was very gentle and effective and felt a bit like being licked by a cat's tongue. Already my skin felt cleaner, my therapist Amanda also concentrated on areas that needed more attention such as my acne scars and where the pores can become clogged.

The second stage involved using a Skinlight system whereby handheld small light units were placed on my face and neck in order to brighten the skin and eliminate any potential redness which may have occurred due to the micro-dermabrasion session. It also means that anyone with sensitive skin can enjoy the benefits of this treatment without the redness that other micro-dermabrasion treatments can cause. The skinlight treatment can also be used to treat acne skins as it destroys skin bacteria that causes acne. This was probably the step that caused me the most discomfort as I felt a slight prickly sensation in my skin however I was told this was normal and the intensity of this increases and decreases depending on the client's skin, with some clients not feeling any sensation what so ever. My skin felt and looked brighter already by this stage.

The third stage was the natural chemical face peel where a combination of plant acids taken from milk, citrus and apples were applied onto my skin. These help to boost cell renewal, reduce fine lines and wrinkles, firm and tone slack loose skin, leaving the skin looking noticeably more youthful. This did not create a problem on my skin, nor did I look red or burnt. A neutralising face mask was then applied to help soothe my skin whilst my therapist carried out a hand and arm massage. A final application of Thalgo sunscreen SPF 50 was applied as I was advised that it was important to keep my face away from direct sunlight for several days following this treatment, as well as using any sauna or steam rooms.

My face felt completely re-newed and re-vamped, and the difference after only one session was noticeable. For the following days after this, my skin began to improve and spots began to disappear. I was advised however, that to see longer lasting results, a course of this treatment would be needed, for example 6 sessions on my skin. This is a great treatment for anyone needing an extra bit of help to make their skin look and feel better. Ignore the negative myths, micro-dermabrasion was a strange yet pleasant experience which delivered the instant results I hoped to see.

Les Roches Spa Gazebo

Personal Training, Health and Nutrition

I've been wanting to tone up pretty much forever. I've joined gyms, signed up for sports and embarked on numerous diet fads in an attempt to get my body into shape. It is not like I have been dedicated to trying to tone up, but it is always at the back of my mind. So I finally bit the bullet and booked myself in for a session with Jane at Les Roches Spa.

When I arrived I walked through the orchard to a pretty gazebo in the garden and was greeted by Jane at the door. After we discussed my past fitness attempts and general health – we talked about my aims and goals; I wanted to focus on my arms and thighs. I wanted to be measured, I wanted results I could see on paper. Other people prefer to have different goals, they just want to feel better in their clothes or they want to improve their general fitness – but that is what is brilliant about having your own trainer, everything is tailored specifically for you.

We did a warm up, mobilization, cardiovascular, resistance training and a cool down & stretch – It was so good to have Jane ready to answer any of my questions and explaining the effects of everything I was doing. I really felt that I was going at exactly the right level for my fitness, improving my weaknesses and promoting my strengths.

I was so glad that I had signed up; Jane gave me the motivation I needed. Having an expert onside to advise and guide me was literally invaluable and I signed up for the programme of 6 on the spot.

Restaurant review Cheffin' fabulous...

Zara gets down with the St Aubin set at the locals' favourite, Cheffins...

What is it about all my friends? If they're not going on some South Beach diet or another, then they're obsessing about body fat percentages and signing up for yet more spinning classes. There's nothing like the threat of a recession to send everyone spiraling into self-denial.

All this healthy eating is playing havoc with my social life. Suddenly nobody wants to come out to lunch with me anymore unless there's mung beans on the menu. Thankfully, Nadia, my gym bunny friend had a suggestion. "Cheffins – great food, great atmosphere – and plenty of sunshine".

Cheffins has been open only for the last 18 months or so, and in that time it's built up an incredibly loyal following, with its legendary Sunday lunch menu booked solid every weekend. Perfectly-cooked local food, generous portions and friendly service – it's a combination that would work well even if Cheffins didn't have a gorgeous courtyard location in the heart of St Aubin. During the day, it's light, cool and airy thanks to the large canopy, and during the evening, it's atmospheric and lively, with color-changing lights and a fun clientele – perfect for sizzling summer suppers.

There's a new à la carte menu full of local food that sounded delicious, and as Nadia and I couldn't make up our minds which starter we wanted, Peter the charming Swedish manager brought us a whole platter of tapas-style tastes from the starter menu. We loved the griddled calamari with lime, ginger, sugar and chilli – it's a real Cheffins classic – tender but tasty all at the same time. Also on our plate were delicious discs of spicy grilled Spanish chorizo, fresh anchovies, olives, and tiger prawns soused in garlic butter. And to mop up all the juices – bread with a homemade tomato and olive dip.

After catching up with all the spinning-class gossip, and some Swedish jokes from Peter, we started on our main courses. Nadia had gone for the Moroccan-spiced lamb kebab which came with tzatziki, a rustic salad, home-made houmous and still-warm-from-the-oven flat bread. Forget those hazily-remembered 'on the way home from the Splash' kebabs – this was two skewers of marinated spiced lamb, chargrilled to perfection and served on a bed of crisp lettuce. She loved it – 'spicy and so tasty, but still healthy' – it's a definite favourite for next time. I'd let Peter talk me into the restaurant's famous Fisherman's Pie – he told me I wouldn't be disappointed – and I wasn't. Full of cod, smoked haddock, peas, scallops and king prawns and topped with creamy mashed potato and sunblush tomatoes, and served on a huge plate – this is a pie fit for one very hungry fisherman. It's absolutely delicious, full of buttery, creamy, moreish flavours – certainly one to reward yourself with after a stint at the gym. If you have space, there's a dish of lightly steamed local vegetables on the side.

You certainly won't go away from Cheffins hungry – they serve generous portions, and at £13.60 each, our main courses weren't overpriced. And if you want to snap yourself up a real bargain, go for the lunch menu which includes two courses for an incredibly-reasonable £8.99. We didn't have room for desserts, although I've heard they're great – and spent the rest of our lazy lunch chilling out in the flower-filled courtyard, swapping stories and sipping coffee.

Cheffins has got the St Aubin's vibe down to a tee – relaxed, friendly, serving good local food in a beautiful setting. With its large seating areas and spot-on service, it's perfect for parties – and picturesque enough for a romantic supper a deux in the courtyard. What's the catch? Only that I don't live close enough to wander in for supper every weekend....

Restaurant review Golden delicious

Kate's boules tournament may have been rained off, but every cloud has a silver lining – or golden in this case – as she makes a fabulous family restaurant find on St Brelade's Bay.

Don't you just love our great British summer? Record-breaking temperatures one day, then it pours the next. And sometimes – when the weather's in a particularly awkward mood – you get everything all in one day... usually the day you've organized a beach party.

We were halfway through the annual Summers family beach boules tournament when we spotted the storm clouds rolling in over St Brelade's Bay. Sweeping up the blankets, boules and Max and Lucy, we made a dash for the nearest shelter. And right at the top of the steps from the beach was the new entrance to the Golden Sands café bar, doors wide open. I couldn't resist it – especially as the kids were halfway inside already, leaving a trail of wet Crocs-sized footprints behind them.

I must admit that Golden Sands had faded into the St Brelade's Blur – what I call all those places you walk past on your way from Pizza Express to the Wayside, but never register. Go on, see how many you can name – there's L'Horizon, Tam's Bar, a Chinese takeaway, a beach shop, a café and ... the Golden Sands Hotel. The hotel's recently had a makeover, turning it into the sort of 3-star you'd expect on Jersey's most beautiful beach – contemporary in a classic sort of way, but still comfortable.

The Café Bar runs along the front of the hotel, with tables set up beside picture windows that slide open, so you get all the benefits of the sea air without having to get sand between your toes. As for the menu, well it's nice and dependable, serving everything from brunchy-type breakfasts and sandwiches to steaks and sea bass, with a children's menu offering mini versions of some of the main courses. The staff didn't seem to notice the trail of sand we'd walked in – and were incredibly friendly, full of recommendations for food and wine. We ordered steak with pepper sauce for frazzled Husband, the seared scallops for me and for Max and Lucy the fish goujons. We were expecting pretty standard fare – after all we'd just dashed into the first place we found – but our lunch turned out to be absolutely delicious. The steak was tasty and tender with a delicious creamy peppercorn sauce served on the side – just what the Husband had asked for. The scallops were plump and juicy, and came on a long plate with spicy grilled chorizo and a piquant finely-chopped salsa. The flavours were fresh and clean and the whole dish was beautifully presented. There was even a bowl of buttery Jersey Royals on the side to soak up the spicy chorizo oil. And surprise, surprise, the childrens' fish goujons were homemade. No Captain Birds Eye for the Golden Sands chef, he'd used lovely portions of unseasoned fresh fish and a light – almost beery – batter to make the most delicious mini fish n' chips I'd ever tasted. I have to admit this was one time I was hoping the children wouldn't finish their food... Thankfully the children's portions were very generous – leaving plenty of chip-stealing chances.

