Tanguy's Presents

Style & Substance

Are you waiting for the next Big Event?

Saturday 13th October 2012

Tanguy's presents 'Style & Substance' is coming back to Grand Jersey after the success of Defected in the House. This time the event promises to be one of the most decadent and sophisticated events to date.

The Three World Class DJ's that we have booked will be announced in the next edition of Gallery and will guarantee a night to remember.

Tickets for this event will be on sale from 1st August 2012 from Tanguys Bar. VIP booths and exclusive overnight after party packages will be announced soon.

Contact Tracy to pre-order your tickets or discuss any concierge requirements that you have.

It seems a little inappropriate to be discussing the theme 'hot' after what has been the most useless, overcast June in a long while. As much as warm wet concrete is my favourite smell I'd love if the 'warm' could be a little more forthcoming. I have faith that it just means that it's going to go all 'Indian' on us and we'll still be barbequing on the beach as we're licking the melted chocolate out of our advent calenders. Pray with me people.

For those that took part in our fifth Galleryrally last month June did, at least, hold a few days of sunshine. 26 ralliers chased the sunshine to the South of France, raising money for Jersey Hospice Care. After a year off last year it was great to be back in the driving seat, albeit of our delivery van. Maybe a tad out of place amongst the lovelies of St Trop, but who cares. See our rally roundup on pg. 18. Maybe next year we'll borrow, beg or steal something more suitable. We check out bargain second hand motors built for sunshine on pg.140. If our summer predictions come to fruition we might make use of their open tops to carry bulky items of Christmas shopping.

If it does warm up you could do worse than taking a trip to the Minquiers. Jersey Seafaris took team Gallery out on one of their trips last month and we basked in the eerie solitude of sand islands, read about it on pg. 136. From backwash to washouts, Chris looks at the Jubilee and what it means to be British. (pg. 16) as well as taking a look at the greatest heists and thefts of all time. Melted £3m statue anyone? (pg. 32). Our guest interviewing chef Joe Baker caught up with the Jersey Potteries' bigwigs to grill them on local provenance, a theme carried through to this month's illustrated guide to what REALLY consistutes locally caught fish (pg. 94).

I'm off to do a sundance.

Hot or not

SUMMER 2012'S TRENDS EXPLAINED,

WORDS GRACE RYAN ■ ILLUSTRATION BEN ROBERTSON

Hooray! British summertime is here. You can tell because town is flooding and I've only had to turn my heating on every other day. Just let me check my phone to make sure I haven't slept through August and woken up in November...in Manchester.

Fear not, you soggy monsters. The month of June may have been wetter than an otter's pocket, but my uber-reliable super secret journalist sources (Yahoo Answers) inform me that this summer's tipped to be an absolute scorcher. It will literally be so hot that you might as well have booked a holiday on the planet Mercury. Take it from me, there's still plenty of time for a traditional Jersey summer - the ladies can spray themselves the colour of a cheap wardrobe, the price of beachside Cornettos will go up another quid and we can grow chubby on a diet of charred meat marinated in Pimm's.

Summertime also means something special for us journalists, as it's that time of year when we get to gaze into our crystal balls and compose lists telling you what to do, think and throw up. If we're lucky, we also get to repay all the free meals and bikini waxes we get given by bigging a few people up. I know that most of us did the same thing right before Christmas, but the makers of Preparation H will not be satisfied until I've squeezed a plug for their product in somewhere.

Without further ado, here are my sizzling tips for a summer that's hotter than a pint of piri piri in your pants. Preparation H: it soothes the burn.

SCORCHING HOT FASHION

The ongoing revival of 90s style has seen fashionistas from Hoxton to Le Hocq kitted out like a cross between Pat Butcher and a dancer from Dreamscape. Preening knobbers everywhere have tried their hardest to look like an East German Jimmy Saville so, short of raiding a clown's wardrobe and rolling in paint, there isn't much to do to make yourself more garish than the next muppet. The true trend-setter must always stand out, and the solution is the look pioneered by that true fashion renegade: your gran.

The vogue for ironic wolf shirts and hideous playsuits means that even raiding mum's 80s wardrobe is passé, so the prettiest young things have delved deep to borrow gran's shapeless long coat, surgical stockings and those little fluffy boots with zippers on the side. Fake hearing aids are the new hipster glasses, and the word on the street is that a blue-rinsed Kate Moss is rocking a cardigan covered in cat hair and a tartan trolley on wheels.

Hotness rating: electric blanket on maximum

HOT HITS - SUMMER JAMS

I spent the 1996 August bank holiday semi-conscious in a paddling pool full of wee, listening to Whigfield's 'Saturday Night' and 'Summertime' by Jazzy Jeff and The Fresh Prince on repeat until one of my kidneys blew up. It's no surprise I developed a violent reaction to all summery music, and so am way ahead of the curve on this season's trend for miserable, doomy sounds. Forget playing Bob Marley and the Macarena at your beach barbecue - the cool kids are cooking sausages to the hottest underground genre out there right now: Norwegian black metal. Tired of bands that normal people can enjoy, hipsters have foresworn pop music and indie in favour of the guttural howling of men who worship Odin and dress like a bunch of S&M goblins.

Next time you're at a garden party, if the DJ won't play Gorgoroth's 'Possessed (by Satan)' or the timeless 'I Am The Black Wizards' by Emperor, you should stand at the corner and scowl at them until they get the message - when the sun is shining, let's all listen to Darkthrone.

Hotness rating: 666 degrees, the burning evil fires of hell

HOT CELEBRITIES

In an age where you can see nipples on CBeebies and there's a camera in the toilet in Big Brother, it's fair to say that celebrities have lost a lot of their mystique. What was once glamorous, mysterious and untouchable has been revealed to fart in the bath and eat Super Noodles for dinner. Where are the real celebrities to admire, emulate and occasionally kidnap?

The answer is: on trial in The Hague, because the hottest celebrities now are the dictators. They look good, live lives of luxury and play by their own rules - right til the point they're paraded on camera by US Special Forces, or get shot up in a rusty pipe. Soon Heat magazine will give up on Cheryl Cole in favour of Vladimir Putin, and the pages of Hello will be graced by photo-shoots with Bashar Al-Assad, a few African guys in combat fatigues and whoever's currently in charge of Sark. Kanye West and Kim Kardashian move over - until you've got a gold-plated fighter jet you're strictly B-list.

Hotness rating: hotter than hiding out in the Sahara

HOT FILM

With cinemagoers still reeling from the surprise twist in Ridley Scott's Prometheus (SPOILER: the aliens are The Clangers), this summer promises so many event movies that popcorn supplies will be strictly rationed to a teacup each (£11 plus GST). After the Oscar-winning turn of a waxwork of Rihanna in board-game-turned-blockbuster BattleShip, coked-up Hollywood moguls have rushed to release big-screen adaptations of other thrilling games of skill and plastic. I for one cannot wait to see Lady Gaga in Yahtzee: the Movie, Will Ferrell as 'the patient' in Operation! or for the release of Buckaroo 2: Plastic Boogaloo.

