a thing of beauty

Jay-Z had a Black Album, The Beatles had a White Album; we're not really down with instruments or Cubase so we've stuck to producing a Red Magazine. As the old riddle goes 'What's Black and White and Red all over?....a newspaper'. It's called the 'newspaper riddle'. Well, we're a magazine and it still applies. I've always preferred answering it with 'a sunburnt penguin' myself, which probably says a lot. Red is certainly an emotive colour; passion, war, tribalism, death, money, 'beauty' for Russians; choose your association.

It's actually amazing what you find out in the course of researching a theme.

Did you know, for example, that the most common red food colourings are made by crushing beetles? Does that mean vegetarians shouldn't eat red food? Perhaps...especially tomatoes, that were originally thought to be poisonous. There's a load of red influenced content this month. We contrast of island life to life on the red carpet, examine the history of the 'oldest profession' in Jersey and the cars that will keep you away from the red line without compromising on style.

We've got red for the home, red gadgets, and events from the red dot crew. Talking of events, thanks to the hundreds of you that joined us at our Gallery Kidnapped 'Malice in Wonderland' New Year's Eve event. We were amazed by the costumes, the thumping beats and musical skills of Clique and Rocksteady and the talents of 'Jersey Elvis' who brought in 2010 for 600 of us with a memorable rendition of 'Suspicious Minds'. Priceless.

You can see pictures in the paparazzi pages.

It has been a pretty hectic start to the year for Gallery. Our feet still haven't touched the ground since NYE. We've just launched our www.places.je property website and Places magazine will be fortnightly from February for all you house hunters. You'll also shortly be able to get your hands on this years Appetite eating guide. We have a lot planned for Appetite in 2010 so watch this space.

Gallery are not at home in a 'real' office, with real phone lines (we've had one handheld we had to throw about for the last 5 years) that won't be engaged all the time so we're here for you pretty much 24/7. If you're planning on giving us a call bear with us though, we're still learning how to use them.

We look forward to bringing more in every way in 2010

London to Jersey

For three and a half years, I was paid to interview some of the world's biggest stars on the red carpet. Brad, Tom, Katy, Renee, SJP, Madonna. And if that wasn't enough, I'd be handed two VIP tickets, known as 'a plus one', to watch the film with the celebs, and attend the hugely glitzy, no expense spared after party at an achingly trendy London venue.

This is life as a showbiz reporter in the capital. And it wasn't just the film premieres that were jaw-droppingly glam. I remember being shuttled to a very famous racecourse in Sussex on the Orient Express just for the opening of a new wing. Once there, my mum (my plus one on account of Bryan Ferry being a fellow invitee) and I were offered the obligatory glass of champagne, told to help ourselves to a cashmere jumper from the new Ralph Lauren store, and settle ourselves on the front lawn to watch a thirty minute flying spectacular by the Red Arrows. 'Do you really regularly cover events like this?' my mum asked on the Orient on the way back while tucking into our three-course meal.

And the answer was yes. As a young journalist, if you're prepared to put in hard work in the frighteningly competitive and ruthless world of showbiz, then the spoils can be great. But it is incredibly hard work, and that's what many people fail to realize. For example, when you go to a premiere, you don't just saunter onto the red carpet waiting for the celebs to come to you and answer your every question. You're placed in a press pen where you have to jostle with some of the most ferocious journalists on Fleet Street to get to the front so you at least stand a chance of putting a question to the actors. And at the after party, it is never about standing around just enjoying the canapés and cocktails. You know you have a limited time to grab the celebrities and get a story from them to pitch to your editor the next day, before they either leave (the

Celebrity

A-list only ever stay for about half an hour – the D-list are the last to leave, but nobody ever wants to interview them) or they go and hide from the hacks and hoi polloi in the VIP room.

This then presents a new challenge, as you're forced to gate-crash it. I remember being at the after party for the Phantom of the Opera film, where all the stars were placed on a raised platform at the back of a cavernous hall, protected by barriers and bodyguards. I batted my eyelashes at a waiter, who agreed to let me in to the catering section from where I could access the back of the platform, unseen, by climbing onto it and sliding underneath the barrier. I felt like James Bond in a skirt.

This may seem excessive to some, but it meant I was able to go home with two or three exclusive stories, as I was the only journalist to access the VIP section. And it was important to constantly prove your worth, because if you didn't, there was a queue of hungry hopefuls waiting right behind you.

So what am I doing in Jersey? Two years ago I decided to trade it all in to retrain as a broadcast journalist. I'd always wanted to, but I didn't really have the confidence to go for it until I'd undergone a few bruising years as a showbiz reporter. Believe me, it's a job that toughens you up and knocks you into shape. And that's when I went begging for a job at Channel 103.

My life now compared to how it was in London couldn't be more different. I still do showbusiness news, but I also cover political, sport, financial and, most importantly, community stories. It was a real buzz during January's snowy weather to know islanders were relying on 103's news bulletins to find out if schools were closing and buses running.

There's less glitz and cash in my life now, but I'm happier because I'm pursuing my dream. And without wanting to be a toady (journalist term for a sycophant), the team, especially my editor, Giulia Heath, are terrific at teaching me the tools of my new trade. This is worth much more than the red carpet lifestyle in London.

There's lots of stuff written and illustrated in Gallery. That's what a magazine is really... here are some of the people

And new to the Gallery Family....

Emily Hutchins design grad

Emily edited and designed this month's 'Quoted' page.

Emily recently moved to Jersey having spent the last 4 years in London studying for a degree in Graphic Design. She is now gaining experience in the 'industry' world of graphic design. She is currently training for a marathon which she says 'I will never do again!'

Favourite red thing:

"My car!"

Louise Hannah writer

Louise writes about her former life grilling celebs on the red carpet and reviews Bento Sushi for us.

Louise is a reporter and newsreader for Channel 103. She started life as a showbusiness reporter in London before moving to Jersey to retrain as a broadcast journalist. Her favourite thing about Jersey is being close to the sea, her least favourite thing is that the Sunday papers sometimes don't make it.

Favourite red thing:

"Tomato ketchup. My mum says I turn into a ketchup fiend when I eat it, because I always drip it everywhere..."

Gary Kelly designer

Dropped into the thick of it, Gary's been hammering Creative Suite for us this month.

After training at a local ad agency, Gary decided that a break was required and he set off to travel the world. Ten months and nine countries later, Gary landed back in Jersey and took up residence as Gallery's newest graphic designer. Working at Gallery? "Awesome". Gary can't stand early mornings, but he doesn't mind late nights - which is good because he's already had plenty of those in the run up to deadline for this issue!

Favourite red thing:

"Has to be Man United! I'm a huge fan."

MONDAY 1ST FEB

The Visitor

McCarthy's follow up to The Station Agent, tells the story of how the life of 60-something professor, Walter Vale, is radically changed for the better when he discovers two immigrants living in his New York apartment. A thoughtful drama of humanity, subtle humour, and a marvellous performance from Richard Jenkins in the lead. Certificate: 15. 20:00 - 22:00 / £15 / Jersey Arts Centre, St Helier / 700444

TUESDAY 2ND

Scherzo Brass

Since its foundation in September 2006, Scherzo Brass - a brass quartet based in Greater Manchester - has enjoyed a remarkable run of success and has established itself as one of the leading young ensembles. After winning the title of British Open Quartet Champions in 2007, as well as first prize in the prestigious Philip Jones Ensemble Competition 2008, Scherzo Brass has been in demand nationwide and enjoys a busy schedule of performances. 20:00 - 22:00 / Jersey Arts Centre, St Helier / 700444

WEDNESDAY 3RD

James Sherwood - At The Piano

One of British comedy's finest young comedy writers, James Sherwood visits The Attic as part of his first national tour. As well as being a regular contributor to shows like The News Quiz, The Now Show and Look Away Now, James is also the creator and chief writer of Radio 4's new topical panel show I Guess That's Why They Call It The News. James's live show combines musical skill with diamond-sharp wit, and has already seen him make appearances on shows like 4 Stands Up as well as four sell-out Edinburgh runs. Awards: Sony Award Nominee 2009, Best Comedy (writer, The Now Show). 20:00 - 23:00 / £10 / The Attic, Jersey Opera House, St Helier / 511115

FRIDAY 5TH - SATURDAY 6TH

3rd Jersey Winter Beer Festival

Ales from the Crypt

Come along and choose from 40+ ales and ciders, many of them in the Winter style (strong, dark, moreish), and some Cider. Live 6 Nations and music Sgt Pipers on Saturday. Advance tickets only, no tickets will be available on the door, tickets are available from the Arts Centre box office. Strictly over 18s. Please drink responsibly. £15 / St. James Church / 07797 751500 or visit www.camra-jersey.org.je/festivals.htm

FRIDAY 5TH, FRIDAY 12TH, FRIDAY 19TH & FRIDAY 26TH

Artist in Residence at The Elms

The National Trust has invited Virginia Colback to be their winter Artist in Residence at its headquarters in St Mary. Virginia is currently working on a series of paintings of Jersey dolmens and feels that her work complements the work of the National Trust for Jersey in the way it celebrates Jersey landscape and promotes our cultural heritage. FREE / Bus 8 / 10:00 - 16:00 / The Elms, National Trust for Jersey Headquarters

FRIDAY 5TH

Jeff Lang

Jeff Lang returns to the Watersplash to astound all live music lovers. Fresh from his UK tour, and soon off to Japan before heading home to Australia, Jeff will lead us on a journey of incredible guitar skills and vocals that just rock your soul. This, as always, is a performance not to miss! Annie Law, Rick Jones and Justin Thorne are providing support. 21:00-01:00 / £8 / Watersplash Beach Bar and Diner / 482885 / Tickets are available from The Watersplash, White Label and The Wharf Bar / Strictly Over 18s.

TUESDAY 9TH & THURSDAY 11TH

Bugsy Malone

Les Quennevais Secondary School presents Bugsy Malone. New York, 1929. A war rages between two rival gangsters, Fat Sam and Dandy Dan. Dan is in possession of a new and deadly weapon, the dreaded 'splurge gun'. As the custard pies fly, Bugsy Malone, an all-round nice guy, falls for Blousey Brown, a singer at Fat Sam's speakeasy. With an all Les Quennevais School cast, armed with custard instead of bullets and belting out some superb songs, this is entertainment at its best! £15 / Jersey Arts Centre, St. Helier / 700444

THURSDAY 11TH & SATURDAY 13TH

The Holly & The Ivy

Award winning Middle Ground Theatre Company bring you their highly acclaimed production of THE HOLLY AND THE IVY. Set in a Norfolk vicarage on Christmas Eve 1947, the vicar's family gather for the festive season. Peace and goodwill radiates from the warm-hearted elderly vicar, cared for by his young daughter. But with the arrival of two irritable aunts and an errant daughter the emotional veneer is skilfully peeled away. As skeletons tumble from closets and stones are turned over, family members are forced to confront their regrets and secret anxieties. Even the lovable vicar is not immune to the stresses and strains of a normal family life. 20:00-22:30 / £15 / Jersey Opera House, St. Helier / 511115

THURSDAY 11TH

Legend: 'The Bob Marley Experience'

Legend are seven great musicians and singers dedicated to the life and music of the late, great Bob Marley. This dynamic band, led by the charismatic Michael Anton Phillips (Cheesy) has a pedigree second to none. LEGEND'S two hour show covers the very best of Bob Marley's timeless classics. 20:00-02:00 / Free / The Drift Bar, The Royal Yacht / 720511 / strictly over 18s

FRIDAY 12TH

The World's Wife

A new stage version of the acclaimed poems of Carol Ann Duffy that imagine the wives' perspective of famous men through the ages. From Mrs Faust and Frau Freud to Queen Kong and Mrs Midas, this delightful show slices through history and myth, whilst also casting an astute glance over the modern world. Laced with dark humour and acerbic wit, this passionate exposé will enthral lovers of Carol Ann Duffy's poems and newcomers alike. 20:00-22:00 / £15 / Jersey Arts Centre / 700444

Club Kamikaze

With the support of Jersey Arts Trust and the IQ Apple Store, comes the latest instalment of Club Kamikaze at St Helier's Live Lounge. Club Kamikaze, showcasing up-and-coming local acts as well as established international names, is organised by local promoter and music journalist Chris Bell, and takes place on Friday 12th February. A mouth-watering line up for Valentines weekend includes: Totally Enormous Extinct Dinosaurs (UK), Pevin Kinel (Velofox), The Midnight Expresso, The Experience, The Hats DJ set + Kamikaze DJs chris@beathappening.co.uk / £6 / Live Lounge, St. Helier

SUNDAY 14TH & TUESDAY 16TH

Moonwalk to Seymour Tower

Take a walk on the sea-bed. Explore gullies, cross sand bars and rock pools to Seymour Tower and discover Jersey's very own wilderness area in the company of local guides. Learn about the history of the area, or just enjoy the chance to be in a wild and remote place. The area is full of wildlife and has a rich maritime history. The exact departure point and time is confirmed at the time of booking. Expect to get wet - perhaps to the knees. Due to the huge 40ft tides you should not venture into this area unless you have local knowledge.

£12.50 / Reservation is essential as all walks are in small groups / 07797 853033 or email info@jersey-walkadventures.co.uk

SATURDAY 21ST - SUNDAY 22ND

The Wave

At a German secondary school, a classroom project on fascism runs chillingly out of control. A gripping, unsettling thriller and a cautionary tale for our times. Certificate: 15 / 20:00-22:00 / £15 / Jersey Arts Centre, St. Helier / 700444

TUESDAY 16TH

Jersey Electronic Organ Society

Enjoy a relaxing evening listening to a variety of music played on the electronic organ by visiting artists. The concerts are held at The Gardeners Tea Rooms at Ransoms at 20:00hrs and admission is £7.00, this includes 'Sweet Treats' All new members, friends and visitors are welcome. £7 / 20:00-00:00 / The Gardeners Tea Rooms, Ransoms Garden Centre / 851247

MONDAY 15TH - FRIDAY 19TH

Pirates!

A band of marauding pirates will be invading the Maritime Museum throughout the half term week. Learn to swash your buckle, search for buried treasure and crew a cannon with the scurviest sea dogs around. Join a pirate Captain and his shipmates on the Spanish Main and discover the secret of Davy Jones' Locker. Sponsored by Sinels.

Maritime Museum / 10:00 - 16:00 / 811043

WEDNESDAY 17TH - THURSDAY 18TH

The Chippendales

After a sold out run at the Edinburgh Fringe and a special one-off appearance at London's Shepherd's Bush Empire Theatre, the Chippendales return for the first time in over five years with their latest production: The Ultimate Girls' Night Out! Prepare yourselves for a non-stop party of live music, audience interaction, dancing and fantasy that will excite your senses and leave you breathless. Grab your girlfriends and make your way to the hottest party in the UK. Millions of women can't be wrong! 20:00-22:00 / £25 / Jersey Opera House, St. Helier / 511115

SUNDAY 28TH FEBRUARY

The World's Wife

An event to help raise much needed funds for the people of Haiti is being arranged. A one day festival of music under the banner of Help Haiti CI will be held at the end of February. The line up is still being compiled but many top local artists such as Brave Yesterday, Kevin Pallot and Lloyd Yates will play as well as the amazing Nerina Pallot. Other high profile artists have been approached to see if their schedules make it possible for them to appear.

The event is scheduled to take place at Fort Regent in Gloucester Hall - although details are still being finalised and 100% of the net proceeds will go to Haiti. A website www.helphaitici.com has been established to keep the public informed of this and other satellite events as information becomes available. The website will also allow people to donate directly and will carry information regarding the distribution of funds. The intention is to share the funds raised between the Bailiff's Jersey Disaster Appeal, a mainstream charity and perhaps one longer term project. Organisers are also hoping to hold a silent auction during the event and are looking for prizes to be donated from local companies and individuals, these will be promoted in advance via the website. If you or your company have a service, trip, meal, ticket, prize or anything that someone might want please email haitijerseyou@gmail.com.

Red Lamps Shining Through the Fog

words: Leon Fleming

It's the oldest profession in the world. The history books are full of it. It features heavily in the Bible. It's everywhere. It could only be one thing. Prostitution.

Societies are made up of layers that can be seen all around us, all of the time, and of layers that we choose not to see. It is possible that even here on Jersey, just under the surface of our everyday lives, there is prostitution of all kinds going on. And though we may squint to render ourselves blind to it, still it exists, waiting for the moment when we opt to dip our toes into the forbidden and taste the flesh of its fruit.

Jersey has a very rich history of prostitution. Although it was in the 1600s that acts pertaining to loose living and ungodliness are first mentioned in the law, it is the nineteenth century that provides the most compelling evidence of the island's twilight hours being alive with the colours of vice. Ladies of dubious morals made their way over from France to take advantage of the prosperity the island was enjoying, often covering their true reasons for being here by claiming to be 'milliners' by profession. And it makes sense, I suppose, that where there are barracks and ports, soldiers and sailors, there are also going to be on the road between them, which happened to be Pier Road, ladies that walk the night, houses of ill repute and rent boys, all vying for the coins in the purses of men away from home. As integral as prostitution was to the life of the island in the mid-nineteenth century there was a man, George Le Cronier, the then Centenier of Saint Helier, who decided to take it upon himself to clean up all of this iniquity. On Sunday the 19th February 1846 he had been to a very smart house, Mulberry Cottage, well known for its disrepute, and had arrested eleven of the young ladies who resided there. The following Sunday he intended to arrest the master and mistress of the house. On that fateful night, on entering the well-kept establishment on Patriotic Street, he was stabbed by a carving knife in the stomach by the Madame of the house, Marie Le Gendre. Centenier Le Cronier died the next day of internal injuries, and Marie was transported for life to New South Wales, Australia.