I shouldn't have been surprised by the attention to detail – the Golden Sands is part of the Dolan Hotel Group, which also includes Hotel Cristina and the gorgeous Somerville Hotel with its award-winning Tides restaurant. I found out later that the head chef at the Golden Sands, Chris, had learned his skills at the Somerville before moving on to create his own brasserie-style menu for the Golden Sands. It's obvious he cares a lot about taste – highly-spiced dishes like his Moroccan lamb tagine and smoked haddock and clam chowder sit alongside light and fresh fish dishes like the salmon with asparagus and the pan-fried sea bass.

The attention to detail continued into the dessert selection, with our Movenpick ice-creams arriving in black glass sundae dishes with fresh strawberries, berry coulis and homemade shortbread. They were absolutely delicious – Husband and I even had a tussle over who got the last spoon of Mint Choc Chip.

It made me wonder why I'd always walked past the Golden Sands when the views were stunning and I could sit beside sliding windows with the sea air streaming in, enjoy great service and delicious food. I can't wait to try the platter of calamari with a glass of sparkling Taltarni next time – like the couple on the next table, hotel residents who couldn't believe their luck at finding such a great hotel. So don't let the tourists get all the best views – make the most of this still relatively undiscovered corner of St Brelade's, and try lunch at the Golden Sands for yourself.

“It made me wonder why I'd always walked past the Golden Sands when the views were stunning and I could sit beside sliding windows with the sea air streaming in, enjoy great service and delicious food.”

Cheesed off

Local cheese producers cleaned up at the first World Jersey Cheese Festival - the first ever taste-off to pay homage to cheese made completely from Jersey milk. An impressive seven out of the seventeen categories went to local cheese makers. The judges, including a UK queso-expert as well as homegrown chefs and foodies, did blind tastings of ninety entries from ten countries across the globe: from the USA, Denmark, Sweden, UK, Australia, Holland and Rwanda. That's a lot of cheese.

Classic Herd from Manor Farm in St Peter won four golds - two for their Camembert, one for their peppered brie and one for their new semi-hard cheese, Jersey Cache. The Dairy's new Le Fromage mature cheddar got lucky and unknown home producer, Julie Vétier, got two prizes. All excellent going for an Island that, until recently, had no history of cheese production. If you are wondering who got to go home with the big one, it went to the aptly named Jan Dirk Van Der Voort to the soundtrack of Spandau Ballet.

Strawberries are the only fruit

Absolutely now is the time to gorge on home-grown strawberries. There is not a moment to lose. It is an order - stuff your face with punnets aplenty. These are the most delicious fruit on the planet.

Grown by Joe Freire in St Lawrence, they are totally ripe when they are picked and so swooningly sweet that you will feel weak with desire. It reintroduces you to precisely what a strawberry is. Feast on them now and you won't be tempted by those pointless cold, wet, offerings the rest of the year.

Out of the box

More of a reason to rush for the beach this month as the Potteries have, thankfully and finally, gone west. Their new venture, the Oyster Box, has opened in St Brelade's Bay with, what looks to be the consistent quality and reassuring loveliness that we expect from this legendary Jersey institution.

The Oyster Box is under the expert eye of excellent head chef, Roger White, who has been delivering delicious delights to diners at that other Potteries gem, Castle Green. Passionate about local produce, Roger's team are committed to sustainable fishing and sourcing locally. Roger has lots on the menu that hails from our fair shores - asparagus, scallops, lobster, crab, (the full fruits de mer thing), John Hackett's pork, and, of course, oysters.

Designed with shoreside Sydney or Barcelonetta in mind, the interior - and exterior terrace - look as good as the menu. Morton and Morton supplied the lovely white and turquoise Lloyd Loom seating, creating a relaxed and comfortably civilised restaurant that is perfect for a light lunch and a glass of rosé or somewhere to get seriously tucked in while watching it all going on on the beach. Heaven.

Dressing up

Pared down simplicity is to be recommended. Take a trip to Vom Fass in Voisin's to sharpen up your taste buds. Found in the hallowed halls of Selfridges and Harrods, they specialise in excellent ranges of oils - nut and olive (some so virginal they have never looked upon a man) and delicious balsamic vinegars. Taste everything, but strongly recommended is the delicious olive oil flavoured with lemon, basil and rosemary. Clean, concentrated and utterly delicious, mix it with aged balsamic vinegar. Or try pistachio oil with raspberry balsamic or chilli oil with mango balsamic vinegar - the possibilities are endless. The staff are charming and helpful and will let you taste away and advise on mixing.

Whilst the barbie season is upon us, try Soy Vay Cha Cha Chinese Chicken Salad Dressing for its name if nothing else. An all-natural salad dressing with the nutty taste of sesame oil, it combines pressed soy and sesame oils, vinegar, sugar, toasted sesame seeds, oriental hot mustard and ginger.

Marinate your meat and toss on fresh green leaves or add to a stir fry. Available exclusively from Rondel's Farm Shop.

property profile: two up, two down.

property profile two up, two down.

Situated in a country lane on the outskirts of St John, it's difficult to believe that this beautiful, stylish and spacious home was once a run-down, derelict "two-up-two-down". The owners of No. 1 Oak Villas, Barry and Cindy Wilby, have spent seven long years rebuilding and renovating this 1930's property into their ideal family home.

The project started in 2001, when the property suddenly came up for sale whilst Barry, who is a partner and contracts manager of building company, R.J. Le Sueur, was working on the restoration of No. 3 Oak Villas. "When the house came onto the market, I saw it as the perfect opportunity to take on a challenge of my own. Despite first impressions, I knew the property had really great potential to become a lovely home for me, Cindy and our three daughters. However, when I first approached Cindy with the idea she was very reluctant!"

Due to the extreme state of disrepair, Cindy wasn't convinced that the plans would be a success. After much deliberation, and a promise to the family that he would transform the house beyond all recognition, Barry finally decided to make an offer, which was accepted straight away. The building work began the very next day after the deal went through court. The Wilbys were determined to move into the new house as soon as possible!

Over the next 5 months Barry spent every single minute of his spare time completing the first stage of the development, with the help of his colleagues. Sometimes working up to 100 hours a week, including his daytime job, Barry was permanently exhausted and various setbacks made him almost want to give it all up.

"We experienced a period of extremely bad weather. After digging all of the foundations out by hand, torrential rain and high winds forced all the ground to collapse back in, meaning I had to start all over again. It poured down relentlessly for two straight months, making it a long, uphill struggle. From laying the foundations to placing the final tile on the roof, we were constantly battling against the elements. However, our perseverance and hard work paid off when our new home was ready to move into."

Less than two years after the family settled in, Barry and Cindy decided to begin stage two of the development – building a garage on the side of the house and extending one of the existing upstairs bedrooms. Cindy was concerned about additional building work but this time, it was more straightforward.

"Although we were very content with the house, we felt that we were ready to make further improvements by creating more living space. We knew we really needed a garage for extra storage space and that gave us the opportunity to extend above the new garage. Although Barry was again working through high winds and cold weather, the process as a whole was far less stressful and undemanding. And our youngest daughter loved her new big bedroom!"

The family had a break from major building work for the next couple of years, but that didn't mean a complete rest! "Barry isn't happy unless he has at least one project on the go at any time – he is definitely a perfectionist! However, from 2004 to 2006, we only had cosmetic work done, such as redecorating the bathroom, kitchen and property profile: two up, two down.

bedrooms. The front and back gardens aren't left alone for long either!"

Stage three began in April 2006, taking approximately 6 months to complete, when the ground floor of the property was given an extensive refurbishment. The wall between the existing dining room and living room was demolished to form a large family room. The old kitchen became the new dining room and yet another extension was added to accommodate a generous kitchen, utility room and shower room.

"This development was the most challenging, because simple everyday tasks became a mission! We were living off microwave meals cooked in the make-shift kitchen/diner and Barry was again working day and night under halogen lamps in the freezing cold. But the end result was absolutely more than worth the wait!"

Impressively, Barry crafted the large country-style kitchen entirely by hand, a seemingly endless but undeniably rewarding feat. The stunning, intricate designs of the cabinets are complimented by French terracotta floor tiles and an Aga-style Rangemaster. The vast window that runs the length of the garden side wall and a great roof window allows for ample sunlight during the day, making the room even more light and airy than it already is.

When it came to the décor scheme, Barry and Cindy were definitely in agreement. "The whole house is decorated and furnished with neutral, pastel shades. We love oak furniture, huge mirrors, pictures and lamps, so you will find plenty of these throughout the house! We like old fashioned, retro-style accessories and these also feature through the home, especially in the kitchen and family room. We really enjoy furniture shopping, even now that our home is 'complete', and are always eager to discover one-off pieces."

Impressively, Barry crafted the large country-style kitchen entirely by hand

Though saying that the property is now finally finished isn't entirely true. Barry's itchy feet don't give him much peace, and this year he has been working on stage 4 – the installation of an attractive brick porch at the front of the house and a charming makeover of the back garden, which already features a gazebo and fish pond with a fountain.