Aside from a movie version of every single comic superhero ever, also expect the cinema to be flooded with reboots of any 80s franchise that managed to con mum out of twenty quid's worth of toxic plastic for your ninth birthday. We've had Transformers, Scooby Doo and Thundercats, so try and keep down your hotdog for the unbridled excitement of 3D versions of Sabrina The Teenage Witch, Around The World With Willy Foggy and Pob.

Hotness rating: a mouth full of mouldy mustard

A RIGHT ROYAL SHAMBLES:

JUST THE WAY US BRITS LIKE IT

WORDS CHRIS BELL ■ ILLUSTRATION CHELSEA WHITE

British summertime institutions wouldn't be British summertime institutions without the pesky rain (Latin. Precipitatum Irritatus) having its say in proceedings. The annual Wimbledon showers, Glastonbury mud baths and general raining on of any parade of note are as British as jam on toast, so it was with a warm, fuzzy sense of familiarity that the nation tuned into the Queen's Jubilee to witness an absolute shower, in more than one sense of the term. I must make clear that I'm not a republican or anti-monarchist in any way; I'm more or less on the fence, if anything leaning slightly towards a pro-royal stance. That's a topic for another time, however.

So it wasn't with a sense of shadenfreude that I watched the BBC's coverage of the Jubilee River Pageant Soaking – well, no more than as if the celebrations had been in aid of anyone, literally anyone. More a sense of cosy nostalgia from seeing possibly the most shambolic live televised event since the nation bathed in Samantha Fox and Mick Fleetwood's embarrassment at the chaotic Brit Awards in 1989. Look it up younglings. It was the sort of charming shambles that Britain used to excel at. Once upon a time, awkward interviews, clunking links and overall shoddiness were a weekly feature on game shows, live news programs and the like. Now with television's typically slick professionalism and the general public's increased sense of media savvy-ness, howling TV moments are a rare commodity. Like an ageing boxer, there are occasionally flashes of our brilliance at this sort of thing, but the glimpses are increasingly rare these days. Continuing the ageing boxer analogy (indulge me), the Right Royal Shambles was akin to George Foreman coming out of retirement to win the world heavyweight title at the grand old age of 45, a defiant middle finger aimed at time's winged chariot. In the case of the Jubilee River Pageant, a vintage display of quintessential English rubbishness.

I'm less interested than most commentators were in the BBC's misjudged decision to feature reports by Tess Daly and Fearne Cotton on such inane gimmickery as Jubilee sickbags. That element of the awful coverage was totally avoidable, down to the BBC underestimating the intellectual capacity of its viewers, and therefore, just boring. What made the six-hour long live program such an absolute belter of a watch for me were the inescapable bloopers that were nigh-on possible to predict. It was so from the off, when the cameras cut from the studio to a village hall party in Norfolk, during which the reporter asked a four year-old girl, “So, how are you enjoying the Jubilee celebrations?”

“With the rain lashing them and matted, soaked hair stuck to their dripping faces, it was a tiny bit very funny, and I for one was hoping the Queen would lose composure and break out in hysterical laughter”

Her response, with all the candour of a toddler untrained in diplomatic niceties, and all the enthusiasm of someone asked to bathe in hot tar:

“I've been here for HOURS.”

And it continued, in this vein, for hours. Other highlights were the display of a ‘special Jubilee buffet’ aboard one of the flotilla of boats on the Thames, complete with waterlogged vol-au-vents and rain sandwiches. Oh, and let's not forget the BBC-commissioned attempts to recreate Canaletto's famous 1747 painting of the Lord Mayor's river procession. By the time the downpour was done with the artists' attempts, they looked more like Cornetto's.

Of course, who can forget the line of drowned rats regaling the Queen with the national anthem at the end? It would be impossible not to sympathise with the choir, for whom this clearly should have been a proud moment. But, with the rain lashing them and matted, soaked hair stuck to their dripping faces, it was a tiny bit very funny, and I for one was hoping the Queen would lose composure and break out in hysterical laughter. The final piece de resistance came with the commentator's attempts to look on the bright side by noting that, “the wow moment is due any minute now, a fly past of nine naval helicopters in diamond formation, which will hopefully make the wait in the rain worthwhile for these spectators.” Followed, a heartbeat later, by “I'm getting news that due to the conditions, that wow moment has been cancelled.” It was perfectly farcical, and farcically perfect.

But hey, this is what being a Brit is all about right? Leave the slick stuff to the Americans I say. A good old washout gives us the chance to exercise those classic British traits of turning the other cheek, taking it on the chin, stiff upper lip, all of which, if attempted simultaneously, result in sort of a gurn, as demonstrated by the Duke of Edinburgh as he braved the weather aboard the Good Ship Hopeless. Here's to another ten years and another Jubilee for dear old Queenie. If the next one's sunny though, tune in to something else.

'La vièvre et la tortue'

THE TORTOISE TRIUMPHS

■ WORDS BD

One of the most common questions we get asked about the rally is 'Don't I need a fast car?' This year we proved that, as much as enjoying endless straights with beautiful scenery, winding chicanes and private racetracks, it's also fun to enjoy the rally in a vehicle with far less horsepower. And far more storage space.

The rally really snuck up on us this year. In previous years we've taken a Jeep. Unfortunately a local car retailer that deals in such brands had our Jeep in their possession for 4 months this year and then gave it back broken. They want £1000 more to re-fix damage caused by their neglect so, with the rally approaching, we had to look for another option. Without a stable of cars to choose from we opted for our trusty steed, the Gallery Distro delivery van. She's been circling the Island for us for years and we must owe her a trip to the French riviera by now.

There was some concern over conditions as a force 7 had ferries running for a harbour the night before we were due to depart. Fortunately, following our send off coffee and bacon rolls courtesy of the Royal Yacht Hotel, Poseidon and Mother Nature calmed things just enough to allow Condor Rapide to power over the undulating ocean and safely to St Malo. As usual, in addition to a first hidden clue in our competitor pack, we had a challenge for a ferry. To avoid Google's ability to answer just about every quiz question in previous years this year our organiser had a new plan; a massive word search. I'm sure it's been a while since you had the time or inclination for a wordsearch....you're missing out.

Our 24 Jersey ralliers rolled off the ferry to meet the organisers, marshalls and a couple from the UK who, on learning the ferry from the UK to Jersey was cancelled, had driven to Folkstone and down through France early doors to meet us in time for the start.

With the First day's clues in hand we set off. There's something fantastic about setting off on a mission with only a vague plan of your route. Having solved our four clues to find the day's stop points we were pretty sure we were on the right path, but still managed to do a figure of eight just outside St Malo. Our first 'Location' clue was French bridge or a close relative - just East of St Malo we located the answer; a small town called Pontorson. Fortunately we arrived there before all the others had left and joined a few teams for a croque monsieur. The day went well and we crossed beautiful countryside and passed through quaint towns. The loving smile of rural French pensioners when they see a ground of Rosbifs fly through in convoy is truly a site to behold.