In contrast to this incident, around fifty years later a protection racket being run by the police was uncovered, where officers would escort gentlemen to the many houses of ill fame and would provide security from the penalties of the law in return for sums of money.

By 1910 prostitutes could be found waiting in anticipation of customers in many of the island's hotels and small restaurants. And if you were on the lookout for a rent boy you could head towards Westmount and La Collette and find there exactly what you were looking for.

Over the years those dark places of anonymous meetings change as the urban environment evolves, but if you were that man in the mid-1930s then you might have ventured to the vicinity of Sand Street and have found yourself a very accommodating lady companion standing out taking in the night air. Or for something possibly more sophisticated, or at least indoors, you could have become a guest of the 'Striped Monkey' on Cross Street.

Things were to change somewhat though when the German army of the Nazi machine invaded and occupied our island on the 2nd July 1940. All those bright-eyed blond boys full of excitement and close to exploding with pent up sexual frustration would be giving all kinds of things away to their captives for a taste of genuine Jersey hospitality; and they weren't interested in cream teas and black butter. As a result this 'horizontal trade' involving the frightened, hungry, curious island girls and these handsome, powerful and homesick boys were banned. Sexually transmitted diseases running rampant through the barracks could, if not kept to a minimum, lose the invading force their hold on power. Any soldier needing to be treated for having acquired a 'dose' would have allowances cut, and yet these young men, afraid of what their symptoms would lead to, flocked to be treated.

The answer was to stop all of the illegal prostitution on the island by opening up their own brothels, just as had they had in Paris and the rest of occupied Europe. They brought over their own 'professional ladies' from France and set them up in the quaint hotel 'Le Maison Victor Hugo' under the medical supervision of the German hierarchy. Still syphilis ran wild and specialist clinics had to be set up, including one at the Merton Hotel.

On signing the surrender to the British, the German command on Jersey pledged in the articles of surrender to provide information on the whereabouts of all the brothels on the island and details of all cases of venereal disease.

Unlike its big sister the United Kingdom, the laws in Jersey regarding issues of sex and indecency have until relatively recently only been regarded in common law. The charge of keeping the island clean of these dark sins have been that of the Jurats, and is included in their oath. It wasn't until the 1970s that an amendment to statute law made criminal acts of the procurement of workers for female prostitution. Laws pertaining to the living from immoral earnings do not seem to be included in the law here as they are in the UK. It is interesting to find that acts of indecency between men in public, which would cover rent boys plying their trade out in the open, as well as incest and bestiality are still not provided for in statute law but are made illegal through custom within the bounds of common law.

The answer was to stop all of the illegal prostitution on the island by opening up their own brothels, just as had they had in Paris and the rest of occupied Europe.

And how about now; today? Surely it is all gone now; all fallen into the sea and swept out like a faded embarrassment of what once was. It is true there is no obvious and documented organised sex trade here, and with the laws here being quite vague in this area, other than odd isolated individual cases there haven't been any prosecutions, no red light zones cleaned up and no brothels closed down. It is true also though that Jersey has a very real, and miserably hidden heroin problem.

Heroin addiction makes it very difficult to hold a 'proper' job, and as state benefits are not high enough in value to afford a comfortable existence, a way to supplement income must be found. This hunting for extra cash almost always means criminal pursuits of some kind, generally various forms of theft. Everywhere else in the world prostitution would also be an attractive option, so there is no reason to think that it is not the case here as well.

In 2006 the states police were issued with investigating rumours, which have still never been corroborated, that men frequenting a certain bar in the centre of St Helier were being propositioned by some very friendly young ladies of eastern European origin. The unverified stories continue with the new friends leaving the pub with some night-time naughtiness in mind, only for the male to find himself the subject of another proposition, and this time by some rather large and frightening men intent on extorting the money from his wallet in payment for 'services rendered'.

I believe the police looked for evidence in the stories by sensitively questioning known consumers of 'personal services', but as yet have been unable to make these tales into anything stronger than gossip.

Such is the phantom-like existence of prostitution on the island. Nothing is concrete, all is conjecture. Rumours and hearsay murmur scandal, but only those in the know hold the keys to the secrets they guard, and they are reluctant to give them up.

If I were to want to indulge myself in a rendezvous with a young woman or a young man, and had it in my mind to offer a little monetary remuneration for my gratification, how could I find out where I should hang about to satisfy my needs?

I don't know. It is well hidden here, so well in fact that at first thought it seems difficult to imagine anyone being able to make a living from it.

I could wander where the whispers draw me of course. I could take a walk around the area of Minden Place and hope to find the brothel there that I have heard mention of, but whether I would find the portal into this wonderland without a guide is questionable. Or I could promenade the coastal road at Havre Des Pas in search of rent boys; but would they be there to receive me on cold and windy nights in February or are they only a seasonal attraction? Are they really rent boys at all, or are they just innocent young men also out for a stroll by the sea?

We all feel better choosing not to see the symptoms of degeneracy in society, viewing only a portion of the world we live in. Untroubled. Unaffected. Disconnected. However, if we were to give up this pretence and accept the reality of the human condition we could have a small sex industry that is regulated, free from disease, and kept safe from violence and drug abuse and alcohol misuse. Sex workers could possess rights in their employment as in all other professions, and they too could pay income tax and social security, making them useful and respected members of our society. Prostitution is an ever perpetuating cycle of supply and demand; while ever there are citizens who want to pay for sex, there will be prostitutes; and while there are men and women willing to sell sexual services, there will be clients eagerly queuing up, cash in hand, to buy a piece of the thrill.

A is for...

words: Mean Kitten

Everywhere I go at the moment I'm confronted by big red hearts-and it's not because I'm a cardiac surgeon. No, it's because we're fast approaching St Valentine's Day-the patron saint of restaurants and flower shops everywhere. Soon, most men will be guilted into scurrying around paying out extortionate sums of money for bunches of red roses and the type of lingerie that only looks good on drag acts.

So yes, Valentine's Day does make me quiver, but not with pleasure or anticipation. And it's not because I was cruelly shunned by the objects of my affection either (well not all the time). Nor was I one of those wild-eyed crazies who sent themselves flowers and cards to the office to try and con the rest of us that they had some kind of 'relationship' going (yeah, try imaginary). No, red hearts and flowers are a painful reminder to me that one Valentine's Day long ago, I allowed myself to be talked into a blind date with a workmate's brother. I say blind, but although I had never met the guy, I'd seen him in photos and he looked reasonably attractive. My friend Alison assured me that he was also very funny, intelligent chatty and friendly. In her words he was 'just perfect' for me. Alison lied. Her brother, Jonathan, had just broken up with his girlfriend, and was, if not exactly suicidal, far removed from the hilarious funster I had been led to expect.

That night, there were four of us crammed round the smallest restaurant table in London; Alison and her fiancé, (a monosyllabic dullard with not even one interesting thought rattling around his big empty head), me and Mr Glum. Embarrassingly for me, every time a waiter had to squeeze past our table, my knees were almost massaging his genitals. Not quite the introduction I'd been aiming for, but it was the only thing he didn't complain about all evening. All around us the walls were festooned with big feather-trimmed hearts and plastic roses, and vomit-inducing love songs were oozing out of an ancient stereo. How could love fail to blossom in such a magical setting?

I was relieved at first to see that he had no alphabetical issues with drinking, so maybe it was all just automatically classed under 'a' for alcohol.

It wasn't until she'd dragged me to the loo that Alison said she felt that she should mention Jonathan's 'problem' with food. I thought she was going to say he was allergic to shellfish, or God forbid, a vegan. But no. It turned out that he could only eat any food on his plate in alphabetical order! What? Apparently, he'd had this little idiosyncrasy since he was a child and unbelievably (to me) nobody had thought to beat it out of him. Anyway, it would be appreciated if I didn't comment on the way he rearranged and ate his meal. Had his parents force-fed him too much Alphabet Spaghetti? Who knows, by this stage I was already looking for the fire escape.

When the waiter came to take our food order I actually had to clamp my hands over my ears like a hyperactive 5 year old high on E numbers, so that I didn't laugh like a hyena over his menu choices. I was relieved at first to see that he had no alphabetical issues with drinking, so maybe it was all just automatically classed under 'a' for alcohol. He certainly grew more talkative, which was unfortunate because he was one of the dreariest people I'd ever encountered. All he whined on about was his ex-girlfriend, who in my opinion was probably sat at home with a magnum of champagne toasting her own lucky escape. So I could only amuse myself by watching him push piles of food around his plate. He separated everything into neat little groups arranged like the numbers on a clock face, and chowed his way through it in strict alphabetical order, to the accompaniment of LeAnn Rimes squawking 'How Do I Live' in the background. How indeed.

The alcohol had evidently loosened more than his tongue. As he helped himself to more booze, he pushed the table out, flung his leg up onto my lap and asked me to push up his trouser- leg. He'd rashly decided he 'liked' me (possibly he'd been misled by my unintentional massages) and wanted my opinion on the scars from the metal pins he'd had inserted into his leg following a gruesome motorbike accident a few years previously. Jesus help me, I was torn between wanting to stick a fork in his eye and opening my own jugular. When he briefly left the table, Alison leaned across and confidentially informed me that 'Sandwiches are a minefield for him'. But I'd had enough of them all by now so I told her 'No, a minefield might horribly maim or kill you - what he's frightened of is biting through a slice of cheese and ham at the same time!' I think my lack of sympathy killed stone dead any plans she may have had for a double wedding right there and then.

Of course all this happened some years ago, but I can still hear her silly voice in my head emphasising that her freaky brother was 'just perfect' for me. So what the hell was it about me that made her think that? I'm still hoping it was just desperation and that she was trying to take advantage of my caring, giving nature... Grrrr...I still hate them!

SeeingRed?

It's amazing what some people think passes as professionalism these days. We're a pretty placid lot at Gallery so when we made a few polite calls to a new Jersey magazine to refrain from filling our lovely stands with their lesser quality (sorry, but it's true) magazine we were pretty aghast to receive this mail back. So much so that we thought we'd share it with you and see what you think...

Quite a shock really, as you can imagine. We'd been nothing but businesslike with these people. As we've been growing and getting more and more people involved with Gallery over the last five years we'd hope that you're as much into it these days as you were when we were a little whippersnapper back in the day. Our focus has never really waivered.

Er OK.....It ain't an excuse for this mail...

As none of us really know this guy it seems a bit out of order to be this personal. It's pretty insulting to you lot, who submit your words, photos, time and effort every month, to call it tripe too. To call it tired when it's so diverse is also a bit odd, especially when the magazine this guy 'edits' has very little to edit?

Ah.. that's why, he doesn't read Gallery. No wonder he's so uptight!

OK, this is the bit that really gets us, a good old physical threat to end the mail. They say the pen is mightier than the sword and you'd assume that someone who gives themselves the title of 'editor' would favour the former. Apparently not. We're sure he's super 'ard if he's making such threats so we're bowing to his superiority in this case.

We're sending in 'Rex' (see below).

typos and grammatical errors: We can't help but point them out - force of habit. It does happen to us all but as an 'Editor' you think he'd have noticed.

We're publishers, not fighters so we're sending Rex (named after the master; Napoleon Dynamite's Rex Kwon Do) to fight the good fight.

As Rex Kwon Do would say; 'You think anyone wants a roundhouse kick to the face while I'm wearing this badass costume? Forget about it!'

Robbers blow away the competition

Darwin Awards: winners revealed

Two bank robbers have been declared winners of the 2009 Darwin Awards after they blew themselves up by using too much explosives while trying to crack open a cash machine. Wendy Northcutt, the founder of the annual awards, declared them the 2009 winners of the Darwin Awards, given to those "doing the most to improve the human gene pool by removing themselves from it".

The bank robbers just edged ahead of their main rival Shawn Motero who was stuck in a traffic in Florida when he needed to answer a call of nature. He got out of the car before jumping over a concrete wall to find a more secluded spot. Unfortunately, the 30-year-old had not realised he was on a bridge, and fell 65 feet to his death. Award organisers said it proved you should "look before you leak".

a considerable withdrawal

In third place was the first ever woman to be nominated for the award. Rosanne Tippet drove her moped into a flooded river, despite the warning signs. She was rescued by police, but died after jumping back into the river in an attempt to recover the two-wheeler.

to celebrate her 67th birthday, but wanted to do something unique.

"Someone said 'Do something you're good at', so I made a card with my 'pen'," he said. "I've just run out of stuff to do for her birthday."

Mr Kleis said it took about three hours and four loads of liquid manure to create the message. "I was going to put a heart out there after the happy birthday, but I ran out of manure," he said.

Burglar 'fried chicken and had a haircut'

short back and sides... and your jewellery

Jose Nicolas DeGracia, 27, of Easton, Pennsylvania, is charged with burglary, criminal trespass, theft and criminal mischief, reports the Morning Call. Householder Grace Knaus called police after arriving home just after 5pm to find a man she had never seen before sitting at her kitchen table. Police say the man appeared to have visited every room in the house, going through dresser drawers and cupboards. Family photos had all been laid face down on their shelves. Police found cans of empty and partially consumed beer throughout the house and said some chicken had been fried in the kitchen. The intruder had even taken a shower, cut his hair with some clippers and dressed himself in clothes and boots belonging to Ms Knaus's grandson.

Blood bank offers beer for blood

A US blood bank is offering beer in exchange for blood to try to encourage more people to donate. Donors, who have to be over 21, are given a coupon entitling them to the free pint when they donate blood through the 'Give blood, get beer' scheme. The blood centre says that the scheme has worked so well that it is being expanded. The coupon can be redeemed at a number of local pubs and restaurants - although, in the interests of health, they have to wait at least four hours after the donation has taken place before they can give the person their beer.

Health club warns aliens will eat 'fatties' first

One of Britain's biggest health clubs has been criticised for putting up a sign warning "fatties" they would be eaten first by aliens. The sign, which features a green alien, read: "Advance health warning! When the aliens come, they will eat the fatties first. It then goes on to urge people to take up a special offer to join the health club and spa. But it prompted an angry reaction from some people in the local community, with residents saying it is offensive to those struggling with their weight. Health club manager Jason Eaton said: "The alien campaign has been developed as a tongue in cheek look at the fact that people, generally, over the Christmas period do put on a little weight. "We do not intend to cause any offence to anyone."

Say it with manure

An Iowa farmer has given his wife her 'crappiest' ever birthday present. Dick Kleis used a manure spreader to spell out "HAP B DAY LUV U" in a field visible from the living room of the couple's home. Wife Carole was surprisingly happy with the gift of more than 50 tonnes of dung, reports the local Telegraph Herald. "He's done weird things before for birthdays," she said. "But maybe not this weird." Mr Kleis did also take his wife out for dinner and a movie

Kung fu monkeys turn tables on trainer

'I said get me bananas goddamitt.'

A Chinese man who trained monkeys martial arts to entertain shoppers was shocked when they turned the tables on him. One quick-thinking monkey saw his chance when Lo slipped - and caught him with a perfect flying kung fu kick to the head. The rest then joined in the affray.

Hu Luang, 32, who caught the incident on camera, said: "I saw one punch him in the eye - he grabbed another by the ear and it responded by grabbing his nose."

"They were leaping and jumping all over the place - it was better than a Bruce Lee film."

At one point the monkey trainer grabbed a staff to hit the monkeys, only to find himself facing a stick-brandishing monkey that cracked him over the head. Lo only managed to get the monkeys under control by tangling them up in the rope that had been used to stop them running off.

The China Trek & Tiger Challenge!

A fantastic way to support Durrell

Durrell is offering you the opportunity to take part in two exciting overseas challenges in 2011! These inspirational expeditions will be a once in a lifetime experience encountering the most spectacular sites, landscapes and wildlife along the way. Whether your aim is to do something different, get fit or simply visit new places and make new friends, you can achieve all of the above while helping Durrell raise much needed funds to allow it to continue in its mission, to save species from extinction.

There are two trips for you to choose from: The Tiger Challenge (minimum sponsorship £2575 + £395 deposit to pay) is a mountain biking challenge which takes place in Rajasthan, India in February 2011 and The Great Wall of China Trek (minimum sponsorship £2650 + £295 deposit), taking place in May 2011.

Durrell is working in conjunction with Charity Challenge, a reputable overseas challenge company who employ thoroughly trained local guides in order for challenge costs to truly benefit the community. In keeping with the company's responsible tourism policy, both trips are based on a maximum number of 30 people and so are not invasive to the local communities. For every participant taking part in an overseas challenge, Charity Challenge offset the emissions of their international flights. Durrell will support you every step of the way to help you reach your fundraising target, as well as organising training days in preparation for the big trip. Sign-up today and set yourself a challenge like no other for 2011!