“Living on a building site can be trying at times, but the reward at the end of it far outweighs the cons. Barry has well and truly exceeded his promise to us – he gave us his word that he would transform the house beyond recognition, but he has gone above and beyond this. I had no idea such a run-down, empty shell could ever turn into the lovely home we have today.”

in the big seats

Have you been sucked into the vortex that is BB9? Are you mad for your daily fix of the ghouls and the freaks? If you are bored into a coma by all the bitching and the mooching, then focus in on the far more interesting styling of the Big Brother house interior. Check out the chairs in the dining room, designed in Italy by Calligaris. The cool white, acrylic seats with juicy exterior red are available at Homemaker. They are set to be iconic with or without Channel 4. Probably the most attractive thing in the house.

Jersey entrepreneur launches voice payment service

Nick Ogden has been involved in the IT industry since 1985. In 1993, he founded Multi Media Investments Limited, a technology research and development company which launched the Internet in the Channel Islands in 1994. This led to the construction of Europe's first on-line store in October 1994 and the development of the first bank endorsed e-commerce initiative BarclaySquare in 1995. Not content with that, Nick then founded the multi-currency processor WorldPay and led the company through its growth to over 270 employees with 20,000 customers in 120 countries and processing transactions in excess of $2bn per annum. He invented the internet payment guarantee in 2001 guaranteeing Internet transactions for consumers and businesses.

For his next trick, Nick has launched the world's first system and standards for voice-signed financial transactions. His new vehicle, Voice Commerce Group and Nuance Communications this month jointly announce the development of the world's first global system and banking standards that will, for the first time ever, enable the widespread adoption of biometrics-based 'voice signatures' by the global payments and financial services industry.

Nick is the brain behind Voice Transact, a global voice-based biometric payment and financial transaction processing service that can integrate with all current banking and financial transaction processing systems. The system is the first platform for voice signatures that integrates all current standards: Visa and MasterCard Level 1 PCI, ISO 19029, and EU certification 1999/93 for digital certificates within the Single European Payments Area (SEPA).

The deployment of Voice Transact is extremely timely: Harris Research recently suggested that around 80% of consumers are concerned about fraudulent access to their bank accounts. Voice signatures processed by the Voice Transact service could help significantly secure payment transactions and reduce fraud and phishing-related scams, which in 2006, amounted to £428 million in the UK alone.¹ In addition to reducing fraud, Voice Transact will enable financial institutions to tap into new markets.

"Voice Transact 'signatures' will transform the way that banking and financial services transactions are conducted to provide a secure and convenient global standard for worldwide use," Nick says. "We believe that voice-signed transactions and payments will become as commonplace as Chip and Pin because they address key security concerns by delivering convenience, control, and responsibility to the consumer and the substantial efficiencies and benefits to the financial institutions concerned." Voice Transact integrates seamlessly with existing payment and transaction processing systems.

From an end-user perspective, the system is also very easy to use. Consumers are asked to create an anonymous voice signature, which uses a biometric that they then use to "sign" for payments and many other financial transactions. It seamlessly links to VoicePay, the consumer-facing voice-payments system that was announced in May 2007 by Voice Commerce Group.

Voice Transact will apparently enable financial institutions to lower risk, communicate far more securely and efficiently with their customers while providing increased confidence and reductions in fraudulent transactions. Significantly, it also transfers the signing responsibility back to the consumer, in exactly the same way that cheques are signed. Rolling out the world's first voice signature engine, Voice Commerce Group has chosen Nuance, a leading provider of speech solutions worldwide, to enable the biometric element of Voice Transact.

Nick goes on to say; "After I had founded WorldPay and established the world's first Internet payments guarantee in 2001, it transformed the way that consumers pay for goods and services online," said Ogden. "I believe that voice signatures that are underpinned by a global standard will have the same kind of dramatic and positive impact on the security and efficiency of global payments as WorldPay created for e-commerce. Voice signatures will become commonplace, augmenting and then replacing passwords and PINs and because the main authentication tool is the consumer's voice, they're a lot easier for the consumer to use, as they are not required to remember anything."

Voisin

Free legal advice from Voisin

Local law firm, Voisin, has partnered with the Citizens Advice Bureau to offer Jersey residents free legal advice. The free clinics, which launch on 3rd July at the offices of Voisin in Don Road, will be held twice a month at Voisin's offices and at the Citizens Advice in St Paul's Community Centre.

The clinics are aimed at people who may have personal injury claims to pursue as a result of accidents at work or injuries from a car accident, for example. Advice can also be offered to those who are concerned that any medical treatment they have received has been negligent. Voisin are giving all potential claimants the opportunity to explore the avenues open to them and offering guidance with regards the next steps. The clinics will operate on an appointment basis.

Francis Le Gresley, Citizens Advice Bureau, commented: "Nearly all the work of the Citizens Advice Bureau is about helping people to safeguard their legal rights, either through the Bureau's own work or by directing clients elsewhere. Over the last few years the legal profession in Jersey has developed a greater degree of specialisation so it is important that, when we refer clients for legal advice, we adopt a selective approach, choosing lawyers by reference to their particular expertise."

Green post

Jersey Post goes green with its air con Jersey Post is leading the way in the Island by replacing all its air conditioning with an environmentally friendly system. Many air conditioning systems currently use CFCs and other ozone depleting gases known as HCFCs (hydrochlorofluorocarbons) which cause global warming. New legislation is phasing out the use of these refrigerant gases, in particular R22 gas, by 2015.

Jersey Post will be removing all HCFCs from the Rue des Pres office air conditioning systems in June. Head of Facilities, Matt Bougourd said: "Although there is still a while to go before this new legislation begins, we felt it was important to change these systems now to minimise our environmental impact Jersey Post is committed to protecting the environment and reducing global warming and this is just one of many measures we plan to take in the coming months."

ThatcherMacKenzie

A new mover in executive recruitment, ThatcherMacKenzie is a new consultancy offering senior finance professionals and lawyers CI and European opportunities.

The 'boutique' agency has been founded by business partners Dominic Thatcher and Jason MacKenzie, the company deals solely with senior personnel in legal and financial services. Although Jersey-based, the consultancy is designed to serve the Jersey and European recruitment markets, assisting professionals and employers in Switzerland, Guernsey and Liechtenstein.

Experienced executive recruitment professional, Dominic Thatcher, says that the new consultancy will bring a radically different approach:

"Since I started placing lawyers and other professionals in the Channel Islands almost ten years ago, I have watched how the needs of both employers and candidates have changed. There is an increasing demand for a highly tailored, personal approach; and this is not always the case, as the high volume turnover, rather than value, can take precedence over client service".

In partnership with Dominic is Jason MacKenzie, a communications specialist. Jason will be primarily responsible for marketing the consultancy using branding, advertising, PR and other means to develop the business and attract high calibre candidates for ThatcherMacKenzie's clients. Jason added:

"As well as servicing the needs of our clients, the breadth and depth of the opportunities available to candidates is vital....A quality, bespoke service and impeccable standards are our trademarks; and we are already developing a reputation for the permanent placement of senior executives in Channel Island and European financial and legal services."

Jargon Busting

We're here to help. The world of finance is full of words, acronyms and other jargon which often need explaining. To help you along we have put together this 'Jargon Buster' section to help unravel the words of finance.

This month Q-R:

Qualification - Requirements for certification established by a recognised standard setting group.

Resources - Materials, people or equipment and machinery needed to produce goods and services.

Restructuring - When an organisation, business or process is reorganised.

Revenue - Income, particularly for a company.

Salary - A fixed regular payment for work made on a fortnightly or monthly basis by an employer to an employee.

Sector - A distinct part of an economy, society or sphere of activity.

Self-employed - Workers who work for themselves at their main job.

Shareholder - An owner of shares in a company.

Shares - The equal parts into which a company's capital is divided.

Skill - Something you learn and are good at; the ability to do something consistently well. Skills can be developed and improved. Skills can be gained through education, work or life experience. Being skilled at something can also depend on personal qualities; for example, being a practical person as opposed to a creative person.

Skill shortage - A term used to describe a range of different situations where an employer finds it difficult to find an appropriately skilled person. Skill shortage may be used to describe a genuine skill shortage: When employers find it very hard to fill vacancies because there are not enough job seekers with the required skills, or skill gaps: When employers are able to find people but they have only some, not all, of the skills required.

Statistics Unit - is a government department. It provides information on the economy, prices and population of the Island. Website is www.gov.je/ChiefMinister/Statistics/

The Importance of Professional Qualifications

Kerri McMurray

Kerri McMurray, who currently works as a Fee and Billing Executive at Barclays Wealth in Jersey, has discovered how important taking professional qualifications can be in building a successful career in the Finance Industry.

Having left Hautlieu at the age of 16, Kerri did temporary work for a while before joining Barclays Wealth as a Trainee Executive. Not having undertaken A-levels, and without having attained a degree at university, Kerri decided to strengthen her CV by pursuing a professional qualification. She explored the various qualifications open to her and discussed her options with her manager, who recommended that she take the 'Certificate of Offshore Administration' (COA).

"I thought that the COA would prove beneficial to me as I hadn't attained A-levels or a degree," explains Kerri. "There were a number of courses I considered but it was obvious that this one was right for me. It's a really well recognised qualification within the local offshore environment and it was obvious that it would open up many more opportunities for me in Trust work that wouldn't have been available before."