Evenings on the rally are everything you'd expect of a French holiday with good food in a rural French hotel; tasty morcels, flowing wine and good times as everyone waits to see how they've fared with clues during the day. Fortunately for us we seemed to be holding our own, sharing the top spot with a few die hard ralliers, some of whom already had their name engraved as winners on the GalleryRally trophy.

The first night saw us staying at a familiar location; a beautiful country hotel with a windmill and cracking food we stayed at on the rally in 2009. Ralliers socialised into the night and morning. That's the beauty of the Rally, no-one is going to berate you for burning your candle at both ends provided you're capable of being up and at 'em. Even a dip in the pool at 3am didn't hamper our classic camper driving team...

Day two took us to Fontevraud-l'Abbaye (clue: holy place but confused Advent four) - an amazing Abbey that had an incredible and chequered past. The abbey became a prison from 1804 to 1963, in which year it was given to the French Ministry of Culture. Having been restored it now fuses incredible architecture with a modern art exhibition and a stylish >>>>>> cafe. We had a coffee. Great Florentines. Other clues took us to pretty little towns and hunting for doorbells. On arriving at our destination for the evening, Bonnat, there were no cars in the carpark. Chip had arranged for a private racetrack nearby to be opened for our ralliers to get the most out of their cars for a few laps.

One of our R8s got a little more than that, spinning off in great style. Fortunately the car and driver were both unscathed. We wiled away the hours after dinner with some games of pool and I was fresh enough the next morning to make use of the pool. You know how swimming pools at hotels sit there, taunting you, calling you lazy. I wasn't going to be defeated. Ahead of our day Chip had devised another non daytime quiz; a time trial to name as many of the 44 presidents of the USA as you could. Fortunately with some well remembered song lyrics and a bit of Bill&Ted we managed to come out at the right end of the field.

Our rainy day three (the only rainy day in 5 years of rallies) took us to Privas, stopping for lunch at Le Chaise Dieu in the sort of restaurant where you wonder if they've EVER had a customer before. Privas, in the Ardeche was the location for this year's paper aeroplane challenge. Ben's brute force won us the prize for distance but the engineering of Adam and Chris was easily enough to grasp first place in the design category (below) - it even had a proper fuselage. Sadly for our UK entrants the mountains and mist had proved too much for their 911 speedster and they arrived for a late dinner courtesy of a long taxi ride. The pool at Privas also proved too tempting for a few ralliers (us included) and we got a few early hours swimming races in to work off the Vin de Table and bottles that followed.

Adam and Chris's award winning plane. 60 valuable points worth.

We awoke to learn that the Speedsters had a new means of transport. As it seemed a bit tricky to get back to their car and a hire car was to be troublesome, they hopped into the back of Karl and Neil's classic VW Kombi for a 'Summer Holiday' style final day. After breakfast we had an extra challenge for the day; to find a pineapple, a melon, two red hats and some lavender in order to fill a clue later that day. It was to get a photo at the summit of Mt Ventoux, a famous Tour de France stage. The cyclists at the summit looked a little bemused when a slew of J plated supercars came over the brow and parked up amongst their steeds.

Safely off the mountain and after a quick motorway section we arrived on the beautiful coast of St Tropez just before sunset to the usual amazing finale hotel where you feel you're suddenly a high roller. Thankfully the 900 euro a night rate was for the other guests. Part of your entry fee ensures a great deal on the hotel!

A gala dinner, a firework display over the superyachts moored offshore and a win (the first in five years) for team Gallery couldn't have finished the rally off in any better form. Some ralliers snuck off early and others came to our room to do the best to drink their prize wine, kindly sourced and distributed by our cluemaster. Four days of stories and we're still counting up the fundraising total and following up next month. Here's looking forward to next year!

We could only do a brief overview here. Garry and Mike, our most consistent champion ralliers, have an amazing blog of all past Galleryrally and Tour de Liberation at www.itsanevoadventure.org.je Please check it out!

GALLERYRALLY: THE FIRST FIVE YEARS

WORDS BD ■ ILLUSTRATION CHELSEA WHITE

It's hard for Jersey to shake off the Hungerford effect; the perception for outsiders that every Jersey inhabitant still lives the 80s highlife when millionaires wore double breasted jackets, spent all day holding a champagne flute and could afford to live in more than a semi detached house.

When I first moved to Jersey a client told me about a car rally. It was to San Sebastian in Spain and he was heading there in his Porsche. A performance car rally across Europe, stopping in on a Guggenheim museum seemed like the thing of dreams. It was a charity event and sounded like the sort of activity reserved for old Chuckles Hungerford and his Royal Barge dwelling contemporaries (that's The Old Courthouse to those living a life outside of Bergerac, the TV series rather than the French town).

But this wasn't ITV, this was real, for real people. It was called the 'Tour de Liberation' and was organised as a fund raiser for the Bush Hospital Foundation. I didn't find this out until 2008 when we were approached to help reshape the event after it had stalled in 2007. We proposed to use our little magazine as an outlet to promote and means to rebuild the event and raise money for a new benefactor; Jersey Hospice Care.

With a few years in Jersey under my belt and a better understanding of the Island and how it works, we saw it as a great project we could throw Gallery's weight behind and the galleryrally was launched.

Over the last five years we've travelled thousands of miles and raised thousands of pounds for worthy charitable causes. We're hoping this year will see our total for the five years reach £150,000 for Jersey Hospice Care. That's a lot more than we'd have achieved with some boot fairs. It's all down to passionate ralliers that see the benefit in using their valuable summer holiday days to do some good.

We've been to the South coast of France three times, to Barcelona and through the Alps to Geneva. Each route covering spectacular countryside and breathtaking views. We've battled through Chip's clues and challenges and learnt a few things along the way. We've also grown a small but connected Alumni of ralliers who all have fantastic shared memories.

A massive thanks to our previous years' sponsors; Sure Mobile and Jacksons in 2008, Moore Stephens in 2009 and Peritus in 2010/11. Thanks also to the Royal Yacht and The Grand Jersey for helping us with breakfasts and rooms.

Next Year Chip has a new route planned, one that will fill in that big area of the above map with no Gallery Rally lines. Watch out Western France, we're coming.

EYE OF THE TIGER

LOUISE BRALSFORD

AS HAPPENS ALL TOO OFTEN in my life, I have found myself in a nightmare situation. I have switched one island for another and spent a fair few hours travelling to Cyprus, in search of sunshine and a tan. The flight went smoothly, the taxi turned up, the hotel is great. But instead of basking gloriously in the sun alongside the long-limbed beauties lined up by the pool, I am cringing at the bar downing my third alcoholic beverage of the day (it's not lunchtime yet). It's my second day, and I can't believe I've already let this happen. I also can't believe the lack of sympathy from my travel companion.