Gallery Cracks Animal Myth no.4.

Piranhas will strip a cow to the bone in under a minute

Why You Know This "Fact":

When it comes to dead Americans, we're big fans for Teddy Roosevelt; without a doubt one of the most awesome people ever to live. Basically, any factoid about Teddy's life contains enough testosterone to kill an ox, and this is no different.

The year was 1913, and Teddy was touring the Brazilian Amazon. At this point, his reputation for badassery had become globally recognized, and the Brazilians realized that to impress someone like Roosevelt, they had to step it up a notch and show him something incredible. So before he came, they roped off a small lake and tossed a couple hundred piranhas in without any food; by the time Teddy arrived, the fish were starving and completely crazy.

When the guides lowered in a juicy cow, the piranhas went after it like tiny guided missiles and reduced it to bones in a little less than 60 seconds. Teddy was quite impressed, and wrote about the ferocity in his 1914 book Through The Brazilian Wilderness, which is how everyone else learned about it (when Teddy Roosevelt tells you something, you pay attention.)

We like to imagine that as soon as Teddy returned to the US, he started breeding his own piranhas in an attempt to finally find an animal that could stand up to him in a fight. Like all other such attempts, this was doomed to failure from the start.

Plenty of cartoons and short stories took Roosevelt's report and ran with it, portraying any body of water rumored to have piranhas as a cross between a hot tub and a garbage disposal. Dip your toe in, on come the boiling piranha jacuzzi jets, and off comes everything but bone. Hollywood picked this myth up in 1978 and created Piranha and Piranha 2, which [SPOILER ALERT] outfitted the piranhas with wings!

Why It's Not True:

Piranhas are really freaking good at eating, there's no question about that. In a large school, they specialize in efficiently organized group-eating that utilizes a system of constant rotation. They're also very fast eaters but, even with all of that in mind, they're still very small, and they still dine almost exclusively on other fish. (For a fish, growing dependent on eager-to-impress Brazilians lowering cows into your home isn't the most reliable dietary plan.)

Yes, despite their fearsome faces, piranhas are just scavengers and most of which are vegetarian. If you're wondering, technically, in cases of extreme drought, schools of piranhas can turn into those swarms of pointy teeth we've all heard about. But (and this is a big but) every animal faced with starvation will do the same thing. In Roosevelt's case, the group of piranhas was much larger than an average school and the Brazilians intentionally starved them.

Also, like all animals, piranhas are inherently predisposed to want to impress Roosevelt. You may act all above piranhas, but if Teddy Roosevelt walked into your house, you'd eat a live cow too if you thought it might make the big guy smile.

EYE SPY

The Sale Shopper

Habitat: Raking through the 70% off rail, ready to pounce when she sees a bargain.

Signature Behaviour: Queuing outside Next at 5am, elbows bristling, ready to barge through the doors first.

Distinctive Markings: An armful of carrier bags and a pair of sharp elbows.

Natural Enemies: Other sale shoppers

Mating Call: "I saw it first!"

Becky can't help the fact her pulse quickens when she sees a red sale sign. She's spent all of December trying to find the perfect gift for everyone else, and finally the January sales are all about her. So what if it brings out the sales fiend in her...

The truth is that Becky's spent all year cutting back, and now she's not going to let that fat woman in front of her in Dune grab the last pair of leopard-print heels. So she fights her way to the front using all the tricks she's learned from years of bargain-hunting. And Becky takes the hunting bit literally. First there's the retail recon. Spending the last few weeks of December scouring the shops planning all her purchases. When she finds something she likes, Becky tucks the one in her size right at the back of the rail, or double-hangers it under a size 20 so it won't disappear before the mark-down. Then on sale day, she has to make sure she's at the front of the queue, ready to barge through the doors 'hard, fast and strong', regardless of how many skinny sales assistants she sends flying. Sale rails are there to be ravaged, sharp elbows keeping rival shoppers at bay, and when she's found her bargain... she pounces - grabbing, tearing, snatching, hair-pulling, anything to make sure she gets her hands on it first. And if someone's got there first, they'll suffer the same fate as the woman who got to that fake fur gilet first in Warehouse last year. Becky accidentally-on-purpose stood on her foot - hard - and while the poor woman was hopping about in agony, Becky swiped the gilet and made a run for the cash till.

And if you were stuck in the consumer catastrophe when the tills went down at New Look on the 27th December, the truth was it had nothing to do with the fact there were long sales queues as the poor frazzled assistants tried to tell you. It was all because Becky accidentally pulled the plug out as she was commando-style crawling behind the rails trying to get to that sequined shrug she'd hidden ten hangers back.

Sales signs are like a red flag to the bargain hunter, and Becky absolves her guilt at all her spending by reasoning that actually, the more she buys the better. After all, carrier bags make great weapons - especially the ones with sharp, reinforced corners, and she's heading into Accessorize next so she'd better be ready. There's something about the atmosphere of the sales, especially in the hangover-fuelled frenzy of the first few days after Christmas, that turns everything into a blur, and before she knows it, Becky's home, with her credit card as battered and bruised as her ankles. As she unpacks her purchases, she'll discover that the cushions she bought don't quite match the living room décor, and the skirt she fought for has a weird ruffle at the back that makes her bottom look huge. And she's forgotten she already has a juicer that she bought in the last January sales, and it's still in the cupboard in its packaging. Maybe next year she'll stick to online shopping.

a big date for the diary!

Plans are now well underway for The BabyBarn Family Show 2010, taking place at the RJA in Trinity on Saturday 8th and Sunday 9th May 2010.

Our big Family Show will be informative as well as indulgent with unique goods and services on display from Jersey and UK companies, including birth options, education, fashion, latest trends, entertainment, nutrition and education.

With dedicated fun zones, stage presentations, Café and a charity 'seconds' Sale where you can pick up gorgeous, pre-owned clothes and toys, The BabyBarn Family Show 2010 has something to keep everyone entertained over the entire weekend.

So if you're a parent, mum-to-be, grandparent, childminder, little one or slightly bigger one pop the 8th & 9th May in your calendar now for this event which cannot be missed!

Visit www.babybarn.je/show for more details and sign up to the BB newsletters to keep up-to-date with the latest Show news.

Shop till you drop!

With warmer weather just around the corner (we hope!) we can't wait to start buying our little ones some cute new clothes. This month both AxleJr @Voisins and a new 'baby' shop in AxleJr, at the top of Queen Street with a dedicated Mamas & Papas floor, will be opening and we will definitely be queuing up to see what's in store.

Could your little one be The Face of BabyBarn 2010?

Everyone knows that their little darling is gorgeous and thanks to BabyBarn, you now have the chance to prove it! BabyBarn has partnered with Christian Keenan of CKP Lifestyle to find The Face of BabyBarn 2010. Christian's unique relaxed photographic style results in truly beautiful images and provides the perfect partnership to find The Face of BabyBarn. Christian and his talented team are offering up to 60 lucky hopefuls a free photo shoot during the week commencing 5th April 2010 at dedicated time slots. All sessions will be shot at a location of the parents' choice - in their home, garden or favourite island spot. Once completed the photos will be available for entrants to view via a private online gallery. You will then simply select your favourite pic and enter it to become 'The Face of BabyBarn 2010'. What's more you'll also receive a 12 x 8 inch unframed copy of your chosen photograph. A panel of three independent judges will then have the tricky task of whittling the entrants down to just 12 favourites who will be announced, along with the winner, by Annabel Karmel MBE at The BabyBarn Family Show 2010 on the weekend of 8th and 9th May 2010.

Visit 'The Face of' section on www.babybarn.je/show to find out more.

It's Alive!

Warning – the following article contains nudity, swearing and numerous references to bodily fluids. If you are under the age of 18 (or are under 18 but already a parent, in which case congratulations for being able to read at all), then you might not want to read on unless an adult is present.

Last year, I sent a simple yet utterly awesome text message to my friends. It read:

"Lady X pregnant.

Holy Sh*t.

Repeat: Holy Sh*t."

We had made the discovery (with typical good timing) en route to a wine-tasting holiday in Bordeaux. Lady X had woken up following an overnight rest stop feeling slightly funny, and had sneaked out to purchase a pregnancy test from the nearest pharmacie. Despite having taken four years to come to terms with "Une bouteille d'eau plate, s'il vous plait", she was somehow able using the international language of exaggerated girly gestures to acquire a box of little stick things after only half an hour of frantic waving.

Making her way delicately back into the room past a gently snoring and completely-unaware-of-impending-doom husband, she soon discovered that both the instructions and the result of the test consisted of one word: "Oui". I was then woken up to the sight of a delighted Lady X hopping up and down with delight while shaking the (still dripping) test in my face.

Shamefully, my first thoughts were: "Damn you, karma" as I had only recently written columns on the horror of ginger children and the stupidity of many parents and was convinced that an angry cosmos was about to provide me with the most violent and ginger offspring in history. I immediately resolved to realign my karmic balance and spent the next months doing good deeds including preventing a terrorist attack on America and saving many innocent villagers in Africa from the ravages of a civil war (at least I'm fairly sure that's what I did - unless my sleep-deprived brain has once again failed to distinguish between i) reality and ii) the latest adventures of my alter-ego Jack Bauer). Of course, this didn't stop me on doing the gentlemanly thing and insisting that Lady X take over the driving duties for the remainder of the holiday as it would have been a terrible shame to waste all those pre-paid vineyard tours filled with delicious, delicious wine.

Anyway, several months later a thankfully blond-haired Baby X has arrived and you will shortly be required to join in with the rest of the population of Jersey in swearing allegiance to your new and diminutive overlord. If you fail to comply, it will be at your own risk: he has already mastered the dark arts of projective vomiting and – more impressively – projectile pooing and take it from me, once he has decided to use these evil powers your curtains may never be the same again.

More disturbingly, he is also progressing his understanding of the human psyche such that not only are his victims forced to obey his every wish, but also being screamed at repeatedly seemingly makes them more frantic in their desire to please him. He has also declared war on the sort of awful baby clothing that says things like "My Grandmother has no originality" and "If you think I'm ugly, you should avoid my parents at all costs", instead preferring to adopt a basic wardrobe of simple vests tastefully dotted with little cars and diggers (which symbolise his understanding of the importance of transport and infrastructure to any good dictator).

He communicates using the aforementioned screams and a selection of cute little mogwai noises, which, combined with his distaste for bright light and water, has made us extremely reluctant to feed him after midnight. He has also filled an astonishing number of nappies with a substance that I have been desperately trying to keep hidden from any passing United Nations WMD inspectors (although the government of Iran has recently shown an interest in helping me "dispose" of them). The future is clearly his, and if you don't jump on the bandwagon now, you and everyone you love may meet with a series of unfortunate accidents. All hail Baby X!

The Perfect Match

You've met the perfect partner and with Valentine's Day just around the corner, the big question is just waiting to be popped. But have you thought about the perfect wedding venue?

Many brides already have an idea of where they would like the ceremony and reception to take place, even before the proposal. However, a growing guest list, time of year and expanding budgets often mean the first choice has to be re-thought and in Jersey it's often too much choice of wedding venues rather than a lack of that makes for difficult decisions.

To help with the decision making, the Dolan Hotel group offer three superb and contrasting solutions to finding that venue. All three of the Dolan Hotels are located on the south west coast of the island and each offers superb and uninterrupted views from their restaurants.

For 4 star luxury with views over the yachting harbour of St Aubin's the Somerville Hotel offers wedding lunches all year round and evening functions available off season. If a relaxed lunch right on the beach is more your style, the Golden Sands Hotel, in St Brelade's Bay would be an ideal choice. Whereas for a summer, all day event with dancing as the sun sets over St Aubin's Bay, the Hotel Cristina doesn't fail to impress with its floor to ceiling windows offering spectacular views.

Both the Somerville and Cristina Hotels are also licensed for wedding ceremonies, so the entire wedding day can be spent in one location.

Jetskiing - what a great way to start married life!

top tips

Work out how many people are attending your wedding, not forgetting to take into consideration extra evening guests. This will eliminate certain venues that are too big or too small.

What type of wedding service are you having - a church or civil? If it's civil, do you want the ceremony at the same venue as the reception or separate?

Visit all venues on your shortlist- even if you fall in love with the first one that you visit, there may be others that are just as nice but more practical for your needs.

Below are five top tips from the Somerville Hotel's Wedding Coordinator on how to find your perfect venue:

Take a notepad, pen and camera to each show round. Photograph anything which makes the venue stand out as well as anything that may be a problem. These will help, alongside your notes, when you come to compare venues once your home.

Take a menu and drinks pack from each venue for a guideline price. If you find a venue that's out of your budget, ask if they can cater to it. Out of the summer season some venues maybe willing to do this (within reason!)

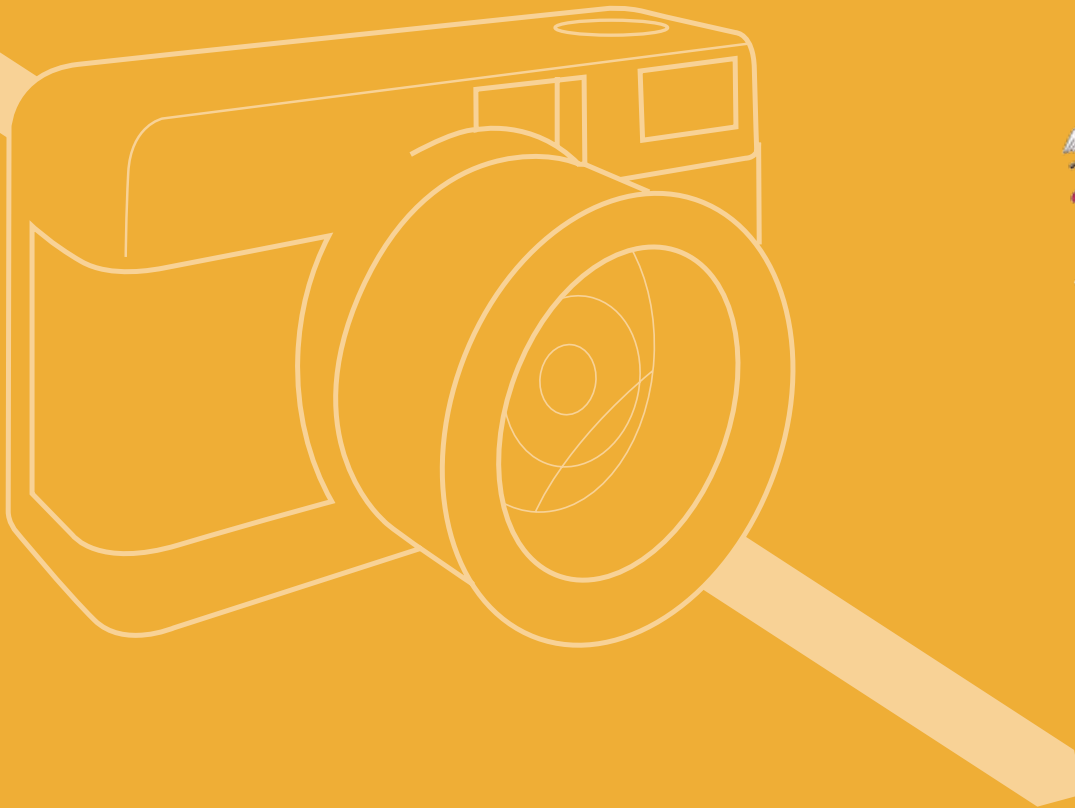

If you would more information on the above hotels please contact the following numbers:

The Standard Bank Christmas Party Jersey Potteries: 04/12/09

This year's fancy dress theme was 'Pirates', with over 160 staff members getting on board and into character. Prizes for the best fancy dress costumes were awarded throughout the evening. With best costumes going to Linda Adeler (the treasure map) for Best Female, Anthony Blackman (Jack Sparrow) for Best Male, Finance for Best Group and Peter Rondel (Tinkerbell) for Funniest Costume. It was a fun and fantastic evening as the pictures show ... oooh arrrr.

The Acorn Christmas Party The Royal Yacht: 17/12/09

Acorn were joined by more than 700 guests to their annual Christmas drinks held on Thursday 17th December 2009, which proved to be the perfect start to the festive break. Acorn Directors Andrew Schaffer, David Tupper, Richard Harrop and Steve Ryan joined professional intermediaries, associates and staff to celebrate another successful year. The Royal Yacht's Drift Bar was packed from 5.30pm with everyone enjoying the hospitality the Acorn Way till late that evening.

Opening: Bento Sushi 07/01/10

The owner of Bento Sushi, young entrepreneur Phil Wood, has done his homework.

When my friends and I walked into the restaurant on the corner of Commercial and Conway Streets, we could have been in London or New York or Sydney, or anywhere in the world that takes its sushi seriously.

Firstly, the layout is small and slick. You immediately feel confident you'll get good service and that you won't have to shout to any dining partners. The set-up's also ideal for people who want to dine alone. As there are twenty eight seats placed around a conveyer belt, you don't feel as self-conscious as you might when walking into a restaurant and asking for a table for one.

Speed's another factor. A constant stream of dishes pumped out from the kitchen via the conveyor belt means customers can start eating immediately. There's no faffing around waiting for your order to be taken and delivered.