So far, Kerri has completed two modules of the course – 'Trust & Company Accounts' and 'Regulatory Environment' – and she is currently awaiting her results from those exams. She plans to start the next one, 'Introduction to Trust and Company Administration', later this year.

Before she gains the full qualification, she has to complete all five modules. Whilst two of those must be compulsory courses, three of them are optional, meaning that there is a certain amount of flexibility within the qualification as a whole.

Offered through Highlands College, the course has been taught in a three hour session one evening per week. Each module lasts ten weeks, with a weekend available for revision at the end of each. Whilst Kerri has found this reasonably demanding, she has still been able to fit it in easily with work and social commitments.

"Although it's certainly been a lot of hard work, I've been given plenty of support along the way," adds Kerri. "As well as financing my studies, Barclays Wealth have provided me with sufficient study leave to revise. Also, my colleagues who had already completed the course have helped me out by explaining parts that I was unsure of."

Committing to undertaking a professional qualification has undoubtedly put Kerri in good stead. Despite the hard work and long weekends of revision, doing the COA has not only helped her in her current role, it has proved to be a real boost in progressing her career in Trusts. "I've really enjoyed the modules that I've studied up to now," enthuses Kerri. "I would definitely recommend this to anyone wanting to pursue a career in Trusts."

A Foreign Outlook

Claire Harris

If you've got a thirst for travel and exploring different corners of the world, working in Jersey's Finance Industry could well be an attractive option, as Claire Harris discovered.

Having been educated at Jersey College for Girls, Claire spent seven years working in a variety of banks and trust companies, saving money to allow her to realise her ambition to travel. When she returned, she took on a job as a Treasury Dealer at Standard Chartered Bank. Her hard work in helping to make her team a success didn't go unnoticed and she was offered a six month secondment to the Bank's office in Dubai.

This was a great opportunity for Claire to extend her skills as part of the treasury team but in a different and exciting location – something that, with her passion for travel, was a really attractive proposition.

Whilst she was out there, Claire's secondment was extended to two years, during which she helped complete a Structured Deposits project, worked as a Corporate Sales Manager and ran the Foreign Exchange sales desk. It was a challenging but ultimately rewarding period in her career:

"Dubai is growing at an amazing rate and living there was quite an experience – expat life is definitely work hard and play hard," explains Claire. "Learning to work with so many different cultures was a real education. It was hard being away from home but easy to make friends with so many expats in the same position as me. It gave me a chance to expand my banking knowledge and I now have a much broader view on the Finance world and global markets."

Now back in Jersey, Claire is still working for Standard Chartered Bank. As well as satisfying her desire to travel to foreign climes, her experience in Dubai has been a real benefit for both herself and her employers.

career specials

A BUMPER GRADUATE SPECIAL, THIS SUMMER'S GRADUS ONCE AGAIN PROFILES THE WORKING LIVES OF A RANGE OF LOCAL PEOPLE TO SHOW WHAT YOU COULD EXPECT WHEN ENTERING THE WORLD OF WORK.

GENERATION WHY?

THE GENERATION Y'ERS, DIGITAL NATIVES BORN BETWEEN 1979 & 2001, A.K.A. MILLENNIALS, THE GOOGLE GENERATION AND THE MARTINI GENERATION ARE SET TO INHERIT THE BUSINESSES OF TODAY. WHAT MAKES THESE BOSSES OF TOMORROW TICK? WHO ARE THEY AND HOW DO EMPLOYERS ATTRACT THEM?

They are young, university-educated, IT literate, assertive, passionate about new experiences, anti-commitment, and consider themselves to be in great demand on the job market. In summary they work to fit their lifestyles.

Employers, however, see them as massively over-estimating their own abilities, high maintenance, thinking in the short term, fickle and greedy - in short, they are "graduate divas". This melting pot of intergenerational tensions poses significant recruitment and management issues. It's likely that the over 40's leaders need to understand this apparent "me, now!" focus, and that the Y'ers need to understand that the X'ers insights and depth of work experiences are priceless, and up for sharing.

Surveys found that those employers that present themselves as professional, caring and fun have a much higher chance of attracting Gen Y. Have you asked yourself recently whether you are using the right channels for recruiting Gen Y? Did you know that of the Y-ers 75% have a Facebook account, 76% use instant messaging, and 44% read blogs? With such a techno-savvy audience, no prizes for guessing that your company website has the greatest influence in their decisions to apply for employment, and their peer group's opinion counts; you've struck gold if you can get your employees to refer their friends.

Once you have them in the workplace, they may be demanding, they may also battle with the concept of "hard work" but if your company really means what it says about the "war for talent" and being an "employer of choice" what are they doing to retain and engage their new recruits? As far as this phenomenon of Work 2.0, (work in the 21 Century) experts suggest that it's employers who need to catch up. There is a new social contract being drawn up, based on short-term commitment, portfolio careers, flexibility, and ambition.

And it's the future that companies should be concerned about. IBM's study of 400 companies worldwide revealed a deep concern over the current and projected shortage of future leaders, a shocking 75% citing this as a critical issue in their organizations. Given the explosive growth in up-and-coming markets, and the retirement of key people in more mature economies, are companies placing their futures at risk?

It's clear that organisations will need to seek out new and innovative ways to manage talent by broadening their focus to include the entire employee lifecycle from recruitment to resignation. This will involve much greater emphasis on flexible working and technology with remote working, social networking tools, employee generated content websites, and a presence in virtual worlds. It's likely that there will be greater emphasis on targeting talent and reaching out to alternative labour pools, such as older workers, corporate alumni, and home workers.

FACTS:

GENERATION X ARE BORN BETWEEN 1964 & 1978
GENERATION Y ARE BORN BETWEEN 1979 & 2001
WORK 2.0 IS A TERM COINED BY THE CHARTERED MANAGEMENT INSTITUTE TO REFER TO THE PHENOMENA OF THE NEW WORLD OF WORK IN THIS CENTURY.

SURVEYS INDICATE THAT:

22% of Gen Y have itchy feet and are likely to take time off to travel within the next 5 years, compared to only 10% of Gen X.
41% of Gen Y expect to progress rapidly in their current organizations, compared to only 20% of Gen X.
Gen Y hate nothing more than corporate speak. Saying, "pushing the envelope" is likely to leave them with gritted teeth.
28% of Gen Y think that a bonus on signing with a new employer is important when starting a new job.

get the skills you need with a Fast Track programme.

Not sure if a career in finance is for you?
Maybe the Fast Track To Finance will help guide you in the right direction!

Park Personnel, Jersey's largest recruitment agency has teamed up with one of BPP Professional Education to design the Fast Track To Finance course as an intensive full time programme.

It is aimed at providing people like you with the skills to start work in Jersey's finance industry.

Kelly Barden from Park assists trainees and Graduates to find employment opportunities, here she answers your questions about Fast Track.....

Q: What is the 'Fast Track To Finance' course?

A: It's a 'fast track' induction programme offering a choice of one, two or three weeks of full time study in a professional classroom environment. You will come away after a very short period with a comprehensive understanding and knowledge of relevant terminologies and practices involved in trust and fund administration.

Q: What is involved in the course?

A: Depending on which direction you intend taking your career there are three parts to the course to choose from:

- Induction: Overview of finance in Jersey includes understanding Investment and Funds, Trust and Company and Bookkeeping
- Option 1: A focus on and Introduction to Trust & Company Administration and understanding the legislation
- Option 2: A focus on and Introduction to Fund Management

Q: Who delivers the course?

A: Industry professionals and trainers from BPP Professional Education.

Q: What are the requirements?

A: Good communication and numeracy skills are essentials, as is a sound educational background. The key skills you need to demonstrate are:

- A working knowledge of MS Office
- Interest and ambition to join the finance industry
- A 'can do' attitude

Q: 'Why is it a fast track?

A: This comprehensive Fast Track programme is an excellent shortcut to professional examinations such as the Institute of Chartered Secretaries & Administrators (ICSA) and other professional training courses that relate to the fields of Bookkeeping and Investment Administration.

Q: Do employers recognise the course?

A: Yes and so far we have had delegates from ten different companies undertake the course. It is considered by employers to be a chance for new employees to start their roles with confidence and equipped with the knowledge required to start their first job.

Q: Is there a mark at the end of the course?

A: To date the pass rate has been high with all delegates getting at least 60% All those who attend the course are presented with certificates.

Q: When is the next course?

A: The next course starts in September.

We operate in client teams made up of experts from each business area, making the work experience you gain all the more rewarding. As a platform for an exciting and satisfying career, Deloitte is second to none - not least because from the day you join us you'll know that your opinions, achievements and contributions will always be valued and appreciate

DESCRIBE YOUR WORKING DAY.....

BREAKFAST: Porridge with summer fruits.

MY ROUTE TO WORK: I live in Sion so I drive to work. I tend to get grumpy sitting in traffic so I usually come in early! I also find that I am far more productive in the mornings than late at night. I have more autonomy now that I am a senior associate and as a result I am able to structure my day to better suit my lifestyle. Coming in early usually leaves me plenty of time to make it to hockey and football training in the evenings.