I try my best to adhere to the slip, slop, slap rules of sunbathing. Yesterday morning, I slipped on a bikini - I know it's meant to be a shirt/kaftan/burka but how on earth will you tan in one of those? - slopped on factor 30 from the neck down and 50 from the neck up, and slapped on a rather excellent straw hat and some sunglasses. I settled down to read my book. Salmon Fishing in the Yemen. Wildly different to the film, and very enjoyable. Anyhoo, I reapplied both sunscreens regularly and popped into the shady pool bar to avoid the hotter lunchtime rays. Shady in both senses, actually, since it was out of the hot sun and also full of dodgy Russians wearing big gold watches and startlingly bright short-sleeved shirts. Having had my afternoon snooze, I went back to the hotel room where there was a full-length mirror. My expectations weren't unreasonable. I wasn't expecting Gisele or Megan Fox to stare back at me, I was just hoping for a less translucent version of my usual self. Alas. Shock horror and mortification don't even come close to my reaction. I had committed the schoolboy error of leaving a nice four-inch band under my...hum, not sure what word to put here...bust?...anyway, there, un-slopped and un-slipped. And what's more, I hadn't slopped properly on my “Shock horror and mortification don't even come close to my reaction. I had committed the schoolboy error of leaving a nice four-inch band under my...hum, not sure what word to put here...bust?”

tummy, which created a rather artistic but undesirable effect.

I am by no means a sit-up devotee, preferring instead to spend half an hour each day watching crap TV and eating Kettle Chips than exercising. As you can therefore imagine, I am a victim of Spare Tyre Syndrome whenever I am in any position other than lying completely flat, stretching my arms as far away from my toes as possible, and sucking in. And so, when I had been reading about the breeding habits of salmon and the Yemen's climatic variation, the tops of my stomach rolls, or peaks, if you will (I am just realising now that this is too much information to be sharing with people I don't know) had been exposed to the sun, but there were parts of my middle which were in the folds and so remained untouched by the beams.

And now I was standing, aghast, a sweating mess with a striped midriff. I slathered the angry red and pudgy white pattern with aftersun, willing it to magically turn into smooth, brown (toned) skin. No luck. The next morning it had not abated in the slightest. So now I was perched on an awkwardly high stool by the pool bar, planning my next move, draining the last dregs of my drink.

“It's fine,” I tell myself. “No one's going to care what you look like. No one's interested in your sunburn. And it doesn't matter anyway, they're strangers! Who cares what they think? Well, me, clearly. But I'm oversensitive like that. Better to be oversensitive than thick-skinned...argh we're back to skin...OK, here goes...” I ventured towards the bank of sunbeds. And then walked around the swimming pool. And then came back to the bar. And ordered another drink.

SUN CREAM SAVES PIGLET'S BACON

Farmers in Cumbria are applying sun cream to the delicate ears of three piglets to stop them turning into crackling in the sunshine. The trio are Belgian Pietrain pigs, noted for their white piebald skin and big ears which can easily burn in hot weather.

Named Queen, Diamond and Jubilee, the two-month-old piglets live at the Lakeland Maize Maze and Farm Park at Sedgwick near Kendal. Pig skin is very similar to human skin and because the piglets are so young their ears aren't used to the plus 24c temperatures.

Farmer Graham Wadsworth, 41, said: "White skinned pigs can get sunburnt quite easily so when we are quick enough to catch them we're putting sun cream on their ears especially." "We're also making sure they have mud baths which is a natural sun screen for pigs. The irony is the pigs are white we don't want them to go red because it'll make me blue - perfect for the Jubilee. "They're proving very popular with our young visitors because they're inquisitive, playful and love to come up close for a scratch."

'I dunno what you're oinking about mate, at least I'm not the one called Queen...'

10P PRICE

A former RAF man and dispatch rider from Leicestehas resorted to extreme measures to deter cold calling telephone salesmen - by adding an extra nine 'P's to his name. Tim Ppppppppppprice, 49, explained: "It's pronounced Tim Per-per-per-per-per-per-per-per-per-per. Mr Ppppppppprice, said he had no regrets. He now refers to himself as Tim '10p' Price.

It cost £30 to change his name via deed poll and a further £70 to change the name on his passport. "I've just got my driving licence and passport back. I'm looking forward to the next time I go abroad - it should raise a few eyebrows going through customs," he said. "It's taken a long time to sort everything out, but I don't regret it. I hope the name acts as fly repellent to those people - and it attracts funny people with a good sense of humour."

Next time Tim goes away on holiday we hope he doesn't forget to p-p-p-pick up his passport before he leaves the house.

If you have ever searched 'hot videos' into any search engine you'll be faced with lots of stills of female anatomy and things about chillis, but eventually we managed to find one more appropriate.

Remember the volcano with the unpronounceable name that cleared European airspace for days on end? It's about that. Called Winter in Hell, it was filmed over the course of a year by Enrique Pacheco. The stunning landscape of Iceland succumbs to the Arctic cold. The earth shakes, warms up, and suddenly a big crack opens up at the top of the glacier Eyjafjallajökull. Lava, smoke, ash and fire come up from the depth of the earth, melting everything in its path.

HOT DESK HEROES

WORDS Louise Bralsford ILLUSTRATION Russ Atkinson

AH, THE JOYS OF OFFICE POLITICS. THEY MAY NOT MAKE IT ONTO THE FRONT PAGES OF NEWSPAPERS BUT THEY OFTEN HAVE A MUCH BIGGER IMPACT ON OUR LIVES THAN ACTUAL POLITICS. IN THE IMMEDIATE SENSE, OBVIOUSLY. ANYONE WHO'S WORKED IN AN OFFICE HAS TALES TO TELL ABOUT AWKWARD (ROMANTIC) MOMENTS WITH COLLEAGUES, STOLEN STAPLERS AND BOSSES FROM HELL.

If, however, you have had a less than smooth career path and therefore had to do a lot of temping of an administrative nature, then you will understand that certain aspects of office life are replicated wherever you work. This kind of theme is played upon in art and media all the time, from the divisive comedy of Ricky Gervais's The Office to the outstanding Then We Came To The End by Joshua Ferris. And the success of the office genre just goes to show how recognisable the stereotypical workplace situation is.

The routines, photocopiers, and even the types of people are part reassuring, part mind-numbing in their predictability. Having said that, every office has its own quirks and perks. Often bathrooms are in bizarre locations, and it's best to suss this out early on, for obvious reasons. Another thing to establish is the whereabouts of the kitchen facilities and also what the rules are when it comes to food and crockery. If there is a plate of chocolate biscuits, it's a good idea to refrain from helping yourself before finding out that they're definitely not for the client meeting in room 402. But equally important is to work out the ownership of mugs. What may look like a nondescript white mug to you may well be the prized possession of Barry from accounting.

Possessive natures are commonplace in the office, something especially noticeable if you're temping - or a frequent relocater, as I like to call it. And as the flipside to that coin, other people's stuff is always so deliciously tempting. It's the same as that inherent curiosity to see the inside of other people's fridges and bathroom cabinets, the consequences of which can range from the inspirational to the downright alarming. The office desk is often a place which says much about the owner, whether it's photographs of facepainted children and heart-shaped post-its (cringe) or an impressive amount of stationery organised with military-like precision, each pencil sharpened to within an inch of its life.