And then there's the food. There was just a small selection as it was launch night, but what we tried, we really, really liked. Fresh salmon nigiri without the telltale white lines of fat which scream the poor fish was factory farmed to within an inch of its life. Crab and avocado urumaki which tastes of crab and avocado, not some indecipherable mush which needs to be doused in soy sauce for flavour (you often have to do this in sushi chains in the UK). And the salmon and tuna maki, which come out like little black bullets of fresh, fishy goodness.

Bentosushi will quieten cynics who thought Jersey couldn't produce a really authentic sushi restaurant. It looks like 2010 will be the year of sashimi and saki for islanders.

Barclays Wealth Community Awards Pomme d'Or Hotel

The Barclays Wealth Community Awards were held at the beginning of December in the Pomme d'Or Hotel. The evening provided a real surprise as the winning organisations discovered they would receive more money than had initially been planned. The judges felt the projects were so deserving that they unexpectedly increased the funding from £25,000 to £38,000.

Grace Trust, Jersey Cheshire Home, Headway, Jersey Women's Refuge and Brighter Futures beat a total of 53 organisations to win the awards.

The Standard Bank Annual 10 Pin Bowling Competition: 12/11/09

Seventeen client firms took part this year. Hosted at Jersey Bowl, each firm supplied a team of five players which incorporated a Standard Bank member - which in some cases proved to be more of a hindrance than a help! This year's winning team was from Osiris Trust (Bernard Le Claire, Jeremy Gogan, Richard O'Connor, Jason Harris and Angela Davies) who were partnered with Standard Bank's Claire Reid, bowling a magnificent total of 1464 points. There were also individual prizes for the top man and top lady and these went to Ian Vieira and Angela Davies.

People of Uganda Sir John Cheshire Gallery: 18/01/2010

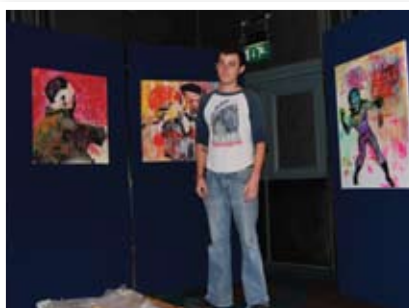

Robert Allen's exhibition preview for 'People of Uganda'. Whilst visiting Uganda on a Jersey Overseas Aid project, Robert sketched the inspiring people that he met. On display are beautiful drawings of the Ugandan children he met at the school, as well as the friends he made whilst working on the Mwangi farm. Robert will be donating two thirds of any sales made back into the next overseas project and the Education Fund for Luweeran

Orphans. Make sure you visit the exhibition and support the cause. The exhibition is on until the 27th at the Sir John Cheshire Gallery, next to St. Thomas' Church. Private viewing is on the Monday. Anybody is invited.

Red Dot Sale The Grand Hotel: 26/11/09

Images of the artists setting up and on the night of the Red Dot Sale, where people had the opportunity to meet local artists and buy an original piece of contemporary artwork. The event was put together by the Red Dot group, who invited 10 other artists to take part and exhibit their work, including a great mix of both well known and up and coming local artists. The work on display was diverse - from painting and drawing to sculpture, ceramics and illustration; each artist working with their own individual themes and influences, making this an interesting and exciting event. On stage was a new band called The Mulburys playing an acoustic set. The room was mobbed and with good art and good music the buzz in the room was electric. The night was a real success and certainly won't be the last event for the Red Dot group. This event being a success has only spurred us on to do more and we hope will inspire other artists to be pro-active and to keep positive about their practice. There was real sense of community amongst the artists involved with everyone helping out and having fun as a group, which was really great to be part of. Being an artist can be rather lonely and it's great to be involved in group projects like this where you begin to feel part of something bigger.

Watch this space

Pinciples' windows are set to become a new and exciting space for contemporary local talent.

A new innovative project has just been set up by local artist and entrepreneur Paul Talbot who says, 'the old Principles building in Halkett Street has a fantastically high footfall, and I am using the window space to showcase artist's work for everyone to enjoy. The shop has been empty for some time and has been craving some creativity in its brilliant big windows. While they are available, the windows will change regularly to give as many artists as possible a chance to exhibit, I have also left a window free for local art students and special events.'

This project will bring culture into the heart of St Helier. And in a time of economic recession, what better than some inspirational artwork that will uplift the spirit as well as supporting local artists?

John Wright of Gaudin & Co Estate Agents who helped facilitate the project on behalf of the local investment company landlord said, 'we hope that more shop owners and estate agents will follow suit and see that art displayed in these environments can not only provide a great attraction for passers by but also uniquely draw attention and interest to the availability of the vacant shop.'

So be inspired and take a stroll past this creative space. The first artists working in this changing exhibiton space are: Nicholas Romeril, Theresa Robinson, Paul Talbot, Karen Le Roy Harris, Jason Butler and Marc Mcarty. Their work comprises of an eclectic mix of pottery, furniture, paintings and glass work, which give everyone wandering by a real visual feast. The artwork on display is also all available to purchase. For more information contact Paul on 07797 829 293 or at paul@pfaconsultants.com.

The People of Uganda

Robert Allen

An exhibition of drawings by Robert Allen reflecting on his visit to Uganda in August 2009 is currently on show at the Sir John Cheshire Gallery. He travelled to Uganda as part of a Jersey Overseas Aid team, working in and around a small town called Luweero. The team worked with the locals on a farm; land clearing and helping to build accommodation for the farm workers. They also worked with a school that was mainly for orphans, helping to do essential construction work as well as the more important job of entertaining the children.

Robert said he was struck by the sheer joy and exuberance of the children, most being orphans and all living in quite desperate poverty and how this never seemed to matter to them, as long as there were 'friends to play with, a football to kick around or music to dance to.' He also greatly admired the local people that the team worked alongside. He has tried to portray their great strength and elegance as well as their wonderful friendliness.

All the artwork is for sale with a third of the proceeds going to the Education Fund for Luweero Orphans and the other third going to the next Overseas Aid team heading back out to Uganda.

Robert studied at Falmouth College of arts in Cornwall and Nuova Academia Belle d'Arte in Milan and has had over 25 exhibitions in Jersey, the UK and Milan.

Face to Face

The People's Portrait consists of past commissions including portraits of historians, community workers, an environmentalist, a union leader, and an entertainer; including the latest commission of Colin Powell, painted by local artist Jason Butler. Through their portrait image these people have become immortalised for future generations. This exhibition, dedicated to Jersey Heritage portrait commissions, presents a fascinating insight into the art of portraiture.

speakout

Art of compromise
Karen Le Roy Harris

A conversation that often comes up amongst artists is how to make a living out of your art without compromising the work. With financial pressures of families and paying the bills, artists need to make a living. Getting that fine balance between doing something you love and making it sellable without compromising can have its pressures. Being a recently graduated young artist you want to be part of something different and cutting edge, but then again I'm still without any major ties and no kids to worry about so it's easy for me to say 'stick to your guns' and do what you want. It's a sad fact that many people don't continue their art having left the comforts of university - struggling to make ends meet. However, I'm also glad to say that many of us manage to keep that fire in our belly despite any ups and downs. Many of us juggle lots of things, as do I. I work part time for Crimestoppers, I'm the culture editor for this magazine, I teach art at schools, as well as spending time on my own artwork, and being involved with several other art projects - it can at times be manic, but then again as much as I may moan I think I thrive on it and soon miss the buzz when it's quiet. All I can say is keep going, it's worth it and you know how much you'll miss it when it's gone.

where they work....

myspace: Nicholas Romeril

Nick believes artists' studios to be reflective, steady, private refuges; the artist choosing a place that reflects their approach and their creations directly. Herbert Read described Piet Mondrain's London studio as an 'immaculate white cell', while Robert Hughes recalls Frank Auerbach's studio as being 'a dingy cavern encrusted with paint'. Nick feels that the identity of artists' studios are as distinct as the art that is produced in them. He'd like to invite you to his space. Nick: "It's not very old and it doesn't have thirty years of painted history like Frank Auerbach's, but it will one day." # Comedy Rocks

Here at Gallery we're always keen to support local promoters who are putting it on the line to bring Jersey something different. This month we catch up with Comedy Rocks organiser Wayne Stewart ## describe yourself in a few words?

Must Try Harder.

what makes you laugh?

Most things, mainly simple things like falling over. I still get too much enjoyment out of drawing penises on things. Fish puns are always good and you can't beat some well-placed sarcasm.

when and what got you into stand up?

From the age of about 15 I'd made up my mind that I never wanted a 'proper job'. I was watching Eddie Izzard when the penny dropped and I realized that I could make a living from talking nonsense. It turns out there's a bit more to it, but nonetheless I am still determined to make my millions with as little effort as possible, and stand-up seems to fit the brief. Please note it is quite hard.

who are your personal comedy greats and why?

There's too many to name. Steve Martin would be near the top of the list. He was performing stand-up before comedy clubs even existed, prancing around on stage with joke-shop toys at a time when the circuit was mostly dominated by Jewish men and their self-deprecating prose. To me he's The Godfather of Silly. Other greats would include Steven Wright and Woody Allen.

you're bringing some fantastic acts over to amuse our island nation, how do you choose them?

Selfishly. I pick acts I like. A lot of the acts I've seen before, others require a bit of research and references from trusted comedian friends. With the bigger gigs I'm putting some consideration towards the comedian's TV credits because unfortunately there are still a lot of people who won't go and see someone they haven't heard of. Jersey folk aren't renowned for being open-minded.

what can people expect to take home from a Comedy Rocks show?

Ideally an experience of "real comedy", away from the world of large theatres and TV, something truly organic, by genuinely talented comedians. If not, perhaps they'll take a flyer for the next gig?

you're putting on some acts at the Opera House's attic space. What was in your attic as a kid?

You've laid down the foundations for a potentially hilarious anecdote but unfortunately the best I can do is: Christmas decorations, a Zed-Bed, and the occasional starling.

what's your view on where the planet and human race are heading?

I believe all creatures on Earth serve a purpose, and as humans we are no exception, so who's to say we aren't fulfilling our purpose, and that everything that is happening is just part of a much bigger process that we couldn't even begin to understand. The planet will be just fine but the human race is inevitably doomed.... Too much?

give us a good short joke.

Not my own but...

Did you hear the one about the huge bird who went to the Small Birds Association meeting? He was massively ostrich-sized!

How can people find out more about Comedy Rocks? (wax lyrical time)

The best way to find out more and stay up to date with everything Comedy Rocks is to join the Facebook page or register for updates on comedyrocks.co.uk. We have some seriously exciting things coming up, including a very special treat for the summer!

RAISING THE ROOF

Powers in the Attic

One complaint you often hear amongst the local music community is that Jersey doesn't have enough live venues to perform in. Well, Jersey Arts Trust and the Opera House have taken a step towards rectifying that with the addition of the Attic to the island's live circuit.

Nestled above the Opera House on Gloucester Street, the Attic has a snug capacity of fifty, making for a cosy and intimate atmosphere, and with its own PA system, is fully equipped for live events. Since opening in September 2009, it has enjoyed a number of fantastic events, including the Poattic live poetry evenings, at which several esteemed visiting poets (including George Ttoui and Rupert Loydell) have performed readings, as well as a number of local writers.

The Attic was also the venue for the recent live debut of flamboyant Jersey cabaret act Bother, as well as being the regular home of the new monthly 'Comedy Rocks' nights. Kicking off in September with acclaimed comic Paul Foot, the comedy nights have also seen the brilliant 'occult comedian' Andrew O'Neill and Time Out 'Newcomer of the Year 2008' Mike Wozniak grace the Attic stage.

Comedy Rocks continues with the live music and razor sharp wit of James Sherwood on February 3rd, and the insanely funny (and insane) Canadian standup Tony Law (whose fans include Sean Lock and Adam Buxton), with support from spandex cabaret-rapper the Midnight Expresso, on March 10th.

This regular event is the brainchild of local standup comedian Wayne Stewart, who you can catch supporting James Sherwood on February 3rd. Wayne says, "the aim is to provide Jersey with a consistent stream of comedy, so we can all have something to laugh about because they say 'laughter is a good medicine', or something like that". With a man at the helm who clearly has his finger on the pulse of cutting edge comedy, Comedy Rocks looks to be in good shape to be a great success, and in the perfect venue too.

The Attic is free to hire for any live performance events, has a fully licensed and staffed bar, and you're welcome to charge for entry to your events. So if you're a musician, comedian, poet, singer or are a promoter with an idea for an event but stuck for a venue to place it, the Attic might be just the ticket.

If you would like to book the Attic for an event, just get in touch with Jersey Arts Trust on 617521, or the Opera House on 511110.

Upcoming @ the Attic:

-  James Sherwood, supported by Wayne Stewart, 3 February, 8pm
-  Tony Law, supported by the Midnight Expresso, 10 March, 8pm
-  To book tickets for any Attic events, contact the Opera House box office.

HARBOUR GALLERY

Jersey Textile Showcase

Once a year Jersey becomes a melting pot for local UK and European textile artists and craftworkers. Now in it's sixth year the Jersey Textile Showcase is a major event on the textile calendar taking place in and around the picturesque harbourside village of St Aubin.

Organized by local charity Art in the Frame Foundation no. 238 this usually quiet village, at this time of year, becomes a vibrant playground bursting with colour and creativity with every conceivable space from The Harbour Gallery to churches, church halls and the parish hall.

Filled with half or full day workshops led by a team of well known and inspirational UK tutors Jean Littlejohn, Jan Beaney, Carol Coleman, Gina Ferrari, Jean Moss, Fiona Kearns and Louis Gardiner, also very popular local tutors Naomi Renouf, Christine Witham, Pam Kubas and Bianca Padidar there is a choice of over 60 workshops to choose from embellishing, free form knitting, felting, jewellery making, book covers, rag ragging, textile portraiture, colourwork and free machine embroidery using the very latest and exciting textile materials.

These workshops are inspirational for art and textile students of all levels and ages and anyone with a love of art and design. All materials are provided and machines if necessary.

View the 9 exhibitions all entrance-free, to include, Bare Stitch Diane Bates, Cities the Diversity Group, Jersey Textile Artists, Young Textile Graduates, 'All Is Revealed' the competition with entries received from world wide and more.

This exciting exhibition of textile artists and work from the open art competition 'All is Revealed' will be on display at the Harbour Gallery, as well as a series of workshops that will also be running to keep you busy in March.

Jacki Sanders from Island Knitwear will be exhibiting, selling and knitting her beautiful hand dyed garments with new colours and new designs.

Jersey Silver will be launching a new collection of jewellery. Visitors to Jersey Textile Showcase will have the first opportunity to view and to purchase these beautiful pieces. You can even make your own piece of jewellery in the Jersey Silver Studio, who will be providing workshops. Jan Beaney and Jean Littlejohn will once again be joining the Jersey Textile Showcase from 9th - 11th March, where they will be running workshops and presenting the Textile Showcase Awards at The Gala Dinner on Thursday 11th March. Art in the Frame are delighted that Neil and Angela Watson have agreed to sponsor the Jersey Textile Awards for 2010.

Take part in Wrapping St Aubin where an attempt will be made to wrap the railings around St Aubin with the longest scarf to be made in Jersey. Made of 10inch squares the scarf will be taken apart at the end and sewn into blankets to send to the locally established charity Friends of Ecce Homo in Romania. KNITTERS THEY WANT YOUR SQUARES.

oneto watch: Anna-Louise Shipley

Anna is currently working on a collaborative histories project. The idea stemmed from a brief for an exhibition called 'Jersey 2100' in 2009 where Anna created a time capsule for future generations to discover. She exhibited an interactive project where the audience could take catalogued objects for their own interpretation. Objects whose purpose could be obscured to confuse the future generations. Giving these objects a different meaning and in a sense changing their history. Anna is looking to exhibit the work of everyone that took part in the project.

Pining for Pinel

One of Jersey's Finest Musical Exports Returns!

Kevin Pinel, aka Pevin Kinel, was a bastion of Jersey's music community, known as one quarter of punk-funkers Velofax, and also for his wildly eccentric solo shows that spanned the genres of jazz, funk, rock and electro. He's now strutting his stuff in London, and returns on February 12th for a Club Kamikaze event at the Live Lounge, supporting hotly-tipped UK dance act Totally Enormous Extinct Dinosaurs. Check out his rapier wit, and then pop along to the gig and see him work his magic...

When was the last time you played in Jersey? Describe the last show that you played here...

The last time I played in Jersey was in 2008 for Branchage Festival. I could try to describe the madness, the euphoria, the orgies, the delirium, but to be honest, I doubt words could do the evening justice. Suffice to say I woke up the next morning wearing a balaclava, both pockets full of grated cheese and with a kangaroo in my bed smoking a cigarette.

How would you describe your sound to people who haven't heard or seen you play?

Picture yourself taking a shower, humming a melody as you rub your armpits. Suddenly you realise that you're stuck in loop. You're repeating the same notes again and again. You just can't stop. Then some guy comes in your bathroom and starts beat-boxing along with your melody. Before you can say "shampoo", another dude walks in with a guitar, then another one carrying a synth and the whole thing gets funkier and funkier until you're boogying like a maniac.