MY TEAM: Audit teams are different for each assignment so you work with different people all the time. I mostly work on larger audits which tend to have larger audit teams. This is one of the things I like best about my job - I enjoy working with others. I like the reassurance of being able to try things by myself but to have the option of checking them with someone more senior. This year I'm enjoying being able to answer queries of other audit team members. It's encouraging to realise how much I've learnt since I started and it's satisfying to be able to clarify things for someone else that I once also found confusing!

PLAN FOR THE DAY USUALLY IS: I'm usually in work about 7.30. I prefer to do anything which requires a lot of thinking in the morning so by the time I have lunch at 1 the majority of my work for that day is complete. I always write myself a list of what I need to do and when I'm going to do it. I'm not great at concentrating on one thing for a long period of time and I like the flexibility of being able to switch between a couple of tasks rather than just having to complete things in turn.

WHAT I DO FOR LUNCH: I always take time out for lunch. It gives me a chance to catch up with my friends who are usually working at our other clients' in town.

AFTER WORK ACTIVITIES: I play hockey on a Wednesday night. Last season I also took up football which I play on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On a Friday I usually go to the gym straight after work to clear my head and then see my friends.

EMPLOYER INFO

Altis Partners is a leading hedge fund which uses a proprietary trading system to deliver outstanding absolute returns. Our pioneering trading system is based on scientifically established / meticulously observed principles of market behaviour and rigorous logic. Our portfolio trades a vast array of markets based on sophisticated forecasting and robust risk management techniques. It is designed to identify opportunities and deliver strong performance in a variety of changing market conditions and environments.

Our experienced and professional team is built on passion, exceptional talent and a strong commitment to scientific inquiry and client service.

My name is Matt Michel and I am a researcher for Altis, a hedge fund based in Jersey. I finished university and went travelling coming back to the island in 2005 and started working for a blue chip bank as an analyst. I quickly realised the job wasn't for me, I wanted more freedom in my work and was lucky to find Altis, who had just relocated to the island from London. That was over two years ago now and thanks to the close-knit atmosphere and vitality of the company, I still enjoy each day as much as my first.

A hedge fund is a special type of fund that buys (makes profit from buying a contract when it is cheap and selling when it has increased in value) stocks/commodities etc. but can also sell too, e.g. a hedge fund may believe that oil will drop in value over the coming months and may profit from this by borrowing barrels of oil (e.g. from a large holder like a refinery) and then selling them immediately at current market value. If the hedge fund was right and the oil does drop in value he can buy it back at a cheaper price (giving it back to the refinery) and profit from the price differential. Altis have taken this approach one step further and built a mathematical model that predicts future price movements and programmatically trades markets 24 hours a day. Hedge funds are a dynamic area to work in and Altis is no exception, if like me you want to work in an exhilarating and stimulating environment then apply to a hedge fund, there is no humdrum here!

As a research analyst my work is split into two areas. Firstly, I develop our in-house research software: by programming in C# I build custom analytical tools that are used to analyse patterns in the markets. I had little programming experience before joining Altis but found that I greatly enjoy it and have now become a keen programmer. The second part of my job is using these tools to develop new indicators or improve on existing ones - we may wish to develop certain aspects of our trading or just want to try out a new idea. Testing starts on a small subset of markets and if successful escalates, until eventually it is ready to be included in our trading strategy. It is very rewarding to develop an indicator and know that it makes a positive difference to the company's profits and, ultimately, the money in my pocket at the end of the month!

We offer assurance, advisory and tax services to clients ranging from multinational organisations to local businesses, charities and government, which help to improve the way they work in the short and long-term. From auditing their finances and planning their taxes to identifying the commercial risks they face and assessing the implications of strategic decisions, we work in partnership with all our clients creating leading-edge solutions. We have a range of options which allow you to experience working with PwC, before joining either after A levels or graduation. You can take advantage of our bursary scheme, undertake work experience or undertake industrial placements as part of your degree course.

DESCRIBE YOUR WORKING DAY.....

I am involved with the audit of clients' financial statements, typically within the funds, private equity and trust & company arenas.

Working in an office was not my original plan having worked in the marine industry before starting at PwC. However, as audits are typically undertaken at client/administrator premises throughout the Island, I am not in the same place for more than a couple of weeks before moving on. This means I experience a variety of different environments, with each client bringing new challenges on a daily basis.

A typical day starts with the 10 minute walk to work (passing the bakery for breakfast if need be!), arriving with enough time to check e-mails and a quick review of the tasks for the day ahead before meeting up with the other members of the team (normally 2 or 3) to head out of the office. The teams I work in change on a regular basis with each new audit engagement, this means I am constantly working with new people from a variety of interest backgrounds and places.

Each day varies and I can honestly say that I am constantly learning new skills. Tasks undertaken in one day involve anything from understanding complex transactions to discussing client procedures around expense claims. I meet with all levels of client/administrator staff. Jersey has proved a great place to get a good insight into how some of the leading offshore financial entities are going about their daily business.

At the end of the day there's time for a quick team catch up then we reply to any e-mails that have arrived throughout the day.

Although I work in a team, there's a lot of scope for taking individual responsibility for key areas of the audit and constantly expanding your experience. At busier times, this can involve working some long hours, but the short distance to/from home and being just five minutes from the sea does help!...Providing the tide is right, I usually have enough time to head down to my boat for a quick trip around the bay, stopping off at St. Aubins for a drink or dinner before heading back into town.

KPMG Channel Islands is a member owned firm that forms part of a global network of professional firms. KPMG operates in 148 countries and have over 113,000 professionals around the world. KPMG Channel Islands has offices in Jersey and Guernsey with 240 staff covering both Islands. There are a number of opportunities to train in any one of KPMG's departments, Audit, Tax and Advisory, and to gain the relevant qualification with plenty of support both financially and personally. We presently offer training for the qualifications obtained from:

- Institute of Chartered Accountants England & Wales; (ICAEW)
- Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA)
- Association of Accounting Technicians (AAT)
- Chartered Institute of Taxation; and
- Association of Taxation Technicians.

Once qualified as well as progressing within the Channel Islands firm we can also offer secondment opportunities worldwide. We have placed staff in other KPMG member firms in Bahamas, Cayman Islands, Sydney, Wellington, and London amongst others.

Breakfast is usually a 'what's in the fridge affair?' whilst catching up on the daily news and weather (i.e. do I need sunglasses or an umbrella (or both!)).

My daily route to work is by bus, and gives me time to reflect on the day ahead without having to sound too coherent to anyone but the bus driver. A morning coffee sorts me out, and by gam I am ready to start work.

Having recently switched from audit to tax, my day is now spent in the office with the rest of the tax department, which is one of the largest on Jersey. The work is varied each day, and may consist of: client meetings; putting together tax computations for companies; preparing returns for individuals; or giving advice.

As each day is spent on different clients, I find that it is important to keep track of what needs to be done and when. As a result, I'll always have a to do list to hand which gives a deadline for when a task needs to be done, so that I can prioritise particular jobs.

The tax department is a close, tight-knit team, and I can honestly say that whenever I have a query, or need some help, another member of the team will always go out of their way to assist in showing or guiding me to the answer.

Lunch tends to depend on what the weather is doing, and how rich we feel! So we either hit a café or restaurant for lunch, or try to find a bench in the sun. If it's raining, I'll usually run out to grab some soup and then sit at my desk with the newspaper. As the firm has grown (we've just welcomed our 100th employee), it has been great to make a group of close friends within the office (and not just in tax) to go for lunch and socialise with.

The afternoon is spent continuing through the to do list, and anything else that comes up, until 5:15, when (much to the jealousy of my audit counterparts, who tend to stay later) I finish for the day.

Whether I hit the gym, go to the cinema, out for a drink or head out for some fun at sea, I tend to have a hectic post-work schedule – which is the way I like to be – until it's time for bed, and the cycle starts again!

BDO Alto Limited combines local excellence and international strength as the Jersey member firm of BDO International, the worlds 5th largest international accounting and consulting organisation with a worldwide network of 620 offices in 110 countries. From our office in Jersey, we provide a full suite of audit and accountancy, tax compliance and advisory and general business advisory services to a varied local and international client base.
BDO Alto Limited, 28 – 30 The Parade, St Helier, Jersey, JE1 1BG

DESCRIBE YOUR WORKING DAY.....

No one day is ever the same at BDO, from being out on audits in Jersey, stock taking in Guernsey to flying over to the Mainland visiting clients - it's always varied. My day normally begins with a quick breakfast, a not so quick drive and a long struggle to find a parking space. Once in the office it's then a case of checking emails and stealing a few moments to make a coffee before checking the staff planner. From here I will know what I have in store for my day ahead. The jobs and teams I work on vary in accordance with the clients; I could either be in a large team or just on my own reporting directly to the audit manager. This responsibility was one of the key factors which first attracted me to BDO, where I felt I would have more involvement in all aspects of the audit process. Another aspect was BDO's mix of being a local firm within an international network. Before I started work at BDO I took a gap year travelling so I enjoy visiting different places, the future chance of doing a secondment abroad really appealed to me, something that you wouldn't get the opportunity with in a smaller firm.