When you are a visitor at someone else's desk, it's a bit like house sitting. You have to keep everything turning over, not break the computer etc. If you're truly hot desking, then you won't be at someone else's desk but at an untouched work station in the corner which is shared between the part-timers and visitors. It's quite a misleading term actually. You'd think that hot desking was an office-wide policy of only hiring attractive people. Or maybe some Scandinavian initiative, encouraging employers to transform their offices into megasaunas. And even more weirdly, surely if a desk isn't being used all the time, it should be called a cold desk because having someone sitting there day-in, day-out, would warm it up? A better name would probably be the more accurate "spare desk".

LINE, SOLDIERS! «

Anyway, back to el punto - when you are a visitor at someone else's desk, you get to use all their stuff, which is fun. Unless of course they are particularly suspicious and lock everything away in one of those clunky under-the-desk sets of drawers and remove the key. Very unsportsmanlike behaviour. If this is the case, then your first port of call simply has to be the stationery cupboard, where you should take one of EVERYTHING (who knows when you might need blue highlighters/500 sheets of graph paper/200 of those green string tag things). In fact, I would personally recommend doing this on a daily basis anyway, but remember to bring a large bag with you so you can take it out of the building without arousing the receptionists' suspicion. And you would be surprised at how well a birthday present of 250 miniature bulldog clips goes down. Especially if you can get them in different colours. Variety is the spice of life.

One final point about office politics: it's also good being a temp because you don't have to join in all the lame office stuff if you don't want to, but you get to reap the benefits of the fun office stuff. For example, having to donate money to the whip round for someone's charity abseiling - it's OK, because you're just the temp, you didn't know, and oh whoops you don't have any cash with you. Does Brenda take Visa? No? Oh dear...so sorry...hope it goes well etc. But on the other hand - oooh cake Friday! Homemade flapjack? Wow! So sorry, I'm just the temp, I didn't know...are you sure? Well I'll just take these five then, and a lemon slice...thank you! Of course, this isn't the best plan if you're hoping that one day your temp job will become more permanent, but if it definitely isn't a career definer...

THE OFFICE DESK IS OFTEN A PLACE WHICH SAYS MUCH ABOUT THE OWNER, WHETHER IT'S PHOTOGRAPHS OF FACEPAINTED CHILDREN AND HEART-SHAPED POST-ITS (CRINGE) OR AN IMPRESSIVE AMOUNT OF STATIONERY ORGANISED WITH MILITARY-LIKE PRECISION, EACH PENCIL SHARPENED TO WITHIN AN INCH OF ITS LIFE

| 1 THE DOLPHIN | 5 FEAST |
| 2 THE SEASCALE | 6 GOREY YACHT SERVICES |
| 3 DANNY'S | 7 SUDU'S SPICE HOUSE |
| 4 MOORINGS | |

Gorey may have earned itself the unfair reputation of being ‘too far out’ for those of us who live in town or way out west, but there’s no denying this picturesque location has got more than enough to offer in the way of views, restaurants, walks and sea activities so we thought we’d showcase some of them, so now there’s no excuse not to get down there and enjoy the scenery, great food and the sea. Not that you should need an excuse, mind...

Turn over to learn a little about some of the places to visit if you’re out East...

The Dolphin

Nestled beneath the medieval Mont Orgueil Castle and overlooking the sleepy harbour at Gorey the alfresco terrace is ideal for taking in the slower pace of life. Open for lunch and dinner every day, the restaurant serves continental style cuisine with an emphasis on local produce with an array of seafood alongside specialties of cooking on hot rocks as well as catering for vegetarians, whilst the cocktail bar is adjacent to the restaurant is the perfect venue for pre dinner drinks or a quiet evening.

HEISTS, HEAT AND HIDDEN HORSES

RICK JONES

WHAT DO THERMODYNAMICS AND THIEVERY HAVE IN COMMON... OK, APART FROM THE ALLITERATIVE NATURE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE TITLES? WELL... THE SAME TINY THREE LETTER WORD - HOT - SEEMS TO CROP UP IN RELATION TO BOTH OF THEM. SURE, IT'S AN AMBIGUOUS LITTLE ADJECTIVE... IT SEEMS TO MEAN EVERYTHING FROM SEXY, TO SPICY, TO SWELTERING...

Just why are stolen items considered 'hot' though? Well, get this; we can't really measure how 'cold' something is - only how much heat it contains above absolute zero (zero degrees Kelvin). Then, in 1840, along came a Frenchman named Pierre-Joseph Proudhon who proudly - and somewhat famously - declared "La propriété, c'est le vol!" - literally, "all property is theft".

If I've lost you there, let's put it this way; everything that isn't frozen has some degree of heat and everything that is 'owned' has some degree of desire attached - and the more of either, the hotter it gets!

Obviously, the rarer and more valuable the item, the more risk involved in both owning it and stealing it! Hot property is hot property whether you're the rightful owner, or the recipient of a self levied 'five finger discount'... someone's always going to want it more than you!

Just like literal heat though, figurative heat can rise to the point where no-one can hold it. Ironically, the world's 'hottest' stolen items are only getting hotter, because no-one can openly own them!

With this in mind, let's count down the hottest of the 'hot';

THE RECLINING FIGURE

Weighing in at 2.1 tons and with an estimated worth of £3million - this white painted, cast bronze semi abstract statue was one of the last works of renowned English sculptor Henry Moore. It was stolen from the lawn outside the 'Henry Moore Foundation' in Hertfordshire and has never been seen again.

As it's not really the kind of thing you can carry around without a crane lorry, and isn't exactly an inconspicuous addition to the average patio furniture collection, police believe that idiot thieves added their own heat - and melted it down for £1500 worth of scrap value! Oops.

SHERGAR

Smashing all the records of his day, this dazzling Irish rockstar racehorse won the Epsom Derby by ten lengths... the biggest winning margin in the two-century plus history of the famous flat race. He went on to be named 'European Horse of the Year' in 1981, was retired that year and spent the following two years enjoying the ultimate semi-retired profession; paid stud... yeah baby, life was sweet!

His stud career was rudely interrupted by masked gunmen in County Kildare in 1983, who towed him off in a horse box, never to be seen again. If he's still alive - which is a matter of conjecture on barstools around the emerald isle to this day - he'll be long in the tooth by now. If not, like all great rockstars, his greatest fame came after he left this mortal coil.

THE HOLY GRAIL

This one is such hot property that no-one actually seems to agree what it is... but somehow everyone from the Pope, to Hitler, to Indiana Jones seems to be prepared to risk life, limb and personal fortune trying to get it - which backs up my previous assertion that the early Christian church had the ultimate marketing department.

Opinions vary on it's precise nature, from the chalice that held the wine at the last supper, to a stone from heaven called 'lapis exilis' that fell from heaven when God cast Lucifer into the bowels of hell, to the 'DaVinci Code' theory that it's actually the bloodline of Jesus continued within the resulting descendants from a dalliance with Mary Magdalene.