You were in Velofax but have now gone solo - how is that working out? What have been the highlights since going solo?

I played solo for a few years before joining the band, so it's more of a come back, a one-man-band reunion if you like. With Velofax we rehearsed a lot and tried to play very tight gigs, but now my solo sets are mostly improvised. Being part of a group is good but not having to compromise with anyone is pretty good too. One of the highlights was playing alongside Totally Enormous Extinct Dinosaurs and Midnight Expresso in Camden. But what are the chances of such great acts playing on the same bill ever again?

What are you looking forward to seeing when you return to Jersey?

People! You have a lot of lovely people on such a small island and I kinda miss 'em. It's always good to come back and catch up with everybody. Oh, and I want to go and check if that little German souvenir shop by the market is still open. I mean, surely one day they will have to run out of genuine Nazi memorabilia.

Pevin is supporting TOTALLY ENORMOUS EXTINCT DINOSAURS at Club Kamikaze @ The Live Lounge, February 12th, 9pm til late. Entry is £6 on the door.

Derrin Nauendorf

The best thing to come out of New Zealand since Frodo. Flying like the Conchords, Derrin touches down in Jersey this month.

Derrin Nauendorf, known to Jersey music fans for his many amazing solo acoustic shows will be playing on the Island with his full band for the first time this February. Thelma's Show Lounge, Jersey's brand new music venue located above the Townhouse New Street is proud to present the man who has been called Australia's Bob Dylan.

Derrin's journey into the music industry began around 7 years ago when he left his native Australia to attempt to make a splash in the UK and Europe. He arrived at Heathrow with one telephone number, £1200 and a mountain of energy and enthusiasm. Derrin has opened for Van Morrison and countless others and has always been a major hit whichever stage he graces.

Derrin has recorded 6 albums and sold close to 17000 of them from the back of his van to an army of devoted fans in too many places to mention. Whilst Derrin has recorded 6 albums, his latest record "Skin of the Earth" is only actually his second commercial release. After years of shunning the music industry he released "The Rattling Wheel" on his own label Rising Records Ltd in 2006 to much praise and acclaim. Following this first commercial release, Derrin received attention from Bob Harris (BBC Radio 2) who invited him in for a solo live session and interview and Paul Jones (BBC Radio 2) also hosted a live session for Derrin and his band at the famous Maida Vale studios.

'The Rattling Wheel' received a 4 star review in the Sunday Express alongside Jools Holland, Tom Waits and The Beatles! Glowing reviews followed in publications such as Blues Matters and Maverick Magazines and Derrin has gone on to feature in many other music publications.

Thelma's opens full time in February 2010, with local bands every Friday and Saturday Night as well as one major international star every month. Saturday March 27th sees Sixties legend Chris Farlowe. Saturday and Sunday April 24th 25th sees the mighty double Grammy award winning Albert Lee and Hogan's Heroes for a weekend of concerts and guitar clinics. On Friday and Saturday May 29th 30th, Thelma's welcome's Ultravox's Midge Ure for two solo acoustic shows.

a shambles baby

We sent intrepid Muso Chris Bell all the way to Southampton to catch up with Pete Doherty. Sadly, Pete eluded him but he did manage to have a catch up with Jersey's 'The Valentines' and chat to them about the tour and what they think of the man himself.

Sometimes things just don't work out, and you have to make the best of a bad situation; just ask Peter Doherty. After being kicked out of the Libertines just as the band were hitting stellar heights, the man that the NME named number one in their prestigious Cool List and 'Hero of the Year' four years later, formed his new band and launched his own personal assault on indie immortality. Style icon, tabloid favourite and rock n' roll's own public enemy number one, his place in the annals of indie history are secured. As I say, making the best of a bad situation.

The plan was to go to Southampton for Babyshambles' show at the famous Guildhall, in which they were being supported by Jersey boys the Valentines, who are beginning to make ripples, if not full-blown waves, in the UK. We had an interview arranged; I was particularly looking forward to interviewing Peter, who I'd met a couple of times through mutual friends in the early days of the Libertines. Alas, it was not to be; as ever in the topsy-turvy world of Doherty and co, one thing that can't be taken for granted is anything. We were told on the night that they weren't doing any interviews after all, so we had to make do with watching the show, followed by an interview with the Valentines backstage.

Since leaving Jersey behind, where they made a name for themselves as one of the island's favourite live acts - the band, now based in Brighton, have gone through numerous upheavals. Several changes to the line up, sonic experiments seeing them dabble with doo-wop, reggae and even metal influences, and four years later, the band have settled on a line up and a honed sound that harks to the likes of the Ramones, Supergrass and at times, a sped-up Glasvegas. They've been taken under the wing of Babyshambles' management and there's a mooted major record label single release this spring - with whispers that Suede's Bernard Butler may be the man at the production desk.

Invited by Babyshambles' management to support the band on their UK tour, this represents a massive opportunity for exposure to a wider audience, and they didn't disappoint. Sandwiched between two other support acts, fairly average indie-punk outfit the Supernoyas and singer-songwriter Alan Wass (with whom Peter was charged in 2005, after beating up rockumentary filmmaker Max Carlsh), the Valentines easily won the biggest share of support from the crowd - apart from Babyshambles, that is. Running through tracks like 'We are the Band' and 'Does She Make Noise?', the audience was suitably warmed-up for what turned out to be a hit-and-miss Babyshambles set. Peter Doherty's devoted fans are always guaranteed to give a rapturous reception to the band, but the truth is that much of the band's time was spent seemingly jamming through the set. Songs like 'Down in Albion', which should have clocked in at just under four minutes, taking twice that length of time from start to finish. It is said that the band tend not to practice - ever - so perhaps this is to be expected.

After the show ended on a high, with the anthemic 'F*ck Forever' leaving a packed 2,000 fans in good spirits as they left to face the bitter December air, it was time to find the band. Despite having been friends with lead singer Christian for years, now that he's all famous and everything, he wasn't the easiest to track down. But track him down we did. I explained that I had a set of questions planned for Babyshambles, but now that that interview had fallen through, I was going to ask the same questions to the Valentines. The guys (Christian Jegard, Chris Lowe, Chris Leader and Danny Curtis) keenly accepted the challenge...

They should be called the Valentines cool-down band

How's the tour going so far?

CJ Tonight was better than Bath. In Bath, we felt like we were warming up for today. That gig felt like more of a novelty too; it was almost like we'd won a competition to play, whereas tonight we feel more like part of the gang. After Bath a couple of them had seen us and tonight they were really nice to us - the management were saying that a couple of them were raving about us.

We've only seen Pete once, in Bath. He was nice, he came up and said hi and that he was sorry for missing our set. However, Leader thought it would be funny to say that we were better than them, and everyone around us quite rightly thought he was a douchebag. He also thought it would be funny to go up to him like this (twangs imaginary braces), and in a mockney accent start singing 'kipper and eggs, kippers and eggs' over and over again. He was taking the piss basically. We need to shut that one up.

Are things calmer for the band nowadays than when you were younger?

CJ Not in the slightest, they've escalated. When we were younger we were playing gigs in the Q Bar with the Cryptics and Jonny & the Rats yet again, and now we're playing places like this. The response after gigs wasn't so much girls coming up to us flirting; it was the manager of the Q Bar, asking us to get out because it was gone three, or telling us to make sure Gav (their former guitarist) doesn't let a fire extinguisher off in the venue. Everything's got more fun.

And more professional?

CJ Yeah absolutely. I'll make no bones about it - the new line up is much better. The songwriting's got better. We used to have loads of shite songs, because I was trying to rip people off all the time, and now I'm better at writing songs.

What would a drug-free Babyshambles be like?

CL Jerry & the Pacemakers.

CJ Status Quo?

Peter gets most attention than the rest of the band. Does that bother you at all?

CJ Well the thing that I've always thought about the Babyshambles...

BH Did you just call them 'the' Babyshambles?

CJ That's what they're called aren't they?

BH No, they're just Babyshambles. There's no 'the'

CL They should be called 'the Valentines cool-down band'. After we play, the compere could be like, 'calm down everyone, Babyshambles are on now.'

CJ That is absolutely a joke, by the way.

CL That was a joke.

CJ I always felt a bit sorry for them when you see Pete getting all the attention, but at these gigs, you got a sense that if Adam or Mick or any of the band had walked out on stage, regardless of Pete, that the crowd would still go mental.

How do you deal with the hangers on? How do you know who you can trust?

CJ If we did get properly famous, I'd be absolutely fine with fans. If people like me because of my band I don't mind; I want people to like me. On the other hand if there were hangers-on that only wanted to be around us because we were famous, I'd have no problem with doing an absolute Frank Lampard and telling them to do one.

Do you feel like you're yet to record defining work?

CJ Yes. My solo album 'Cockney on a Waterslide' wasn't great, but my next album, called -

CL - called 'Carry on Jegard.'

CJ No, called 'Cockney in a Jar', is going to be great.

Where will you be in ten year's time?

CL Coventry.

CJ Seriously - Live Aid 3, because I plan to be stupidly huge.

Finally, any Valentines messages for the ladies of Jersey?

CL Vote Bush. That's not a euphemism.

CJ Look out, we're coming to get you. That's not a euphemism either.

After the show, incidentally, we finally got a quote from Babyshambles guitarist Mick Whitnall. 'See you in Manchester', he said as we were leaving the backstage area with the Valentines. Wasn't really relevant to me and Danny, but at least we got a quote - making the best of a bad situation.

Ross Le Cornu - nice capture of light

As you'd imagine, snow and Winter scenes features heavily in this month's upload collection. We've taken a cross section and, although there were some fabulous submissions, moved it away from the landscape scenery this month. Our winner Piers Le Moignan shone out with the amazing macro shot capturing the Winter snow in the eyes of a feline friend. Good Work.

I can only imagine that 35 years ago people envisaged that by 2010 the world would be enthralled by music with a sound like that of Kraftwerk funnelled through a device similar to the Large Hadron Collider, in between our intergalactic flights to a nondescript planet for a "Space-break". While the sound of dubstep/funky/funkitek (yes that really is the name of a new sub-sub-genre) does its best to convince me that teleportation is only a few years away, listening to the quivering folktronica of Ellie Goulding, without a doubt 2010's chosen sensation suggests that maybe we're just over halfway.

Usher Little Freak

Single - 22nd February

While Usher may have his name on the track, "Little Freak" is all about the producer. It should come as no surprise upon hearing the triumphant synths, that this producer goes by the name of "Da Don". Seemingly ditching his sentimental soul singing (case in point "Burn") Usher mans up, giving the instrumentals a vocal performance to match. So good is the track in fact that you almost completely forget that the entire song is about Usher getting some - a lot.

Joy Orbison The Shrew

EP - February 22nd

Following up on last years mind-blowing single "Hyph Mngo", Joy Orbison, described as "the golden boy of that spectral territory between house, garage and dubstep" drops The Shrew... EP that only serves to built up his burgeoning reputation as one of best new producers on the scene. From the title track's slow burning synth waves and intertwined bursts of vocal samples to the aquatic sub-bass groove of "So Derober", Joy Orbison's tracks take you to places you never even thought existed.

Marina & The Diamonds Hollywood

Single - February 1st

It looks like 2009's tsunami of girl-pop is going to breach the beginning of the new decade, fortunately when there is a voice as enticing as that of Marina Diamandis' involved you can have no complaints. On "Hollywood" she takes a tongue-in-cheek look at unhealthy obsessions with the glitz and glamour of Tinseltown. Marina's sugar-coated, synth driven chorus and punchy vocals perfectly conveys the enchantment of fame that so many people seek out.

The Big Pink Velvet

Single - February 15th

"Velvet" is definitely a special track that showcases The Big Pink's unique combination of indie and harsher cut-up drum machine loops and electronics. The real beauty of the song lies in its ability to blend the intimate vocals of Robbie Furze with the track's vast space and atmosphere. Amongst the track's myriad elements it's all too easy to get lost, lured in by the spectral backing vocals or trapped within the walls of distorted guitars.

Jay Sean

Do You Remember feat. Sean Paul & Lil' Jon
Single - 22nd February

It's hard to think when listening to Jay Sean's airbrushed voice that he is actually British. The entire track is symptomatic of a style of American hip-hop and R&B that is growing staler and staler as the days pass. "Do You Remember" essentially follows the formula of: smooth vocals + forgettable melody + just a normal boy lovin' a normal girl + a handful of Lil' Jon's yelps + 1 stock Sean Paul rap = 1 international hit. Sadly, I think the formula with probably prove to be correct.

Greenlaw Feat. DJ SS After I'm Gone (Tony Anthem & AXL Ender Remix)

Single - Out Now

It was always inevitable that as Dubstep became bigger and began to peer its head up from the underground it would become seized by producers left right and centre looking for 15 minutes of fame. Just like like masses of landfill indie circa. 2005-06, Dubstep remixes are everywhere and a vast majority of them are just the original track with a "filthy" or "dirty" beat unceremoniously and lazily dumped on top, and with "After I'm Gone" Tony Anthem and AXL Ender merely add to the growing landfill.

Owl City Fireflies

Single - February 22nd

Genuine horror. That was my first reaction upon hearing this hyped-up single that has been floating around for a few months now after striking gold in the US. Not only is it the most lyrically cringeworthy song of recent history ("Cos I get a 1000 hugs/From 10,000 lightning bugs/ As they tried to teach me how to dance") but it is also a disgraceful and tacky rip-off of The Postal Service. Fischer-Pricing-ing up the synth and vocoding his soft vocals to the point of nausea, the track essentially whores up The Postal Service. For shame Owl City, for shame.

Kasabian Vlad The Impaler

Single - February 15th

In case you hadn't noticed, this past year Kasabian have made a concerted effort to expand their horizons. They gave their album a cah-razy title that was probably supposed to sound artistic and came out with comments like saying their new album was "the soundtrack to an imaginary movie." Thus the stage was set for them to bring out "Vlad The Impaler", an wugly frankenstein of post-punk rip-offs with irritatingly frequent refrains of today's cool phrase such as "get loose, get loose." Maybe next time, eh?

BrandNews

Lucky us. February's definitely a month to spoil yourself – or get someone to do it for you! With new boutiques opening, and exciting new ranges arriving in the shops, here's our ways to brighten up your February in a red sort of way.

Paint the town red →

Aurum

Aurum's got some gorgeous Murano Glass jewellery that would make a perfect gift. It's all handcrafted and it's set into sterling silver. We love this chunky set in rich cherry red – great for adding an individual touch to outfits.

Murano Glass Silver Jewellery, from £57, .

← Now you see it...

Be My Bra

Now here's something new. Customise your bra with these fabulous accessories from Be My Bra – a great way to give your underwear a luxury touch without buying a whole new set. From sexy pirate motifs to sparkly flowers, you can add one, or a whole strap-ful. You choose whether you keep them to yourself, or show them off...

Be My Bra accessories, from £5.75, arriving in time for Valentine's exclusively at Voisins, King Street

We heart Pebble too →

Pebble

We're very excited about brand-new boutique Pebble which opens on the 19th of February and will be the place to pick up unique pieces from the fash pack's favourite brands – Stylesnob, Aryn K, Mina UK and Stella Forest. Pebble owner Clare Corrigan aims to give us an "individual look at affordable prices" and even offers customized pieces from her in-house designer. We can't wait.

Sterling silver bracelet with red Murano glass heart, £46. Pebble, 5 Market Street, St Helier. Opens 19th February. www.ilovepebble.com

← Lady in red Swarovski

The Swarovski Valentine's Day collection has just arrived into Jersey's King Street store and there's a whole range of stylish pieces that'll make great gifts – like these sparkly pieces, full of red hearts, and perfect to tell the love of your life just how much she means to you.

Lala collar-style necklace, £188.95

COFFEE Couture

When we first heard about someone making clothing with coffee sacks we were a little apprehensive to see how they'd pull it off. With some considerable vision and creative flair, a customer of Coopers Coffee devised a plan to take the harsh hessian weave and make it into something beautiful. We asked David Warr how it all came about...

Lorraine Swift, a customer of ours asked us for some spare empty coffee sacks that she wanted to use to make a series of outfits as part of her degree course. We do get some odd requests when it comes to the potential usage of our empty coffee sacks. No doubt some of your readers have seen the odd orangutan hanging from them at Durrell! However what Lorraine created was something quite exceptional and has provoked many comments from fellow customers when the pieces were hanging in our window. I really wanted a record kept of what had been created but as usual I can't just take a simple photograph! With the aid of Gallery's talented photographer, the model, a make-up artist, a roasting room and 5 hours - we ended up with these amazing pictures. Datterra Farm whose sacks were used is particularly dear to me. It was one of the first coffee farms I ever visited and when it comes to a passion for sustainability they must be world leaders. In June I'll hopefully be demonstrating their coffee in London at the world Barista championships and fingers crossed, we'll get to project these images to a wider audience; a great reminder of where our coffee comes from and how important everyone in the chain is. Finally thanks to all involved for allowing this story to be told.

luxury rouge waxing lyrical

For the new Male and Female Lyric fragrances, Amouage's Creative Director, Christopher Chong, has redefined the use of the rose. Deep, smoky and intense, Lyric features notes of rose in a mysterious and entirely unprecedented fashion.