One of the aspects of my work which I enjoy is going out to clients. Its great to visit different companies which perform all sorts of different functions, from local trading companies to international investment companies, the nature of the business varies and always provides a challenge. Auditing is all about communicating with people, asking questions, and truly understanding the nature of your client's business, it's not just ticking boxes and agreeing items back to invoice.

I would say the hardest thing about the job is balancing the work with revision for my ACA qualification. When exams are coming up it can be quite stressful doing a full day's work and then going home to carry on my studies. However everyone at BDO is very supportive which certainly makes things easier and I know it will be worth it at the end when I have an internationally recognised qualification.

Come the end of the day if I'm fortunate enough to not be studying, I normally try and keep active, playing squash with either colleagues or friends or in the summer going to the beach – one of the great benefits of living in Jersey.

Volaw Trust & Corporate Services Limited is an independently-owned Jersey trust company that specialises in providing offshore management and administration services to corporate, institutional and private clients.

Our 70 staff work in a variety of business areas, dealing with structures that can be complex on behalf of our international clients. Our aim is to provide the highest standards of service to our clients in everything that we do.

We are closely associated with the Jersey law firm of Voisin whose lawyers provide valuable support to our clients and the work we do. By offering both legal and financial expertise under the one roof, we add significant value to our client services.

Volaw Trust & Corporate Services Limited, Templar House, Don Road, St Helier, Jersey, Channel Islands JE1 2TR

SUM YOUR JOB UP IN ONE SENTENCE.

I perform a variety of general administration for our client companies for the benefit of their employees through Employee Benefit Trusts / schemes and pension plans. Basically, I deal with the salaries, pensions, contracts, health schemes, bank accounts and other financial arrangements for companies and their employees, some of whom work abroad.

THE TEAM I WORK WITH

I work in a young and enthusiastic team, who are also very supportive and patient. When I started at Volaw I had no experience in finance and they helped me to progress in my role as a trainee administrator, building my confidence along the way. Now I have gained some genuine friendships for life.

MY FAVOURITE PART OF THE JOB

When I left uni I didn't want to stop learning and in this job I am learning something new every day, especially about how business works at first hand. I also love the variety in my work due to the differing needs of the clients, and the opportunity to build a rapport with them through regular contact makes what I do a lot more real than just crunching numbers.

WHERE I HOPE TO BE IN 5 YEARS (IF I WORK HARD!)

Still here at Volaw! I hope to gain the qualifications I need to progress within the ranks at Volaw to gain more responsibility.

TRAINING I NEED TO DO MY JOB

When I left uni with my Sports & Exercise Science and Psychology degree I had no idea about finance and office work, but I have been given training in all the areas I need to enable me to do my job. I was not thrown in at the deep end, but I gained confidence with the help and advice of my colleagues as well as the structured training courses. Volaw are very supportive and they encourage you to study to progress in your career. The HR department and my team leader have been really helpful in giving me a clear path to follow.

JOB BENEFITS AND SOCIAL SCENE

I have joined some of the sports teams and I have taken part in a Water Polo competition and the Swimathon and I am training for a marathon relay. Volaw has a great social scene, which really helps to lighten up work and makes it easy to make friends with your colleagues. Oh, the hour-and-a-quarter lunch break is great for meeting up with friends or even going to the beach in summer!

NO IDEA. I WAS PROBABLY TOO BUSY RUNNING AROUND TO WORRY!
FAVOURITE WATERSPORT: WATERSKIING
FAVOURITE PLACE FOR SUNDAY BREAKFAST: AT HOME WITH A MUG OF COFFEE AND SATURDAY'S DAILY TELEGRAPH MOTORING SUPPLEMENT

Breakfast is a protein shake at home, and then maybe yoghurt and fruit when I get to work. I need to eat a big enough breakfast to keep me going until at least eleven o'clock. My route to work is a very convenient but hot half-hour tube ride from 'Clapham Common' to 'Bank'

At the moment on the graduate scheme I'm working alongside a team of four product advisers, who act as an interface between the private bankers and/ or clients and the product specialists. It's a small team but very dynamic and there are always new challenges.

I like to get to my desk and check that day's calendar and my e-mails before anything else. Then I open the FT online and see if there's anything of interest there. After that, I get a coffee and crack on with the day's work.

I usually bring my lunch into work, and then eat downstairs in the staff restaurant or, if the weather's good, eat outside. I really try to avoid having lunch at my desk and eating lunch on my own, and almost never do.

After lunch it's usually more of the same. The job I'm doing at the moment is very varied, so I can never be quite sure what the afternoon has in store. It could be that I have to continue with an ongoing project, or there might be a request for a presentation or a client proposal that I will need to focus on.

Normally after work I'll head home and go to the gym or go to the supermarket and start cooking dinner. I live in an area full of bars and restaurants, so there are plenty of options if I want to go out. Friday nights generally involve a couple of beers in the City or Canary Wharf with friends.

DESCRIBE YOUR WORKING DAY.....

BREAKFAST:

I usually eat my breakfast at work whilst I'm settling in before the busy day ahead. Sometimes, we're lucky enough to have bacon rolls bought for us which is a nice change to cereal!

ROUTE TO WORK:

Normally I walk in to work which takes about 25 minutes on a good day. It's nice to come in fresh on a sunny day – less fun when it's raining.

SORT OF TEAM I WORK IN:

I work in a team of four people who are incredibly supportive and good fun to work with. There's a good mix of skills and experience on our desk, which is handy when I need help with something complicated. There is a fantastic atmosphere and it's great to work together to achieve an important deadline.

PLAN FOR THE USUAL DAY:

Sometimes I will wake up at about 5 in the morning to go swimming training which lasts until 7. From the pool, I head to work so I can grab a bite to eat before the day ahead. Then it's down to work until lunch-time (in between the occasional tea break!). In the run up to exams, I tend to spend my lunch hour completing past papers and previous exam questions for my ACCA qualification. After lunch it's back to work until around 5 when I either go home or back swimming - after which I come home, do a bit of studying and watch some TV or see some friends.

WHAT ME AND MY COLLEAGUES DO FOR LUNCH:

We have a courtyard behind our offices in Castle Street which is really sunny at lunchtime, so generally everyone eats lunch there. We are also near a lot of sandwich shops which are cheap and quick, so they're good if you're having a busy day and need to work through your lunch hour!

SORT OF TASKS IN MY INBOX AFTER LUNCH:

The variety of work is what makes my job interesting. I can have anything waiting for me in my inbox after lunch, from a request to prepare a set of accounts to producing a round of documents to be sent to clients.

AFTER WORK ACTIVITIES:

Working at Sanne gives me the opportunity to get involved with the social aspects of the company. As the majority of our work is conducted in teams there are often plenty of reasons to go for a drink or a meal to relax and celebrate a job well done. Outside of work I swim to a high level, competing at the Island Games in Rhodes last year. Sanne have provided me with the time and support to do this.

SELF PRESERVATION SOCEITY

The Alfa Romeo 147 has been around a while now, and it has always been a pretty car, but in the Collezione edition the designers have made it beautiful.

They've added leather seats, big 17" alloys, dropped and firmed up the suspension, and added a couple of other little touches that make it stunning inside and out.

When you are choosing a new car it really is so often about the character, and the new interior styling of this edition gives the 147 a plush luxurious feel that exceeds most similar cars. It reminds me of something much more expensive, and it makes a big difference. It makes you feel special. No, really! It does! It isn't like just getting into the car – you look forward to being in your little piece of luxury.

Driving the 147 Collezione is fun, with firm sporty suspension, and excellent handling through the corners. The model tested was the 1.6 petrol 5 door, with another delightful design feature – the rear door handles are mounted high up on the door pillars. A small detail but a really nice touch. And in the rear the leather continues, maintaining the comfort and quality feel.

The instrumentation and controls are all pretty straight forward and in the right places. All models have what I think is the one essential – air conditioning, and nice audio controls on the steering wheel for the very good sound system.

“It makes you feel special. No, really! It does!”

A long time ago Alfa had a reputation for unreliability and poor quality, but that is long gone. Over recent years Alfa has undergone a similar quality transformation to Fiat, where they literally stopped production, tore up the rule book, and started again. This shows not only in the build quality, but the design too. It will be really tough to find a better looking car in this category.

Also and unlike most, if not all, manufacturers all Alfas now arrive pre-checked and ready for the customer. They don't need the usual pdi – (pre delivery inspection) that traditionally is required before new cars are handed over to the customer, where they are cleaned up, checked that everything is working. That is all done after leaving the factory at a purpose built centre. Just another element in the whole quality control process.

So, if you want something gorgeous, luxurious, and well priced, take a look, you may well be surprised.

Ace Café Racer

Triumph Thruxton

I was just too young, or just not quite old enough, depending how you look at it to fully appreciate the era of café racer motorcycles, but the imagery sticks in my head, and I do remember hearing with awe the “ton up” boasts of those reaching 100mph on a bike, the Sixties’ equivalent of warp speed and at that time of rebel and rebellion a pretty amazing feat.