Whatever it is, even I want it... and I don't know why... subliminal advertising at it's very best! The knights of the Priory of Sion apparently stole it from the church, and if - like seemingly everything of religious importance - people will go to war for it, I think it's deserves it's place as 'The Hottest 'Hot' Item Ever'!

Once again we pit animal against owner to see if what they say is true, are dogs really like their owners? This month Kelly introduces a crime fighting pair of Pomeranians. Some might say they're more micro bears than dogs but who cares, look at those teddy bear faces!

SHERLOCK AND WATSON

Breed: Pomeranian

Age: 5 months

Likes: Pigs ears, beach walks and play fighting

Hates: Baths, being told off and the Hoover

If human/animal we would be: Detectives

DONT MISS DURRELL DAY!

We all share an affinity for Durrell and there are few of you that haven't been to see the animals or watched an Oddsocks show in the wonderful grounds. As we've reported in previous months, Durrell Day will see Durrell celebrating 25 years.

Durrell Day is set to be one of the highlights of the summer as the Trust looks to thank Jersey residents for their passionate support over the past 50 years, enabling Durrell to continue work to save species from extinction. The wildlife park will be divided into four zones for the day: Jersey, Durrell Memorabilia, Conservation and Corfu zones, enabling visitors to enjoy new experiences as well as the wide variety of animals and stunning grounds.

Exciting activities for the day include den building, a Genuine Jersey fair, walks and talks with Durrell experts, a memorabilia exhibition and Greek themed food and drink in celebration of Gerald Durrell's childhood home, Corfu.

POSTER CREATION WINNERS

To help promote Durrell Day, Jersey school children are being asked to create a poster that represents their best memory or favourite animal at Durrell. Winners of the competition will receive a digital camera and see their artwork displayed on posters around the Island.

RECYCLING WORLD RECORD ATTEMPT

Durrell, inspired by JTC Group, will also be looking to break a Guinness World Record on the day by recycling the most aluminium cans on the Sunday so please take 50 crushed cans with you when you go up!

GALLERY PAPIER MASHUP EXHIBITION

We'll also be announcing the winner of Gallery's Papier Mashup competition in an exhibition of some of the best entrants work and awarding £500 to the best recycler of magazines into something else!

Dogs don't want to watch you surf ...

The UK may be a nation of dog lovers, but it seems we are still putting man's best friend at risk as a new survey released today by Dogs Trust, the UK's largest dog welfare charity, reveals that over 66% of people have seen a dog locked in a car on a sunny day yet over a third of them did nothing about it. With temperatures easily reaching over 40 degrees in some parked vehicles (alright, it wasn't quite THAT hot in June) dogs could die within minutes. The UK has just launched a "Hot Cars Can Kill Dogs" Campaign. We may not get it in Jersey so Gallery thought we should make you animal lovers aware. The survey also reveals that 15% of those questioned called the police when they saw a dog locked in the car, 49% tried to alert the driver and 4% actually broke into the car to rescue the dog. Over the last year AA patrols have rescued 832 pets locked in cars and in recent years there have been several high profile cases of canine fatalities.

ADVICE TO MOTORISTS INCLUDE:

Never leave your dog alone in the car - even if it seems cool outside it can become very hot very quickly. Parking in the shade and/or keeping the windows down does not make it safe!

Make sure you keep your dog as cool as possible when driving: avoid travelling during the heat of the day, use sun blinds on the windows and consider opening a window a little to allow a cooling breeze to circulate in the vehicle.

Make sure you have a supply of water and know where you can stop off on route for water breaks. Dogs are not able to cool down as effectively as humans so could suffer from heat stroke and dehydration very quickly.

If you do see a dog in distress please contact your local police station or the JSPCA.

RECORD BREAKING YEAR FOR MACMILLAN JERSEY ROWATHON

This year's Indoor Rowathon in support of Macmillan Cancer Support (Jersey) is on course to raise a record breaking £25,000. A record 47 teams participated in the event, which took place at the indoor tennis centre at Les Ormes on Saturday May 26th and involved teams of six people rowing the equivalent of Sark to Jersey (30,000m). The event, which is now in its third year, is sponsored by RBS International. The fastest men's team was 'Just do it' from Jersey Rowing club in a time of 1.45.16. Jersey Netball's Team Jets won the ladies category while Carrefour Gym won the mixed category in an event record of 1.49.48. Awards were also presented to IFG Trust for the best trust company team and RBS International's Real Estate team for best bank team.

The full results can be found at www.macmillanjersey/rowathon or by visiting the event on facebook (Macmillan Rowathon Jersey) and twitter (Macmillan Row Jsy) pages.

SUIT SENSATION

Generous islanders have donated over 100 unwanted suits to those who need them for critical job interviews, through Hawksford's month long 'Suit Amnesty'. The campaign, which ran throughout the month of May, has seen more than 100 suits donated, many of which are designer brands with the likes of Armani, Christian Dior and Ralph Lauren items hanging in the makeshift Hawksford wardrobe. The 'Suit Amnesty' has been developed to encourage islanders to re-gift outgrown and unwanted suits to disadvantaged and homeless jobseekers, which will in turn help them back into work. Benefitting local charity, The Shelter Trust (www.shelter.org.je), the scheme helps those keen to find work but unable to afford their own professional work wear. This national campaign ran for the first time in May 2011 and resulted in more than 2,000 unwanted suits being distributed via 22 different charities across the UK. This is the first year that the scheme has been operated in Jersey.

ONE FOUNDATION FOR JERSEY MENCAP

The One Foundation is delighted to have sponsored the Taking Part Making Art project which is run by local charity, Jersey Mencap. It is one of the many initiatives run by Jersey Mencap which supports people with a learning disability and is a popular programme that runs 5 days a week. The sessions are run by local artists and a wide selection of materials and mediums are used throughout. Previous highlights from the 'Taking Part, Making Art' project have included the Birds in the Trees in Broad Street and a giant paper-chain being strung up in King Street. The project which will have caught most islanders' eyes was the brightly coloured snails which were placed along Victoria Avenue.

RADISSON BLU CLEANS UP

Last month the Radisson Blu Waterfront Hotel celebrates World Oceans Day by undertaking its second beach clean of the season, along with announcing the latest exciting plans for activity as Champion of the Island's Marine Environment. As Jersey's only 'Eco-Active Marine' Champion, the hotel has committed to a bespoke programme of environmental activities. The coming months will see the introduction of a number of new initiatives such as skimming Elizabeth Marina and introducing new 'William Wheelie Bins'. Plans are also in place for the Radisson Blu to purchase a number of wheelie bins specifically for beach clean activities. The 140 litre bins will contain all the items required for cleaning the shores including bags and bin liners, rubber gloves, pick up sticks and documentation. Housed at the waterfront hotel, they will be available for all groups or individuals wishing to undertake a beach clean, making it a central hub for the Island's south coast beach clean activities.

PHILATELRY WILL GET YOU EVERYWHERE

Four stamps will be issued by Jersey Post on 21 June to celebrate the 30th birthday of Prince William, The Duke of Cambridge. The stamp images were chosen to reflect his military connections and achievements as, being second in line to the British Throne, The Duke will one day become Head of the British Armed Forces.