The male scent is a spicy oriental fragrance for 'the gentleman who dares to desire'. With top notes of bergamot and lime, and a base of pine, sandalwood, vanilla, musk and frankincense. This makes a brilliant signature scent as it is so unique.

For the female fragrance ylang-ylang has been added for the heart note, as well as the distinctive tonka bean and wood with the base notes. It is delicious and feminine and the gorgeous packaging makes this a brilliant present, to receive or give!

Available exclusively at Voisins Amouage
Lyric Female £115 Lyric Male £113

Brand New Express Blowdry

The Lord has heard our prayers and the Elmina Salon in town is now providing super-quick no frills, amazing half-hour blowdries and hair-up dos.

Speed is the of the essence

"We have been asked to do a very quick express service for a while now, so we have refurbished the downstairs of our town salon and now people can walk in off the street, with or without an appointment and get a super speedy blowdry" said Rachael Crawford, Salon Owner.

This is ideal if you suddenly find yourself being taken on a surprise Valentine's date, or if you just need a beauty pick-me-up. Either pop in on your lunchtime, or take half an hour off work to treat yourself. To make it quicker they have taken away all the added little luxuries of a real Elmina Salon Appointment, but this also means it is at a fantastic reduced cost:

Express short hair blowdry £20.00 / 30mins

Express long hair blowdry £25.00 / 40mins

Express hair up £27.00 / 30mins

No frills, no fuss, just perfect hair in a flash!

No appointment necessary, however you can make one if you wish.

the cheek of it...

Example A Queen of the chiselled
cheekbone

Blusher is often left off the everyday-make-up routine, but it is actually a prime secret weapon in the fight for the ultimate accolade of: 'I look like I'm wearing no makeup, I'm just naturally this pretty'.

Take example A (above). This is Gallery's crowned Queen of fantastically subtle, but very (very) sexy cheekbones. Miss Example A looks barefaced, but in actual fact more time has been spent on creating those highlighted cheekbones than has been spent on either the sex kitten eyeliner, or bee stung pout.

To re-create this look you need to focus on the area directly below your own cheekbones. To locate this area there is no need to do the old classic 'suck your cheeks in to look like a weirdo / fish', because if you can't locate it without this aid just give up at this stage.

1. Get a matt bronze powder in a darker shade than you would normally use, Rimmel's Sunshimmer (£5.49) line has a great range of colours. Use this to create the effect of chiselled cheekbones, by brushing it under your natural cheekbone line, keeping it sloping down diagonally towards your mouth.
2. Use a light shimmer powder such as Too Faced's Papa Don't Peach (£14.00) on your cheekbones, from right under the outer corner of your eye, this will highlight them.
3. Finally create a natural feminine glow using a light pink like Ruby & Millie's Matte Pearl Cheek Color 50 (£10.50), at the edge of your 'darker shaded' area (this area is scientifically sort of just above your nostrils, and down from the centre of your eyes). Also Smashbox do an amazing O-Glow Silky Gel (£15.99) which turns the perfect rosy shade you would blush naturally!
4. Finally, make sure you are in a good light so you can check you are all blended in!

Detox In Style

The 4 Step Slimming & Detox Programme at Les Roches Health & Wellbeing Spa, St Ouen.

I arrived at the Les Roches Spa an hour before my treatment so that I could take full advantage of the beautiful indoor swimming pool, sauna and Jacuzzi.

I lay back on one of their sumptuous poolside loungers in my huge cosy robe, picked up my favourite fashion magazine and the lovely receptionist brought me a delicious cup of Thalgo slimming tea.

My dull winter skin was desperately in need of a boost, and I felt that this treatment was the perfect way to start the New Year on a good foot! Soon I was called through to a serene treatment room where my treatment began with some vigorous skin brushing, this was to energise and detoxify my skin: skin brushing removes dead skin cells, increases cell renewal and reduces cellulite.

This prepared my skin for the next stage of the treatment; a relaxing and detoxifying massage which drained toxins, boosted my lymphatic system and moisturised my skin leaving it soft and supple.

The detox oil my beauty therapist used smelt delicious and it contained almond, sweet orange, patchouli and juniper.

I then went back to relax by the pool and I enjoyed a Thalgo detox tea. I then met with Jane Bailey, Les Roches Spa's Personal Trainer and we went through some of my body concerns. She gave me some fantastic advice, and I felt ready to take on the year ahead, with a much more positive attitude towards exercise.

At the end I was given a lovely goodie bag containing a professional Skin Brushing mitt, mini shower gel, leaflet LC24, detox tea and a £5.00 voucher to use towards any slimming/detox/body product and personal trainer services.

Before I had this treatment the skin on my legs was definitely lacking moisture. But after the treatment there was a really noticeable difference, there was not one fleck of dry skin, and they felt great, really energised!

All Fired Up

Restaurant Review | The Tree House

Italian. It's the food of love for a reason. With its saucy tomatoes and sensual, silky linguini, punchy macho flavours and soft, melting cheeses, Italian food is all umph and ahh. Even better, it comes in easy-to-share mouthfuls, forkfuls of spaghetti, fingerfuls of salty olives, and torn-off glistening garlic bread.

No wonder Italian restaurants are a top choice for Valentine's Day. And somewhere that's going to be a popular place to head with your lover on Valentine's weekend is Jersey's newest Italian restaurant, The Tree House. It's the old Landmark Inn on La Marquanderie Hill, and the latest addition to the Boat House group of restaurants, which include the Beach House, the Farm House and the Boat House in St Aubin's.

It's all changed since the old Landmark days. The restaurant's been opened up – the kids play area is gone – and it feels much bigger and buzzier. The focal point is an open kitchen with a view straight onto a wood-burning pizza oven – Jersey's first – where you can watch your pizza being fired, and a behemoth of a chicken rotisserie oven that can roast 48 chooks at a time. And it feels relaxed, there's soft carpet underfoot, cushioned chairs, muted décor and low lighting, certainly more inviting than your usual pizza restaurant with its white marble, hard chairs and cold tiled floors. The menu's been pared down to some real Italian classics; olives, garlic bread, antipasti, pastas, salads and then the famous pizzas and roast chicken. It's everyone's favourites, all on one page.

We started with the popular squid and scampi fritto misto, which comes with a pot of garlic mayonnaise for dipping, and the platter of parma ham with pickles and baby cornichons. Everything tastes authentic, and it should do, the restaurant prides itself on its real Italian ingredients. The pièce de résistance is the huge wood-burning pizza oven that bakes the homemade pizza bases at an incredible 495 degrees – twice as hot as a traditional oven, toasting and crisping the pizzas to perfection.

My date, the gorgeous Jasper went for the hot and spicy (just like him of course) Volcano pizza with pepperoni and hot peppers. With a waft of woodsmoke as the waitress brought the freshly baked pizza over it took me back to wild gap years in Rome and sitting outside in moonlit piazzas with one rascally ragazzo or another. Forget crunchy straight-from-the-freezer Chicago Towns, these are pizza heaven, soft and moreish but still perfectly toasted on the outside. Yum. One wasn't enough, and I couldn't stop Jasper's wandering eye, checking out the diners leaving with pizza box doggy bags.... There's a good variety of pizzas on the menu, and, in a nice Pizza Express-ish local touch, there's even one that includes a 50p donation to Durrell.

I'm back on the low carb diet, so it was one of the free-range rotisserie chickens for me. You get a choice of marinades, I went for the piri-piri one – spot on if you're suffering Nando's withdrawal – and you can choose different sizes; quarter, half or a whole chicken. They all come with chips or perfectly-crispy roast potatoes. You can't beat a good rotisserie chicken, and this one was extra special, plump and juicy after a good roasting in the oven.

“With a waft of woodsmoke as the waitress brought the freshly baked pizza over it took me back to wild gap years in Rome and sitting outside in moonlit piazzas with one rascally ragazzo or another.”

The dessert menu is a roll call of favourites; banoffee pie, bread and butter pudding, sticky toffee pudding and some delicious ice-cream flavours. My banoffee pie was homemade, with fresh banana, caramel sauce and some proper vanilla ice-cream. And the ice-cream really does taste as good as it sounds – try the Maple & Walnut if you don't believe me.

My money's on this being an incredibly popular supper destination, whether it's Valentine's night or not. It's easy dining, with everyone's favourite Italian classics on the menu. The atmosphere's relaxed enough to put everyone at ease, but smart enough to dress up for. It's not expensive – there were plenty of families taking Nan and Gramps out for supper the night we were there, and the Tree House does a 3-course kids menu for £6.95. And although you're not going to find haute cuisine here, what you will get is fresh, top-quality ingredients, cooked perfectly and served in a warm, welcoming environment. And isn't that really what we all want...

lovepotion

This is The Royal Yacht's very own alluring love potion, created to enrapture all those whose lips it passes with its exquisite flavour. Citrus vodka, rose petal vodka, cranberry juice, Maraschino liqueur and a drop of cream make this fresh cocktail a real delight.

Claudio, Restaurants Manager at The Royal Yacht says, 'The Love Potion was created with Valentine's Day in mind; garnished with rose petals and boasting a subtle, sweet fragrance, it inspires romance. However, its wonderful taste means that this cocktail should not be limited to just one day and so will be available throughout February'.

Whether you're meeting your current / prospective love of your life or just fancy an indulgent sit at the bar, treat yourself to a love potion. Who knows what it could lead to...

Flowers to go

With Valentine's day around the corner, you can't possibly go wrong when you say it with flowers. And one of Woodside's stunning hand-tied bouquets of fresh, locally grown flowers is sure not to disappoint. They grow over 25 different flower and foliage crops including lilies, gerberas, lisianthus, phlox, a large variety of daffodils and of course the de rigueur, red rose.

Woodside's large selection of flowers are all home grown in their own nurseries in Trinity, so have a superior freshness and will last longer than flowers grown and shipped from outside the Island. This might also ease your conscience, as it means no airmiles or the huge carbon footprint that over 85% of the flowers sold in the UK are responsible for. Woodside's team of innovative florists, based in their farm shop in Trinity, always have a selection of bouquets freshly made for you to 'grab and go' if you're in a hurry, or you can have a bouquet made for you while you wait. They can even sort postage to your loved one in the UK or beyond through their website, www.flowerexpressjersey.com.

Frozen fish fingers

Spare a thought for our chilly fisherman, battling the wintery wild high seas to bring us lovely fresh fish. February is miserable for fisherman as the sea temperature reaches its lowest but it is good for some species and those brave enough to haul them back to dry land. Peter Gay is Captain Lobster: "Deep water female lobsters are very good at the moment. Deep water bass and pollack are in prime condition for breeding and can be caught on rod and line in good numbers at certain locations. Skate and the occasional cod can be netted close to shore." Captain Lobster sells direct from the vivier tanks in Victoria Pier, from his trailer at Holme Grown (Thursdays and Fridays) and alongside Jon Hackett's pigs in St Brelade (Saturdays and Sundays), for more information on their catch, see www.captainlobster.co.uk.

Experienced fisherman, Kevin Holden from Jersey Fresh Fish, has recently started selling direct from his stall at Lucas Bros Farm Shop on Fridays and Saturdays. Highly recommended, he fishes from his boat the 'Kirsty Lin' and has the freshest scallops, skate, squid and whatever the local seas yield. In February their catch will include turbot, sole, plaice, skate and squid. He has recently been promoting the sale of lesser known species that are abundant in our waters and are extremely good value. For example red gurnard and the curiously-named, pouting and smooth hounds. Kevin says, "Red gurnard tastes similar to chicken, pouting is similar to cod and smooth hounds similar to tuna."

Check out www.jerseyfreshfish.com and leave your email and Kevin will let you know what he has caught each week.

The One to Try Blush

Gallery's style team have been enjoying dropping into St Helier's newest bar Blush to rest our feet after all the sale shopping. It's a great space, chic and contemporary, where you can stop for lunch, supper or cocktails. Everything's luxurious and slightly pink-tinged (it suits our RED issue perfectly!), and you get a birds-eye view of shoppers on King Street from the cosy low-slung booths - perfect for spotting who's been shopping where! The food is predominantly Asian with one of the bestsellers a delicious Wagamamas-style chilli chicken ramen - a one-bowl dish with noodles and vegetables - although there's plenty of familiar favourites on the menu as well. And for cocktail hour grazing, there's a 'Nibbles' bar snacks menu which serves mini versions of some of the most popular dishes on the menu - £3 each or £10 for four.

Blush, 36 King Street, St Helier. Tel: 759420.

Open Mon-Tues 11am-6.30pm, Wed - Sat 11am-11pm. Closed on Sundays. Party bookings also available. Set menu - £15.95 for two courses, £19.95 for three courses - lunch and dinner.

Seasonal Recipe

Spice it up

This has got to be the simplest soup going, but it's perfect for warming up drizzly February days, and using up the local root veg that are in the shops at the moment. The only hard work is peeling and chopping the squash – after that just give it a stir now and again as you relax with a glass of wine and wait for your gorgeous soup!

what you'll need;

A good-sized butternut squash peeled and chopped
 3-4 cloves of garlic, peeled but whole
 2 tsp chinese five-spice powder
 1 tbsp caster sugar
 500ml chicken stock
 50ml jersey dairy double cream

what you'll need to do;

Put everything except the cream in a big saucepan. Bring to the boil, then simmer for about 20 minutes until everything's soft and squidgy. Blitz with a hand-held blender or pour into a liquidizer. Stir in the cream, then ladle into bowls and sprinkle another pinch of five-spice on top before serving. Mmm.

Foodbites

Causing a stir at the Savoy New Head Chef, Philip Kleinschmidt has worked across the globe from prestigious restaurants in London to famous restaurants such as Swizzle Inn in Bermuda. His menu will offer unpretentious but elegant British and French gastronomy at the four star hotel's fine dining restaurant, Montana and more casual dining in the hotel's live jazz bar.

Stars in their eyes

Both the Atlantic Hotel and Bohemia have been awarded a much-coveted Michelin star in the 2010 Michelin guide, again establishing Jersey's place as the only Channel Island with two Michelin-starred restaurants. The much sought after star rating is based on five main criteria; the quality of the products, the mastery of the flavour and cooking, the 'personality' of the cuisine, the value for money along with the consistency between visits.

Hard to believe this was the guy that started the word's standard for fine food...

Jammy tarts....

A tasty bit of food news here... the producers of the Shaun Rankin Range, Gaudins Patisserie, have revealed that they are launching a new product - a delicious Bakewell Tart. Shaun has been hard at work with the Gaudins bakers to produce a tart with buttery pastry and a sticky jam centre. It will soon be available in local shops and supermarkets so keep a look out and be one of the first to taste it!

Martina McGibney, Head of Retail Sales and Marketing, Cimandis, says: 'The Shaun Rankin Range has been a huge success for Cimandis with the Treacle Tart continuing to sell unprecedented amounts. The Bakewell Tart is another take on a British classic and we promise you won't be disappointed - Shaun has created an absolutely delicious product and our Gaudins bakers are proud to be producing it for sale in all our outlets.'

Red red wine

We've found quite possibly the most appropriate red wine for your romantic suppers this month! 'D'Arenberg's The Love Grass' Shiraz 2004 looks great, has a perfect name and tastes amazing. It's named after a wild grass, the lovegrass which grows in vineyards. During vintage, the sticky, velcro-like, long-stemmed flowers of the Lovegrass affectionately attach themselves to the d'Arenberg vineyard workers' socks. They even manage to get caught in Coco, the winery dog's coat and have to be brushed out. This shiraz will linger with you much the same way as the sticky flowers do which is why the family named the wine. Wine Spectator gives it 89 points and says: "Firm and frankly gamy, but plenty of blackberry and plum fruit comes through, emerging and persisting on the finish. A rugged wine that needs cellaring to bring some polish to it."

Five of the best...

Valentine's supper & stay packages

Valentine's Day – it's the eternal quandary. Stay in or go out? Thankfully, Jersey's hotels always come up with a winning solution. A romantic dinner at a top quality restaurant, gazing into your lover's eyes, then instead of having to call a taxi, simply stroll (or stagger) upstairs to your luxurious hotel room. Heaven. And some of them even throw in a spa treatment or two...

Indulge yourselves at the Grand Jersey

How much do you love your other half? Choose from three amazing overnight Valentine's packages – Indulgence with champagne and supper at Victoria's, Seductive Indulgence with dinner at Tassili, Park View room, champagne and rose petal turndown, and then Ultimate Indulgence which also includes dinner at Tassili and rose petal turndown but adds an upgrade to a Sea View room, a dozen red roses and chocolates and an hour's spa treatment for each of you in a VIP twin treatment room. All packages include full English breakfast and use of the Grand's spa facilities.

Valentine's packages: Indulgence – from £95 per person, Seductive Indulgence – from £125 per person, Ultimate Indulgence – from £199 per person. # PORT OUT STARBOARD HOME

Sea views and cutting edge architecture - what more could you want? Set at the top of the cliffs at secluded Portelet Bay, the panoramic sea views are the backdrop to this contemporary light-filled home with its magnificent glass-fronted design.