And Café racers were the bikes and riders, often leather-clad Rockers, who used to congregate and ride between transport cafes – with the main aim to reach the ton as quickly as possible. The bikes were modified for speed rather than comfort, with slim tanks, low handlebars and footrests mounted further back than usual, giving a prone streamlined riding position.

There was even a game – they’d play a record on a café’s jukebox and the challenge was to start when the record started, get to 100mph, turn round and get back before the record ended. Doesn’t sound that hard except it seems to have originated at the Ace Café, a popular transport café of the time on the old north circular road in London (it’s still there) and involved a 3 mile round trip to the Hangar Lane roundabout and back, and in those days you were lucky if a song lasted more than two minutes. But they’d do it.

And now, with Triumph’s regained prominence within the motorcycle industry, the café racer is back. Thankfully not with the oily, leaky, machines of the Sixties, but with a new twenty first century version; The Triumph Bonneville Thruxton.

Superficially almost identical to the café racers of old, the new Triumph Thruxton is everything that café racers were, and modern bikes now are.

In fact, it is easy to wonder at first glance if you are looking at a new bike or a restoration. The styling is perfect, the engine seemingly (but not) the same parallel twin of the originals, the seat, the tank, all just right. Even the fuel injection is concealed in fake carburettor housings. But like so many things you compare to a memory they are in fact not the same, just very similar, and in this case, much, much better.

“It’s everything that café racers were, and modern bikes now are ,,

The Thruxton is modern and sophisticated but it retains perfectly the character of the Sixties. With the low handlebars and swept back footrests the riding position is low and very comfortable. The beautifully balanced 885cc engine pulls extraordinarily well, is smooth and almost totally vibration free. The Triumph gearbox as usual is superb, as is the steering and suspension.

Riding the Thruxton brings back what motorbikes used to feel like. It feels effortless with a delightful connection with the road that feels composed and confident. Sweeping corners want to go on for ever. You feel like you should be wearing goggles and appearing in an old black & white photograph mounted on the mantle piece.

The Sixties were a time of huge change, after the hardships of the post war years, the casting off of the old conformist ways. And to some, with that bloom of change came the need, regardless of whether there was a cause, to be a rebel.

iPhone, youPhone...

The news is out. The latest gadget from Apple, the iPhone 3G, is due to hit shelves on the 11th July. It's a shame we still haven't had the opportunity to purchase the first one on Jersey. This time around, they will be going on sale for half the price, I expect those of you who bought yours on Ebay for over £200 will be sitting uncomfortably right now.

With the original features of the iPhone, there will be additional fast wireless technology, GPS mapping, support for enterprise features like Microsoft Exchange, and the new App Store. And for £100, it's going to be a very tempting purchase.

Workout for outdoor fitness

Steve Longstaffe

One of the great advantages of the spring/summer season is the ability to do some outdoor training, and utilise the higher quality air. It is possible with very little equipment, to give your body a very rigorous workout by using the natural terrain. This month I will be showing you a number of outdoor leg exercises I do with my clients, as well as a good plyometric upper body exercise. Do however be careful outside as some obstacles are made of hard surfaces.

Plyometric Hurdles (Press-up, Squat Thrust and Jump)

With this exercise you can either use mini hurdles such as shown here, or any other marker to jump over. Begin with two press-ups, then two squat thrusts, and finally jump sideways into the next section you have marked out. Repeat as many times as necessary in a row until you require a breather.

Hops

An exercise which requires balance as well as power. Standing on one leg use a hurdle to hop over, once again landing on one leg. Once you improve you can try side hops, as well as back hops.

Squat Jumps

You can use any reasonably large step or kerb for this. Simply from the squat position, use the power of your legs to jump up onto the step and land in the squat position. Then jump backwards and land in the same position ready to begin again.

Slope Sprint

If you can find a good slope somewhere, these are great for sprinting up, to both test the legs, and the heart and lungs. Use the way back down to the bottom for your recovery. A slow jog will do, then you can really push yourself on the way back up again.

Steps Sprint

Finally for the fairly fit amongst us is the step sprint, the same rules apply as in the slope sprint, but be extra careful when coming down. As you get fitter and your stamina increases just add in an extra set now and again to really test yourself.

Enjoy the good weather and I will be back soon with more training tips!

If you're interested in getting a programme call in and see Steve at Fitness First or give him a call on 07797 886575

Get Fitness Qualified with Highlands College!

It is a really exciting time for health and fitness in Jersey. Gone are the days where people had to go off island to get qualified in fitness or add to their existing qualifications. Highlands College Sport and Fitness Department is now offering a wide range of CYQ (Central YMCA qualifications) health and fitness courses for people working in the industry. Courses are being run on both weekdays and weekends to cater for all types of people. CYQ is an internationally recognised qualification and on qualifying, gives people valuable points needed to be on the Register of Exercise Professionals (REP'S).

Mike Heys, 40, Firefighter with Blue Watch
CYQ Level 2 Gym Instructor

How has your course helped you?

"With the Fire Service you have to do an annual fitness test to keep the job, and we had to pay a lot of money to send people over to the mainland to get qualified as a Physical Training Instructor. Whereas now we can come and get this great qualification from Highlands.

Most of the guys in the Fire Service like to train in their own time, but I'm there for tips, training advice and motivation whenever they need it. So it has not only helped me stay fit for my annual fitness tests but also helped me and my colleagues at work."

Gillian Journeaux, 48, Former Police Sergeant
CYQ Level 3 Personal Trainer Course

Who would you recommend this to?

"Anybody can do this course, even people with injuries, like myself. I had to leave my job due to a chronic shoulder injury, but on the course I've been able to work around my injury; I have to be better at instructing on moves I can't demonstrate.

This course is great for people who are interested in fitness, it will not only help with their own training but if they take it up for a career then they have a brilliant qualification to support their experiences"

Tonya Bressat, 38, Full Time Mum
CYQ Level 3 Personal Trainer Course

What motivated you to sign up?

"My son was starting to grow up so I was looking to get back into work. I had been looking into secretarial jobs, but I wasn't having any luck, and I wasn't really sure it was what I wanted to do. Then a friend, who knew I liked fitness, suggested I should be a personal trainer, and as if by fate the next day in the paper I saw an advert for this course!

I had always been interested in personal training but I wasn't sure it was something I could do, but I went for it and it has built up my confidence and knowledge so much I'm now really ready for it!"

ARNIE INVESTIGATES: SEGWAY RALLYING

Ever a fan of good, clean fun, Arnie took a ride down to Les Mielles this month to try and master their Segway Rally. Can somebody so top-heavy overcome the Segway's ability to stay balanced? Read on to find out more...

You know, if I can give you one bit of advice, it's to always be wary of robots. But that said, these Segways aren't really even robots. But if they WERE robots, I think they'd be quite friendly. So don't worry.

If you've not heard of Segways by now then you've probably been living in Saddam's old holiday home, but just in case you have been hiding from humanity here's a quick run down as to what they're all about: Put simply, it's a electronically powered two-wheeled vehicle that uses some kind of clever computer technology connected to a gyroscope that keeps it upright at all times by regulating the speed and direction of the motors attached to each wheel over 100 times each second. So what does this all mean? Well, if you lean forward it propels you forward, if you lean backward it slows you to a halt and then makes you travel backward and if you lean the steering left or right... you guessed it, you turn in that direction. "So what Arnie?", you'll probably think - and here's the really clever bit, the clever bits inside never let you lean too far and so you can't fall over. Genius!

I must confess, at first I felt a bit unsteady. The instructor made it all seem so easy and it's completely different to anything I've travelled on before so the first two laps were spent learning how to ride. Soon enough though, you become more accustomed to the way it moves and the fun really begins when you're going as quick as you can. You soon forget that you're effortlessly balancing on 2 wheels!

At first the course seemed quite small but it really is perfect - tight and twisty in places but with some good straights to try and overtake on but I found that the best place to pass is on the wide corners - far away from other riders and the tyre walls to eliminate any chances of crashing these expensive machines or getting yourself hurt.

Of course, safety helmets are mandatory and full body protection is supplied for children. Little Timmy has to be at least 8 years old to take part and it definitely seems like a great excuse for parents to show their kids who's boss whilst having plenty of fun!

The Segway Rally takes place at Les Mielles Activity Centre & Golf Course just down from The Watersplash and off the Five Mile Road. It costs £6.50 per session for adults or £5.50 for children aged 8-12 but can be combined with other activities for a small price increase. Childrens parties can also be catered for - to find out more call 485984.

Governator verdict:

ROJO goes al fresco

Since September 2006, Rojo has been serving some of the finest cocktails to discerning Jersey drinkers and now boasts a menu of over 50 hand-picked cocktails and a bar stacked with over 200 different premium spirits. Such has been the popularity of the cocktail bar and tapas lounge that constant requests from our clients for our drinks at outside events has led us to form a new venture called "Rojo Al Fresco".

The aim of the new company is to provide chic and stylish cocktail drinking environments outside of our permanent residence at 10 Bond Street. These boutique drinking spots are aimed at both corporate clients and the general public. To date we have already taken our temporary bars to clients such as BNP Paribas, Standard Bank and to the 40th birthday party of one of the island's wealthy businessmen.