Sally Diamond Ferbrache, Head of Philatelic at Jersey Post, explains: "With so much emphasis on The Queen's Diamond Jubilee this year, we felt that it was important to celebrate this milestone birthday. As usual, each of the stamps is available in a sheet of ten but we have introduced a layout which will be of particular interest to collectors of stamps and royal memorabilia alike: the sheets have been designed to depict The Duke together with a close member of his family and incorporate an amount of text about each of the military connections associated with the individual uniforms he wears on the stamps."

The stamps and stamp products (First Day Cover envelope and Presentation Pack) are available to view and buy at: www.jerseystamps.com

Contributory Fault

This month's article was written by Michael Salter, Ely Place Chambers.

The Employment (Jersey) Law 2003 was amended by the Employment (Amendment No. 4) Law to include a power by the tribunal to reduce compensation where it thought the Claimant contributed directly to his dismissal. As in the United Kingdom this is an understandably case sensitive assessment the tribunal makes in relation to the case before it. However, unlike the UK, which has two separate awards for unfair dismissal: the Basic Award to which "any conduct" can be considered, and the Compensatory Award where only conduct that causes or contributes to the dismissal can be considered, in Jersey there is only one award and articles 77F(5) and (6) of the Law expressly permit the tribunal to take into account conduct which comes to light after the act of dismissal. The classic example of where a reduction would be allowed under the Law here in Jersey would be where an employee has been stealing items from the stockroom prior to their dismissal, but this was not known at the time of his dismissal.

Also, the wider scope for a reduction here in Jersey means that the conduct of the employee does not need to be linked to the dismissal. Indeed, in the UK there is a view that the conduct of the employee over the whole of their employment can be considered: Optikinetics Ltd v Whookey EAT 1275195. Employers, should not get too encouraged by this however as, understandably, applying a reduction for such conduct would, however, need to be subject to the requirement that the reduction be "just and equitable" in accordance with article 77F(3).

Notwithstanding this however, the power to reduce compensation is potentially very wide ranging. Yet, it is one that many employers overlook when in tribunal, and it is an area which can, if approached without due consideration and thoroughness be got wrong, and the employer left to pay to the ex-employee more than they deserve. Clearly, for the discretion to be applied the conduct of the employee relied upon by the employer must be culpable in some regard. This necessarily requires tribunals to make findings of fact about whether or not the employee actually committed the act complained of. Whilst this seems logical to the layman, and is the normal role of a court in other areas, the experienced employment practitioner realises that for unfair dismissal claims the tribunal do not make such findings of guilt of the employee but rather investigate the mind-set of the employer. Normally the tribunal ask themselves whether the employer had reasonable grounds for believing the employee committed the act of misconduct, not whether the employee is actually guilty of those acts. This is turned on its head when the tribunal is considering contributory fault.

What then can amount to conduct worthy of a reduction? Clearly, it needs to be culpable. However, it need not be a breach of contract, and has been described in 1979 as including conduct which is "bloody minded" (Nelson v BBC). It obviously includes, dishonesty, breach of rules and regulations and unauthorised absences. What is clear however is that the employee must be to blame in some degree, so for instance where a claimant is dismissed for a genuine long-term sickness absence it is unlikely that their compensation would be reduced for contributory fault unless the Claimant was at fault, for instance by not engaging in the sickness process of the employer.

Once these hurdles have been cleared it is up to the tribunal to consider the size of any reduction. Again, this is determined by the tribunal adopting a "broad common sense view" of the facts of the case it has before it. Such guidance as there is comes from the Court of Appeal in Holier v Plysu Ltd [1983] IRLR 260. Generally this falls into categories of 100% reduction where the employee is entirely to blame, a 50% reduction when the employee is equally to blame and a 25% reduction when the employer is mostly to blame for the dismissal.

Employers need to get their ducks in a row when arguing for a contributory fault reduction. Evidence will need to be called to show the ex-employee committed the act complained of, this imposes a requirement beyond the mere evidence gathering for the defence of an unfair dismissal claim. If there is evidence of the employee stealing from the stockroom, it will need to be disclosed; be it a witness in person or CCTV, as without it the tribunal will not be able to consider whether the ex-employee actually did commit the act that led them to be dismissed. In cases such involving physical violence or personal abuse this often places employers in an awkward position as the complainant may not be willing to come forward and be cross-examined by their assailant/abuser, yet without their evidence the employer may find it is unable to produce any evidence of the conduct complained of.

From experience it seems that employers and their advisers need to be aware of the extra mile they will be expected to go in cases where they wish to argue for a contributory fault reduction, as by asking the tribunal to adopt the role of a criminal jury there are additional requirements of disclosure and proof that bite. Failure to do so can amount to a costly and expensive error.

ANTS & EAGLES

BEDELL ADD SUPPORT FOR ANTHONY LEWIS' LONDON TO PARIS CYCLE CHALLENGE.

Last month saw won the Anthony Lewis awarded the Adult Courage Award at the Stroke Association's annual Life After Stroke Awards in the UK. Recognising his incredible achievements since his stroke five years ago, such as his emotional completion of the Jersey Marathon, he was named the winner from a list of 85 nominees.

Not content with the Marathon this year Anthony will lead 125 cyclists from London to Paris in aid of the Stroke Association and Driving for the Disabled. On 19 September 2012 the cyclists will start a four-day cycle from Blackheath Common in London to the Eiffel Tower in Paris. The journey is a total of 320 miles with an average day consisting of six or seven hours on the road.

Anthony devised the idea of tackling the gruelling ride to try and raise £100,000 for the two charities that have given him so much support in his rehabilitation and successful move back behind the wheel and on with his life.

As added support to the cause legal eagles Bedell have stepped in to align with the event and provide assistance as the main sponsor for the ride. The event will now be called the Anthony Lewis and Bedell Cycle Challenge in support of the Stroke Association and Driving for the Disabled.

Bedell Partner Tim Pearce, who will be taking part in the Challenge, said that the firm was proud to be supporting the team who had come together to take part in this challenge on behalf of these important charity organisations
'Anthony's amazing story is an inspiration to all of us. When we learned of his latest arduous challenge we could only admire his determination to embark on such a journey and so we are delighted to offer our support both to Anthony and the fellow cyclists who have volunteered to join him.'

By taking on the challenge, Anthony wanted to be able to give hope and optimism to others in a similar situation to him and raising vital funds to allow the Stroke

Association and Driving for the Disabled to continue their excellent work was a practical way of providing that hope.

Anthony's partner, Suzi Austin, said: 'On behalf of Anthony, I would like to thank Bedell for becoming the main sponsor of the ride. This challenge means an awful lot to him and it is wonderful that the company is giving its backing in this way. The commitment is also demonstrated by the fact that Tim Pearce of Bedell is taking part in the challenge and in doing so will be helping to raise even more funds for two charities close to Anthony's heart.'