A coded gate keeps the property secure, and from the front, the property retains its private feel but the rear, sea-facing part of the house has been almost completely opened up with floor to ceiling windows over all three floors allowing the sun to stream in. And to say this property boasts 'magnificent sea views' is an understatement.

From the outside, the property is self-contained, with a secure coded gate leading onto the double garage and parking forecourt. The ground floor is home to three double bedrooms with one ensuite bathroom, the house bathroom, a study, utility room and an integral garage. Climb the spiral staircase to the first floor, where the space opens out to an airy living room with concertina doors through to the open-plan dining room and kitchen, so that the space can be opened up for impressive dinner parties. Step outside onto a wide sea-facing balcony with its own staircase spiralling down to the immaculate lawned patio garden. The top floor, with its breathtaking views, is reserved for the master suite with its exquisite ensuite bathroom - it's a light-filled sanctuary right at the top of this stunning house.

At the southerly tip of the island, this Portelet property really is 'living by the sea', with the colours of the sea providing a constantly changing backdrop to the clean lines of the modern interior. Everything's been provided for in this home with its spacious living areas, top-spec finishes and sophisticated design details. Rooms are finished to a high quality, and feature state of the art technology, as you'd expect in a property of this standard.

BUSINESS

corridor of power revisited

Move in, start out

Jersey's contemporary business centre gives small businesses room to grow.

If you're a small business starting out, you know that having a space of your own, somewhere to meet clients and work on projects in a modern, professional environment, is vital if you want to move forward. But bridging that gap between 'working from home' to a fully equipped office in the centre of town can often seem like an impossible step.

4 Wharf Street is an ideal solution - a convenient range of business suites in the heart of town with flexible and affordable leasing terms that include utilities. The business centre is the brainchild of property developer and entrepreneur Spencer Bourne who realized that flexible models of working were available to small businesses in the UK, but not in Jersey. The old Home Ideas building next to Buddha Bar in Wharf Street became the base for Jersey's newest business centre, with a complete redesign by architects Naish Waddington, turning it into an exciting, modern space tailored to meet the needs of forward-thinking new businesses.

The space

4 Wharf Street is built for impact, and from the moment you walk through the huge front door, with its modern glass front and bold graphic signage, 4 Wharf Street communicates a strong message of contemporary professionalism.

Upstairs on the top floor, the light, bright effect continues with skylights running along the roof letting plenty of natural daylight stream in. Huge pendant lights hang along the central street-like corridor, with office suites either side. They're set at a 'shark tooth' angle, so each office suite, or 'pod' has a visual presence as you look down the corridor. That effect is reinforced by the use of colour - although all the office interiors are white, each one has a pane of different bright-coloured glass jutting out onto the corridor - giving each office its own distinct personality and creating individuality; "I'm in the blue office".

The office suites are designed for flexibility with partition walls allowing two pods to be made into one as businesses expand - and there is a boardroom with free one-hour use for each tenant each week.

The people

Andy Ozouf, who runs Ozouf Advertising Limited has been at 4 Wharf Street since the beginning. "It's been genuinely exciting to move into the hub of St Helier. The offices are full of bright colours and bright personalities, it's a pleasure to be able to bring clients into such an optimistic and creative space".

Next month:

We focus on the new businesses that call 4 Wharf Street 'home'.

Eddie McGrath worked from home for ten years before moving EWM Design & Advertising into his 4 Wharf Street office. "When you're working from home, you find you work all hours of the day and night. But here, when you finish, that's it, you can leave it behind. For me it's been a fantastic move. First there's the wow factor of the building, and secondly because it's so reasonable, my overheads are a lot lower than my competitors and I can pass that saving onto my clients."

The second phase of the development is to extend the light, modern design of the top floor down to the first floor of the building, and create a community of larger 3 to 8-person occupancy units (completion May 2010).

The future

The second phase of the development is to extend the light, modern design of the top floor down to the first floor of the building, and create a community of larger 3 to 8-person occupancy units (completion May 2010). "It was important when I started this that Wharf Street became a business community, a meeting place for different types of businesses, and it's great to see it happening" explains Spencer Bourne. "Because all the businesses are so different, people have been doing business with each other, and recommending each other. And it's been very easy to grow your business, with clients coming in to see one business, and then simply walking across to see someone else". With the top floor businesses thriving and expanding, the second phase will create slightly larger units to suit their growth. "It's a natural progression, as the top floor businesses move down into larger units, that'll free up the smaller units, allowing new businesses to move into the centre".

Cobra loose at the enterprise awards

Founder and Chairman of Cobra Beer to give key note address

The entrepreneur and life peer who co-founded Cobra Beer will address islanders at one of Jersey's most prestigious awards evenings.

'We always aim to provide high profile and inspiring speakers for our annual event,' said Senator Alan Maclean, Minister for Economic Development. 'Thanks to the generous sponsorship of this year's keynote speaker by the Garenne Group, we have once again been able to secure a fantastic speaker who is a successful entrepreneur in his own right.'

The Awards, coordinated by Jersey Enterprise, are designed to recognise the achievements of local businesses, excellence in management and the contribution individuals and organisations make to the island. This year two further awards have been added to enable organisations and individuals to showcase their environmental credentials and management skills.

The Awards would not be possible without the loyal support of long standing sponsors Play.com, Natwest, Jersey Telecom, Garenne Group, Indigo Lighthouse, Guiton Group, Altis Partners and BPP Professional Education plus new sponsors, Jersey Electricity Company and Condor Ferries. Andy Hall, Chief Executive of the Garenne Group, said he was looking forward to the evening: 'Lord Bilimoria is an inspirational speaker with a wealth of experience and knowledge. We're all absolutely delighted that he has accepted our invitation to speak at the Jersey Enterprise Awards evening, which promises to be a lively and thought provoking event.' He added: 'He is a good motivator who can really engage the audience, adding energy and impact.' Karan Faridoon Bilimoria, Baron Bilimoria CBE DL founded Cobra Beer in 1989 with the aim of creating a less gassy lager, more suitable for drinking with curry and other foods. It is now exported to over 45 countries. The brand has a current retail value turnover of £178 million, is sold in nearly 6,000 Indian restaurants and is available to more than 6,000 bars, pubs, clubs, supermarkets and off-licences across the UK. The company diversified into wine in 1999.

In 2009 Cobra Beer entered into a Joint Venture with Molson Coors, the largest family owned brewer in the world. Cobra Beer was awarded 19 Gold Medals at the 2008 Monde Selection, Vienna, World Selection of Quality Awards - including the International High Quality Trophy.

Lord Bilimoria was born in Hyderabad, India, of Parsi Zoroastrian descent (see note 1). He received the Bachelor of Commerce degree from Osmania University; (Indian Institute of Management and Commerce, Hyderabad) in 1981. After working as a chartered accountant for Ernst & Young, he studied for a Bachelor of Arts degree in Law at Sidney Sussex College, University of Cambridge. In 2005, he became Chancellor of Thames Valley University - the United Kingdom's youngest university chancellor at the time - and in 2006

he was chosen as a cross-bench life peer with the title Baron Bilimoria, of Chelsea in the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea by the House of Lords Appointments Commission, becoming the first-ever Parsi in the House of Lords.

The Jersey Enterprise Awards now in their eighth year attract an audience of around 800 people, drawn from all sectors and sizes of local businesses, including politicians, the media, award judges and sponsors. The gala night at which the awards will be presented is planned for 26th February 2010 and will be staged in the Queens Hall, Fort Regent. Guests on the night will be able to enjoy a pre-dinner aperitif thanks to the generosity of Rothschild.

New IOD Director of the Year Awards.

The Jersey branch of the Institute of Directors (IoD) has launched a search to find the top executive and non-executive directors in Jersey's private, public and voluntary sectors for the inaugural 'Director of the Year Awards'. The Awards, which are sponsored by Appleby – one of the largest providers of offshore legal, fiduciary and administrative services – will culminate in nominees and winners being celebrated at a Gala dinner and awards ceremony on Friday 11th June at Hotel de France.

Jersey has a high calibre of individuals in its boardrooms, loungerooms, farmhouses and all manner of locations; men and women who lead their companies forward with courage and dynamism in often difficult trading conditions. The IoD is keen to recognise their achievements, whether members or not. These awards will not only focus on individual achievement, but also on the importance of the director's role in the community and the commitment and expertise contributed to businesses large and small. The definition of 'Director' for the IoD includes anyone that has the responsibilities of a Director but does not carry that specific title e.g. Partner, MD, Chief Executive or President.

The category titles for the Director of the Year Awards 2010 are as follows:
 Emerging Director Award
 Established Director Award
 Female Director Award
 Public/Not for Profit Sector Director Award
 Non-Executive Director Award
 Global Director Award

The Gala dinner and awards ceremony will bring together business leaders for an evening of celebration; offering an excellent opportunity to network with business colleagues and clients and forge new links. A high profile UK business personality has been booked to speak at the awards and details of the speaker and the judging panel will be released in the near future.

Nomination forms, awards criteria and guidelines for entry, will be found on www.iod.com/jersey in the near future. Closing date for nominations is Friday 9th April.

Please note: ENTRIES ARE INVITED FROM BOTH IOD MEMBERS AND NON IOD MEMBERS. Tickets are priced at £75 and the dress code is black tie.

To reserve your place at the Gala Dinner, please contact Kirsten Higgins on 610799 or jedirector@localdial.com.

topmarks

Ten colleagues in the Private Banking Channel Islands team received an early Christmas present when they found out that they had passed various exams.

Marc Roxby, Craig Whitworth, Steve Cullinane, Jackie Turner, Steve Kett, Amanda Youinou and Rob O'Connor (not pictured), all passed the Investment principles unit of the Diploma in Financial Services and are all well on the way to achieving the Diploma in Financial Services. Indeed in Steve Cullinane's instance he has now achieved this financial planning advanced qualification.

Marc Nightingale was successful in unit 2 of the Investment Management Certificate and has now achieved the full qualification. Ian Farmer (not pictured) and Adrian Hick both sat Institute of Directors exams with Ian passing the Certificate in Company Directorship and Adrian gaining success in the Diploma in Company Directorship.

Adrian Hick (Branch Manager) said "I am delighted with so many successes in what are all very demanding exams. We very much encourage colleagues to consider either starting or building on their professional qualifications and this really helps to demonstrate and build their knowledge, confidence and professionalism in their roles. With the focus on the Diploma in Financial Services we are looking to stay ahead of the curve, as the UK FSA has already stated the intention for all Financial Advisers to reach this standard by 2012 and whilst this does not apply to the Islands yet, it does keep us in line with the move to higher level qualifications, enhancing professionalism of investment advisers".

Ellie Stoddart - Exam Success

Ellie Stoddart, a trainee accountant with BDO Alto in Jersey, has been awarded the Sir William McLintock Prize for her performance in the recent sitting of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland exams. Ellie achieved the award in recognition of her result in the Assurance & Business Systems paper at Test of Professional Skills (TPS) level. Ellie was also awarded a Commendation from ICAS for her overall performance in the TPS examinations which places her in the top 5% of students at this examination sitting. Ellie is a second year audit trainee with BDO Alto and commenced her ICAS studies in October 2008. Ellie's course is delivered locally in Jersey by ICAS tutors and she was amongst 730 students sitting the exam nationally.

career advancements

In Bloom

Orchid Communications, the award-winning Jersey PR agency, is pleased to announce the appointment of Andrea Mackenzie as PR Executive. Andrea recently graduated with a first class honours degree from Brighton University in Communications and Media Studies. Whilst at University she was exposed to a broad range of communication sectors within the media and her studies included visual analysis, media law and marketing for media and communication organisations. Andrea also gained experience through a placement with ITV Channel Television. Having tasted the world of accountancy after school, Andrea decided this wasn't the path for her and is now relishing developing her skills in the world of PR and Marketing. Andrea is a core member of the team, providing PR support and undertaking training as a PR Executive. She brings valuable new skills to the team, helping to develop the overall Orchard offering.

New senior role at RBS International to build its funds business

The significance of The Royal Bank of Scotland International's (RBS International) services to the offshore funds market has been recognised with a new senior appointment. Mike Gray, who is currently Deputy Regional Managing Director of Corporate Banking for RBS International offshore, will now have extended responsibilities as Head of Funds for London and Scotland together with the offshore jurisdictions of Jersey, Guernsey, Isle of Man and Gibraltar.

Mike has worked for the RBS group for over 25 years, the last 15 in Corporate Banking. He has been based in Jersey for four years and will travel between the offshore jurisdictions as well as London and Scotland in his new role.

Robert Dingle returns to Mourant

The property law team at Mourant du Feu & Jeune is delighted to welcome back former employee, Robert Dingle, who began his career at the firm in 1973. Robert, who re-joined Mourant du Feu & Jeune as a Senior Conveyancer last month, has a remarkable 37 years' conveyancing experience in Jersey and is highly regarded in the industry. He has held senior positions for a number of property firms in the Island specialising in commercial property and residential developments. Partner Wendy Lambert, head of Mourant du Feu & Jeune's expanding Jersey property law team, said: "We are extremely pleased to welcome Robert back to the Mourant du Feu & Jeune property law team. He is one of the most experienced and skilful conveyancers in Jersey and he will provide our clients with the timely and thorough service they expect in today's highly competitive commercial and residential property market." In his spare time Robert is a keen runner and has run the Jersey Marathon for the past two years, raising money for the Anthony Nolan Bone Marrow Trust. He is also a fan of Formula 1.

Nicholas Cabot joins Ogier

Nicholas Cabot has joined Ogier as a Senior Conveyancer in the firm's Jersey property law team, where he will specialise in residential property. Nick began his career with Le Gallais and Luce in 1974, working in the property and litigation departments. He then moved to Jenners, heading up the conveyancing department which specialised in residential and commercial property as well as securitisation for high street banks. In 2005, Nick joined Crill Canavan as a senior conveyancer. He took a sabbatical in June 2009 before joining Ogier at the beginning of the year. Chris Renouf, head of Ogier's property law group said: "I'm delighted to welcome Nick to the team. With over 35 years' experience, he further adds to our existing knowledge and expertise." Outside of conveyancing Nick is the principal conductor of the Jersey Island Singers, the chorus master of the Jersey Symphony Chorus and the co-director of the International Choir Festival of Jersey. He is also the organist and choir master at Trinity Parish Church and was made an MBE for services to choral music in Jersey in the Christmas Honours list of 2005.

INTO THE RED

Think of the term 'into the red' and you may be excitedly dreaming of raw, fast, high revving, noisy cars that get the blood coursing through your veins faster than an industrial-strength shot of epinephrine administered directly into your heart.

On the flip-side of that, if you've been having a bad year and would rather prefer a cash injection, are desperately clawing onto the hope that 2010 will be more financially stable and the title cast your thoughts more toward how often you've been playing fuel light bingo lately then this article might go further up your street.

In a similar vein, America's 'Motor City' (known as Detroit to the non-petrolheaded public) is famous for producing some of America's big iron - gas guzzling monsters more concerned with their sheer size rather than the size of El Nino - was recently home to more electric and hybrid concepts than you could shake a 1970's gearstick at as they were unveiled at the annual Detroit Motor Show. Hybrids? I know, I'm as little a fan of them as most who aren't obsessing over global warming (still coming out of an ice age, anyone?) but the future seems brighter than you'd think. Here's a roundup:

HONDA CR-Z

Almost disappointingly, the only 100% guaranteed production vehicle we've got here is this one. Now I'm not doubting either its technical or build qualities but let's just say it's not quite as inspiring as the others on the page what with looking like a slightly cut 'n' shut Honda Insight / CRX combo. Hardly groundbreaking, especially considering that's pretty much exactly what it is. What they've done is combined the 1.5 litre engine from the Jazz with an electric motor whizzing out an additional 13bhp to give an overall figure of 122bhp which I guess isn't too bad in a small car that will help save the rainforest. So that future generations can go back to gas guzzlers in a few thousand years, that is...

AUDI E-TRON

Here's a concept that even the most die-hard of fossil fuel burning motoring fans cannot help but get excited by. Just look at it! Not convinced? How does a staggering 1954lb ft of torque take your fancy? Smaller than a TT, weighing in at a mere 1350kg (not to be sniffed at considering the weight of the requisite heavy batteries) and with rear wheel drive, Audi say the E-Tron can get you to sixty-two in 5.9 seconds which is reasonable, but I'm sure all of that torque would make acceleration from around 40 to 80mph nothing short of phenomenal. Plus, if you can find a 400v power supply it'll only take two hours to charge. Electricity substation skeleton key not included.

FIAT 500 BEV

Ingeniously named, the Fiat 500 Battery Electric Vehicle is purely a concept that Fiat are using to suss out whether or not a sporty, compact electric car could work. If they deduce that it does work, using the 500 probably wouldn't be a bad move, although they'd probably have more flamboyant plans being the Italians that they are. Let's not forget this is a purely battery powered vehicle and not a hybrid but nonetheless, seemingly against all odds the 500 has managed to hit the retro spot far better than the BMW Mini did in my opinion and both hide impressive underpinnings when it comes to ride and handling. Go on Fiat, you know you want to...