The latest addition to our range of bars is a mobile version of our cocktail bar at No 10 Bond Street. A bespoke build for Rojo Al Fresco, the unit arrived in the island on May 19th from the UK and will complete its final fit out over the next two weeks. As a replica of the original bar on Bond Street, it will boast a 16 foot red mosaic tiled bar, a 12 foot back-lit opaque bottle stack, circular ball-chain chandeliers and a covering of retro wallpaper on one side to complete the look.

The plan is to utilise the new mobile bar in conjunction with stylish furniture to provide a contemporary Mediterranean / Moroccan drinking environment reminiscent of the type of outdoor bar you might find in Barcelona or Tangiers. The furniture that will accompany the bar will consist of low-level tables surrounded by Moroccan leather pouffes with a Moroccan candle lantern on each table. This will provide an aesthetically pleasing setting during daylight that will become visually stunning during dusk and into darkness. The bar also comes equipped with a small DJ booth which can be used to play mellow background music, particularly at sunset or a full DJ party set.

Quiksilver Family Surfabout Weekend

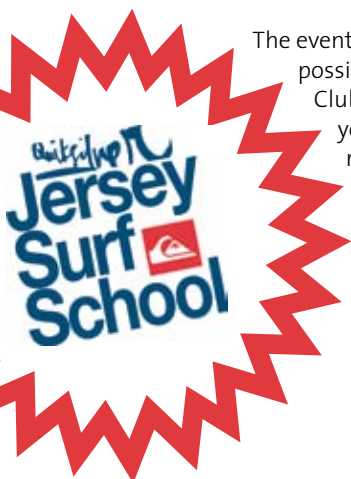

at the Jersey Surf School

This weekend is set aside purely for families to head down to the Jersey Surf School and learn to surf for free. Families are offered a 1 hour surfing lesson which covers all the basics on the beach and then they head into the water to give it a try. There will be accredited surf coaches and beach lifeguards on hand throughout

A BBQ will be available throughout the weekend on the beach courtesy of the Watersplash Beach Bar and Diner.

Bookings only, and available on a first come first served basis. Availability for approx 80 families throughout the weekend. Maximum of 4 per family, and only one lesson per family. Each family is given a discount voucher for equipment hire that can be used anytime during the season.

The event is trying to raise as much money as possible for the 'Jersey Special Gymnastics Club'. The Club helps a lot of disabled youngsters on the Island and is entirely reliant on donations and the help of the families that support it. The club will be down at the Watersplash collecting from families that have enjoyed the free surfing and BBQ and would like to make a donation... however this is entirely voluntary!

Great performances were given by the seven Jersey motorcycle racers who competed at the Croix en Ternois circuit in France, at an event organised by the British Motorcycle Racing Club.

In the Rookie 600 class Chris Hamelin continued his championship challenge with two well ridden 3rd places. It looked like Sunday would see Hamelin go one better, as he had a great start and ran in 2nd place for four laps. Unfortunately third-placed Max Hunt pressured him to use too much throttle exiting Virage Magguy, resulting in Hamelin being high-sided off his bike. Heavily bruised, the doctor prevented Hamelin from competing in the last race.

Riding the only V-twin machine in the class, Gary Hotton produced consistent good results of a 6th and two 7th's. The last race on Sunday was wet and this helped to negate the power disadvantage his Ducati had against the more powerful in line four engine bikes. This, combined with very confident riding from the start of the race, saw Hotton scythe through the other riders, jumping from 7th at the start to 4th by the end of lap three. But coming out of Virage du Pont on lap six the rear wheel lost traction and he crashed, fortunately without injury.

The first race on Sunday was run in torrential rain, with standing water on many of the corners. Luke de la Cour was chased all the way by Nick Daghorn, who led de la Cour for one lap, his previous off road riding experience helping in the treacherous conditions. De la Cour finished 9th and Daghorn 10th. The last race was also wet but with no standing water. Luke de la Cour finished off his best weekend in Powerbikes with another 2nd place, all the more creditable as he had started from 9th on the grid.

Jersey swimmers bring home 11 medals at Jeux des Iles

The KPMG/JASA swim team recently competed in the Jeux des Iles Games held in Guadeloupe, West Indies. The young team of 9 swimmers aged between 13 and 16 did very well in their individual performances, with five swimmers winning a total of eleven medals and Tom Gallichan achieving a new games record. Overall the Jersey team was placed 10th out of 16 Islands and presented with the Fair Play award, this given to the most disciplined and accommodating team.

The games are due to be held in Elbe, just off the coast of Pisa in 2009 and JASA and KPMG look forward to being able to offer the opportunity for up and coming young swimmers to represent Jersey.

On behalf of the local aquatics affiliated to JASA, the President, Gail Le Clercq expressed appreciation to Larry Catterson, Chairman, KPMG, Channel Islands for engaging in a four year sponsorship which will continue to provide opportunities to those involved in aquatics.

Sport Guinea Pig Ladies Water Skiing Lessons

Jersey Sea Sport Centre
20mins £20
Book a course of 6 and pay for 5!

I had always wanted to give water skiing a proper go, but just never seemed to get round to it. Whenever we had been out before, water skiing on holiday, the kids had always gone first, then proceeded to get cold and grumpy in the back of the boat, resulting in us returning to shore before I ever had a chance to get my skis on! I have very happy childhood memories of trying to water ski off the Cornish coast and so when I was given the opportunity to give it a go again for Gallery I jumped at the chance.

I dropped my children off at school and headed down to Le Haule Slip where I met my instructor Aaron and was given a wetsuit. Aaron and I headed out across St Aubin's Bay in a speed boat; he then explained all the theory to me and it was then just a case of getting in and having a go! I started off using the boom and to my delight, and my instructor's surprise, I managed to get up first time! So he then moved me on to using a short rope, which I could also manage. It was then time for the real thing.

Aaron handed me down a handle and left me bobbing in the sea, whilst he drove the boat so my rope was stretched out to its full capacity. He then shouted "READY?" and I had to reply "HIT IT", because if you say "GO" it can sound like "NO!". I was trying to follow the instructions he had given me religiously, and it paid off, I was up! It was fantastic to be flying along the water on such a nice day.

I can't wait to show off my new found skill to my children, and I was really pleased the next day when I felt my arms ache a little; water skiing is fantastic to tone the arms!

DJ Yoda hits the castle

The force is strong with this one.

It's not often I'd admit to listening to Rick Astley. I actually saw him on VH1 the other day singing 'Never Gonna Give you Up' and specifically noticed the lyric 'We're no strangers to love, you know the rules and so do I'. Rick sang this with no sense of irony whilst wearing a matching stonewash denim shirt and jeans combo with a Simon Cowell style belt level. No stranger to love looking like that?! It was obviously easy to get laid in the 80's. Anyway, I digress. The point being, I'm no Rick Astley fan. I do listen to it occasionally though when I throw on DJ Yoda's 'How to Cut and Paste 2'. It's infectious the way that he cuts and scratches such a myriad of tracks and samples to come out with one of the most fragmented yet cohesive uplifting mixes of music you can imagine. Last time Yoda rocked the Splash I was fortunate enough to see the man himself at work behind the decks and watch the crowd respond to his every scratch.

Yoda is one of Britain's most admired and original DJs, having built a reputation as the only DJ to single-handedly inject humour into UK hip-hop. Admired for his originality as well as his sense of fun, he is possibly the only DJ in the world who can fill a club cutting George Formby with Jurassic 5, or 80's pop with New York rap. Tipped by Q Magazine as one of 'The 10 DJs you must see before you die', and voted alongside DJ Premier as 'One of the Top Three DJs in the World' in Hip Hop Connection magazine, DJ Yoda is no ordinary scratch DJ. Born in London, Yoda represents a new brand of mix-master who will play any kind of music to make people dance with a hip-hop set that can take the audience from underground rap to TV themes, to nursery rhymes, country, soul, reggae, drum and bass, 80's pop and back again. It's the unique style that has led Yoda to perform alongside Basement Jaxx, Amy Winehouse, Mark Ronson and Fatboy Slim and been invited to DJ and VJ at a huge range of top level events. If you appreciate all styles of music and want to check out one of the world's most entertaining DJs.

Catch him performing at Theory Offshore at Elizabeth Castle, 16th August alongside Mylo. More DJs to be confirmed.

It's hard to imagine how the Scottish-born singer-songwriter, known to her family as Kate, could do any better. Within six months of its February 2006 re-release, 'Eye to the Telescope', Tunstall's gritty, soulful debut, was certified gold in the U.S., and her music — a provocative sonic mesh of heartfelt pop, rootsy electric blues, and left-field alt-folk — became omnipresent all over radio, television, movies, and the Internet. Thanks to the multi-media exposure of its three singles (the Grammy-Award nominated "Black Horse the Cherry Tree," "Suddenly I See," and "Other Side of the World") 'Eye' is now certified platinum in the U.S. and quintuple platinum in the U.K., with worldwide sales exceeding 3.5 million copies.