BMW 1 SERIES ACTIVEE

Like a second generation follow up to BMW's Mini ActiveE that was unveiled in Geneva last year, this model is only going to be supplied on a lease basis at first, with a fleet potentially servicing the London 2012 Olympics. Unlike their Mini ActiveE concept the 1 Series ActiveE manages to seat four thanks to the ingenious game of hide and seek BMW have played with the batteries. If you ever find yourself playing that game, they're under the boot floor and beneath the bonnet, but don't tell anyone I told you. They're promising 168bhp and 184lb ft of torque too which is on par with the current 120i. It will take a little longer to 'fill up' though.

PEUGEOT SR1 CONCEPT

Is it just me, or should somebody at Aston Martin potentially check to see if Marek Reichman's (their head of design) emails have been intercepted recently? Whilst the odds of Peugeot producing cars featuring one-piece carbon fibre bodywork is unlikely, this concept could be an indicator of what's to come both aesthetically and mechanically. The 1.6 litre turbodiesel and 95hp electric motor combination they call the 'Hybrid4' powertrain will make its way into the RCZ and 3008 Crossover being produced imminently and with any luck the rather weird 'nose' we've been seeing on recent Peugeots will be ousted in favour of the sleeker look you see here.

The Red Arrows do not use front-line aircraft because of operating costs. The team uses the RAF's advanced jet trainer, the BAE Hawk T1A. While the Hawk is very basic compared to the much more modern Eurofighter Typhoon, it is still fast enough and very manoeuvrable, ideal for low-altitude aerobatics. The plane also does not have a sat nav or radar or onboard computer. The Red Arrows normally cruise at 360 knots (one nautical mile every 10 seconds).

in the red

Every since Apple broke the monochrome stranglehold with its release of the iPod Mini back in 2004 with all those bag-of-Skittles colour options, gadgets have got a lot more colourful. You can even match your TV to your scatter cushions these days, and for gadgets that are still stuck in the black old days, there's always cases and skins.

So why not match your colour to your mood? Heat things up with an injection of hot red -and for our RED issue, here's our choice of stuff that channels this month's hottest colour perfectly...

Our selected top 5 iPod Nano RED

This year we've seen the release of the new iPod nano. Not only did those clever people at Apple add a suave new video camera, but they also added nine new metallic colours including this lush red !

Nintendo DSi

Valentine's Day is fast approaching and instead of giving your sweetheart the usual unimaginative box of chocolates and flowers combo, what better way to say 'I love you' than with a Nintendo DSi - in hot pink (well it's red for girls isn't it...)

Sony Ericsson

Apart from being sexy red, the Sony Ericsson W995 is the first handset to feature the new SE MediaGo service which can transfer data seamlessly between your mobile phone and PC. Clever thing.

The Ladybug II

With its unique flip-down speaker wings, digital amp and built-in sub woofer, the red Ladybug II gives you big sound with lots of bass in a small package. Add to that stylish design and a soft-touch finish and you've got a new favourite way to listen to music or videos at home or on the go.

Sony's eBook Reader

you can install up to 160 books on it's inbuilt memory and turn 7500 pages before it's battery runs out! This is ideal for people with bad eyesight as you can zoom into make the words bigger.

The Support Lesson is the difference between owning a Mac and actually getting the most from this cutting edge technology.

Here's what people had to say about it...

"I was loving my new Mac, but wanted to know more about some of the cool features, and also wanted to transfer some of my old stuff from my old windows computer - I was thrilled when my partner gave me the iQ Store 1 hr Support Voucher; a member of their support team, Zeb, came to my house and helped me sort everything out, and showed me how to be a computer whizz."

Jenny, 26

"This year I vowed to learn how to use my iMac, after having it for years. I knew I wasn't getting the most out of the computer, I was only scratching the surface on all the applications and not using them to their full potential. I popped into the iQ Store for an hours training, over two days and am so glad I did!"

Phil, 39

"I had been using a PC all my life at work, but for my home computer I chose an iMac, after hearing rave reviews about them. I really needed this 1hr Support Training, and it made the whole transition from PC to Mac so easy. I'm enjoying iPhoto, creating photo albums of my newly extended family and grandson!"

SquareUp

Twitter co-founder, Jack Dorsey, has launched a new mobile payment service, which looks set to take off in a big way in 2010.

The SquareUp service allows anyone to quickly and easily accept physical credit card payments from their mobile phones. The service works by attaching a small device to the phone which swipes the card details and processes the payment online with receipts being sent by SMS and email. Initial support is targeting the iPhone but other devices are to follow shortly, keep a close eye on www.squareup.com

SPORT

Fitness :*Seconds out.....

I'd been putting it off for too long. My new-found addiction to pasta carbonara, all that raiding the Gallery biscuit tin, and polishing off the leftover mince pies has left me with a bit of a tummy that even my trusty Spanx can't hide. People don't say I'm skinny any more, they say I'm looking 'bonny' which everyone knows means 'on the plump side'. I needed someone to get me back into a size 8 pronto. Enter Rai – Jersey's newest personal trainer who promises incredible results with his Spartan-style outdoor training. He's already whipping the Jersey rugby team into shape – so how would he deal with a gym drop-out like me?

Training – Month One

I'm nervous. And I'm right to be. My new trainer's preferred habitat? Outside in a field, with what looks like various instruments of torture lying around. After a warm-up, Rai constructs a circuit for me. We start with ...

Sled-dragging It's a technique used by sportsmen to get them conditioned super-quickly. It works all the body muscles and burns fat fast, really hitting the glutes, quads and hamstrings. Just what I need.

Sledge-hammering There's something about swinging a sledgehammer that feels great. It works out every part of your body, but especially your core muscles, shifting those stubborn pounds in no time.

The Battle Rope It looks like a giant tug-of-war rope, but in my training session, I have to use it as if I'm shaking a sheet out, shaking a wave along it. It's incredibly hard, and pushes me to the limit, but I can feel it working straight away. It hits the core muscles and it's used for muscle endurance and cardiovascular training.

Cardio-boxing This uses boxing techniques and sprints to give you a complete cardiovascular workout, as well as conditioning arms and abs. It's also a great stress-reliever. By the end of it, you feel all punched-out, but your adrenaline and confidence levels are sky high!

Rai's constructed a workout specifically for me, focusing on total body conditioning with brand-new fat-burning techniques that will work fast. Over the first month, he keeps introducing new exercises, routines and equipment so that I don't get bored. In fact the hour we spend training seems to fly by. And there's something about working outside, with the wind in your face, that's so much more invigorating than sitting in a gym. I started off thinking I'd hate it. But by the end of the first month, I'm looking forward to the challenge of every session. Rai's built up my confidence in my own abilities, and having him there, constantly encouraging me to push myself has made a huge difference. And then there's the results! I'm leaner, meaner and much stronger. I've lost half a stone – and I can fit into my skinny jeans again, and it's only been five weeks.

Next month: we add an indoor workout for some ground-breaking core training that promises to get rid of my pot belly... for good.

About Rai

Former British Bodybuilder champion Rai may look like a big softie, but don't be fooled. He was nicknamed 'El Toro' when he was a kid because he was so headstrong. These days, he puts all that determination and drive into training his clients. Qualified as a personal trainer and a strength and conditioning coach, he's currently working with the Rugby Club to get the Jersey team in top shape. Rai specializes in outdoor functional training and has clients ranging from full time mums to managing directors who all get personally tailored one-on-one training sessions.

Rai is also the trainer at St Helier's newest gym, BodyRox in Seaton Place. Get in touch with Rai to find out details of training sessions on 07829 991966. www.teameltoro.co.uk

Men v Women in 5-a-side Fitness Challenge to Raise readyies for Refuge

A MAJOR fundraising event for Jersey Women's Refuge starts this month with two teams of men and women ready to go head-to-head in a weight loss and fitness challenge. The teams of five men and five women will work for eight weeks to lose as much weight as possible following a strict diet and exercise programme.

The team with the highest combined weight loss will be declared the winners but there will also be prizes for the teams and individuals who raise the most money. Among those taking part are Channel 103 presenter Peter Mac, JEP business editor Harry McRandle and even someone from Gallery (eek).

The women's team is captained by Jersey Rowing Club member and estate agent Alison Gallichan and includes Jersey Finance public relations manager Emma Mathew. The event is the brainchild of Ben Boakye, the manager of the Pace Health Club at the Radisson Blu Hotel on the Waterfront. He is devising the diet and exercise programme for each team member and providing both personal and team training sessions throughout the challenge.

'It will be hard for the guys and girls. I am going to make sure it is tough so that both they and the Refuge get the maximum benefit out of what they are doing' he said. Jersey Women's Refuge manager Lorna Kearney said that she was delighted that the challenge had been arranged to support the charity.

'Last year it became clear that we could really struggle to continue unless we found new forms of fundraising.

'I am therefore extremely pleased to be able to urge everyone to support the teams in their fundraising endeavours,' Mrs Kearney will be able to play her part directly by ensuring that her prison officer husband and member of the men's team, Alan Kearney, sticks closely to his diet when he eats at home!!

The eight week challenge will close with a party following the final weigh-in of the two teams on the evening of Friday 26 March at the Radisson. Women's team captain Alison Gallichan said: 'We will beat those boys because women work better together and can multi-task more effectively.' However, men's captain Chris Tanguy was not having that. 'Men are more single-minded and that will see us through,' he said.

Look out for an update next month

On your bike.

The Good Health Trixter X-Dream Bike

What do you get when you cross an interactive fitness bike with an advanced computer system? The ultimate in mountain biking simulation. The Xdream indoor bike created by Trixter, incorporates cutting edge gaming technology with the only indoor fitness bike to work both the upper and lower body for a challenging workout that engages both the mind and the body.

The Xdream brings the thrill of mountain biking indoors with its patented laterally moving X-Bar handlebars accurately simulating the action of cycling outdoors. The Xdream allows you to steer through more than 400 cycling trails, from arid desert to densely forested highlands and race alongside virtual competitors who set the pace and push you to your limits. An LCD screen fixed above the X-bars displays the chosen terrain and an on-screen avatar. Sensors are embedded in the seat, handlebars and pedals, so your every movement is replicated on screen. When you turn right, your virtual avatar turns right on screen. This is gaming technology at its best, allowing users to become fully immersed in their workout, shifting their focus towards completing the courses and beating the other riders.

SPORTPROFILE

BEN MURRAY

AGE: 25SCHOOL: St Luke's and Le RocquierFAVOURITE ANIMAL: sharksFAVOURITE FOOD: pasta or fillet steakFAVOURITE BOXING EXPRESSION:

If in doubt, stick the jab out!

When did you start boxing?

First started boxing aged 11, but had my first fight aged 12.

Was there anything that inspired you to start boxing?

A few of my friends were doing it and we had a friend of the family who was a professional boxer. (Billy Schwer)

What is your worst boxing accident?

I have not really received any major injuries from boxing yet - apart from a few bumps and scraps. However, I do remember I badly sprained my ankle on my way to the ring for a fight.

Who is your favourite boxer and why?

Ricky 'Hitman' Hatton. He is a great boxer and a great servant to the sport, but most of all because he always has time for his fans and is a true warrior.

Are you a big fan of Rocky?

Of course! You've got to love Rocky!

Where and when was your favourite boxing moment?

I was going to Philadelphia in the US with with an Irish select team for one week of training. It finished with a fight against an American team, and I won.

How can people get into boxing in Jersey?

They can get involved with my boxing classes (males and females) or can visit Southill Boxing club.

What competition have you done most recently, and how did you do?

My most recent competition was the ABA Championships, in which I reached the Western Counties Final.

New you.

Words Tania Rodriguez

It's that time of the New Year where we are keen to stick by our New Year's resolution. Probably the most popular resolution is to get fit and lose weight.

Take some time and consider all these reasons. It could be for self-confidence, a health issue, the opposite sex, or money. Whatever your reasons are, as long as they are important to you, then that is what matters.

The best way to keep you motivated is to set yourself short-term goals and once reached, set yourself another short-term goal. This will keep you positive and successful in what you are aiming to achieve.

Transforming ourselves physically is an achievement and staying proactive gives you focus to stay on the right path. If you find getting started in fitness is hard, hire yourself a personal trainer to get the support and clear instructions you need. They will help educate and motivate you while being committed to improving your lifestyle.

Whether you're just getting started or if you're at a routine plateau, a personal trainer can suggest different methods of training. Most personal trainers will offer lots of choice, such as outdoor training, boot camp style, in home training, kettle bell training which will all keep you seeing changes. Having support from a friend or family member always helps you stay in the right frame of mind, it will help keep you positive.

Why not try an activity, class or personal training session with a friend, you will more than likely have a lot of fun and you will be inspired to try more sports and stay determined in achieving a healthy active lifestyle.

2010 isn't just another year for you. 2010 is the year. All the past failures don't matter from now on. I want to close by wishing you the best of luck and congratulations in advance for making 2010 your year.

Coaching Camps At Half Term To Introduce Children To Rugby

Children of primary school age have the opportunity to take part in a rugby coaching session during the half term holiday with Jersey's Rugby Club professionals. Sponsored by FirstRand Private Wealth Management, the sessions are intended for children from School Years 3 - 6 (ages 7 - 11) and will be led by David McCormack, the Jersey Rugby Development Officer.

Players will participate in a wide range of activities aimed at increasing the skill level required for the game in its various forms. The youngest group will be able to practice tag rugby skills while Year 4 and above will participate in contact situations so gum shields will be a necessity. David McCormack said: 'This course is ideal for children who have never played rugby before or those who may have enjoyed their first taste of the game at school or on a previous course, and would like another opportunity to learn more about the skills needed to play.'

Application forms can be downloaded from: jerseyrugbydevelopment.com or can be collected from the main office of the Jersey Rugby Football Club, or the majority of schools and sports centres. Sessions start at 10 a.m. and are of three hours duration. The fee is £15. They take place on Monday, February 15 (Grainville School), Wednesday, February 17 (Jersey Rugby Football Club) or Thursday, February 18 (Les Quennevais School).

Heidi Hi

Hustle are kick starting the new year later this month with a new face to the Roster, in fact a new face to Jersey's club scene - BBC Radio 1's Heidi. Heidi will play for the first time in Jersey at the newly refurbished Pure Nightclub which has just reopened its doors.

Heidi originates from Canada and spent most of her teenage years traveling to and from gigs in Detroit, across the Michigan border. This left a deep impression on Heidi and her record collection which in turn lead her into the electronic side of music which gradually moved into a love for techno and house music. Regular slots at London's Fabric and releases on the number 1 label Get Physical label as well as touring world wide and holding a residency in Berlin have lead to Heidi playing alongside some of the world's greatest and now this talented lady is easily a headliner in some of the biggest and best club nights globally.

Heidi is now into her second term at Radio 1 in which she hosts the infamous 'In New DJs We Trust' alongside four other gifted DJs - an acknowledgment from the industry of just how good this house and techno-driven hardworking DJ is. After last month headlining for Renaissance at the launch of their new residency at London's Cable Nightclub Hustle welcome Heidi to Jersey for a night for all the real music lovers!

'MADCHESTER REVISITED'

On Thursday 25th February 2010, The Drift will be hosting 'Madchester Revisited', involving a 'double header' tribute to both Oasis and Stone Roses, as Definitely Mightbe and Adored, respectively.

'Definitely Mightbe' and 'Adored' are made up of the same five piece band, covering the drums, rhythm guitar, lead guitar and vocals. With over nine years' experience of performing together, they have firmly established themselves within the tribute music industry, recognised by critics for their developed acts and quality of sound.

The band have had a number of achievements to validate their position as an authentic and reputable tribute band, including playing at The Matthew Street Festival in Liverpool to crowds of over 25,000 for the last four years running. Moreover, the band's Ian Bares' physical likeness to Liam Gallagher is so unmistakable that he has worked as a lookalike, appearing on channels such as Channel 4, Sky TV, Richard and Judy. Ian has also been used in advertising campaigns, which have appeared in Q Magazine and Loaded.

The Stone Roses are regarded as one of the most influential rock bands active in England during the 1980s and early 1990s, with many hailing them as the instigators of Britpop, a genre that was subsequently developed by Oasis. Along with other bands, such as Happy Mondays, they unconsciously comprised the core of the 'Madchester Baggy Scene', centred round Manchester, where the latter band would also form in 1991. With 'Adored' also originating from Manchester, the early influence of Stone Roses and exposure to Oasis has ensured that their reproduction of the original bands' performances are both accurate and well-developed. Since the Stone Roses are cited as a significant influence to the music of Oasis, it is of little surprise that the tribute band has been able to put together such skilled and accomplished performances in imitation of both bands with neither tribute act coming at the expense of the other.

With 'Definitely Mightbe' performing hits such as 'Roll With It', 'Wonderwall' and 'What's the Story', and Adored playing hits such as 'Waterfall', 'She Bangs the Drums' and 'I am the Resurrection', 'Madchester Revisited' will be offering two highly impressive shows, certain to please all those who are after a taste of the Manchester music scene.

Conversation Starter

Red Eye (slang for cheap/strong whisky -possibly because it often left you red-eyed in the morning), was alternatively named for its crimson tint, which, in lieu of ageing it in a barrel, saloon-keepers would conspire by adding whatever was on hand, including soap, red ink, red peppers, chewing tobacco, Jamaica ginger, tea, coffee, molasses and bitters.