An average of 125 people each year are affected by stroke in Jersey and that is why Anthony wants that number of people to complete the ride. Anthony will ride a specially-made tricycle on the journey in September
This month he will also be one of only five stroke sufferers in Britain to be given the chance to carry the Olympic torch when he takes it through the streets of St Helier on 15 July.

Anthony suffered his stroke in 2007 following a football accident. It has left him with partial paralysis and severe aphasia, a communication disability that affects his ability to read, write and speak.

Stroke Association Jersey chairman Ian Black said that it was 'fantastic' that Bedell had agreed to be the main sponsor for the cycle ride.

'We cannot thank Bedell enough for supporting the charity in this way. The funds we raise from the ride will make a huge contribution toward allowing us to continue to provide rehabilitation services to those affected by stroke,' she said.

He added that all of the funds raised from the London to Paris Cycle Ride will be spent on providing support to stroke survivors in Jersey.

There are some spaces for riders on the Anthony Lewis and Bedell cycle challenge and anyone who wants to join Anthony and the team can find out more information by emailing jersey@stroke.org.uk.

HAVE YOUR SAY ON THE FUTURE OF THE STATES

It's easy to overlook politics as a subject for discussion for sensible types at dinner parties. The beauty of Jersey is that our micro size means that politics is that much closer to the people. Now you have the opportunity to determine the future of Jersey politics. The reform of Jersey's States Assembly has been the subject of debate for some time. There have been plenty of discussions and debates about the structure of our government, but so far there has been little in the way of reform.

An Electoral Commission has now been set up to look at the way our government is constituted and to make recommendations on the future of the States Assembly.

The Commission is chaired by Senator Sir Philip Bailhache, with Vice Chairman, Colin Storm, who is the former Chief Executive of Guinness Ltd. and of the Burger King Corporation. They are joined by politicians Deputy James Baker and Constable Juliette Gallichan; as well as Highlands College principal, Professor Ed Sallis, and BBC producer, Dr. Jonathan Renouf. They want to know what we think about the way the States is made up.

THEY HAVE LAUNCHED A CONSULTATION TO FIND OUT OUR VIEWS ON;

- the classes of States member;
- their constituencies and mandates;
- the number of States members; and
- their terms of office.

Commission chairman, Senator Sir Philip Bailhache, said: "We hope to stimulate wide public debate on these important issues and would encourage everyone to visit our website: www.electoral-commission.je. Once we have finalised our recommendations, our proposals will be brought to the States for approval and then to the public for their vote in a referendum.....We are determined to do all we can to find out what Islanders think in order help with the development of our proposals."

At the moment there are 51 elected members of the States. As a result of changes agreed last year, this will be reduced to 49 in October 2014 when we will elect 8 Senators; 12 Connétables and 29 Deputies on the same day.

THE COMMISSION WANTS TO KNOW;

- Whether we should keep Senators, Constables and Deputies;
- How many members there should be in the States;
- How members should be elected (by Island-wide vote or by parish or constituency);
- How long there should be between elections.

HAVE YOUR SAY > Email the Commission at: ec@gov.je; or make your submission online at: www.electoralcommission.je. Alternatively, you can write to –

Electoral Commission,
Morier House,
St Helier,
JE1 1DD.

You should include your full name and submissions will be published on the Commission's website unless you make a special request for confidentiality. The Commission will also be holding a series of public hearings and if you would like to give your views at one of these hearings you should indicate that in your written submission. All views should be submitted before the end of August 2012.

Financial provision

What happens when a civil partnership breaks down?

words | Rose Colley

Partner, Viberts Jersey Lawyers

Earlier this year, Jersey granted recognition for civil partnerships, including those entered into elsewhere.

In order to legally end a civil partnership, the couple must have been in it for at least 3 years. In the UK this period is only 1 year, but in Jersey, the period is longer as it mirrors the same requirement for married couples.

Demonstrating a 'ground' for dissolution of the partnership is also similar to the requirements for married couples but more difficult, is the question as to whether on dissolution, the parties to the civil partnership will have the same rights as a married couple when it comes to dividing the finances of the relationship.

In the first UK Court of Appeal decision on the subject of financial provision, a landmark case in England (Lawrence v Gallagher, March 2012), offers some guidance.

The court acknowledged that this case involving an actor and a wealthy financial analyst was a legal first, and made clear that the same principles should apply as to heterosexual divorce, with civil partners given 'identical' rights to husbands and wives in a similar situation.

The dispute between the couple, who had been together for 11 years although their civil partnership lasted just 7 months, hinged on the fact that Mr Lawrence owned a flat in London before the couple met. Lord Justice Thorpe said "This is said to be the first substantial appeal concerning financial orders made following the dissolution of a civil partnership" and "The fact that the claim arises from the dissolution of a civil partnership rather than from a marriage is of little moment since it is common ground that the language of ... the Civil Partnership Act 2004 is identical to the language of the ... Matrimonial Causes Act 1973."

It is likely that these principles will be followed in a court in Jersey as our laws relating to marriage and civil partnerships are also identical just as in England. This case therefore does provide a useful basis on which to advise any civil partners on their rights upon dissolution of their partnership. However, as in England, courts in Jersey have a great deal of discretion when deciding these cases. Indeed following the decision, the lawyer for Mr Gallagher stated that he did not think that his client had necessarily received the same financial award that might have been awarded in a case involving marriage.

Gay marriage is yet again in the headlines with the UK government defending plans to change the status of civil ceremonies in England and Wales. By law, civil partners must be treated the same as married couples, but the debate will continue as to whether true parity exists. It will be interesting to see how long it will be before similar cases come before the court in Jersey and what principles are then applied.

GO GLOBAL:

THE HOTTEST WORLDWIDE FESTIVALS THIS SUMMER

words: Chris Bell

There are plenty of music festivals taking place in the UK this summer, not to mention Jersey Live and Folklore on our own doorstep. But if you're planning a trip abroad, why not time it to coincide with one of the many festivals taking place in continental Europe and beyond?

Burning Man

AUGUST 27 - SEPTEMBER 3

BLACK ROCK DESERT, NEVADA, USA

First things first, Burning Man is not a music festival. In fact, it's not a festival at all, rather a week-long community gathering which encourages artistic endeavours of all kinds. Moreover, it's a commerce-free exercise of 'radical self-reliance'; all participants must provide everything they need to survive, from food and water to clothing and shelter, in a desert climate where temperatures hit as high as 100 degrees in the daytime and as low as freezing at night. Your reward for braving one of the harshest climates in earth though, is the opportunity to take part in one of the world's biggest and most prestigious celebrations of artistic expression.

Burningman.com

Nowhere

JULY 3 - 8

MONEGROS, ZARAGOZA, SPAIN

Described as Europe's Burning Man, Nowhere also takes part in an unforgiving desert environment, this time in southern Spain. Built on the principles of Self Expression, Radical Self Reliance, No Commerce, Leave No Trace and Participation, it's as far from the mod-cons-included cosiness of the increasingly commercialised Glastonbury and other UK festivals, and participants (as opposed to spectators, take note) are encouraged to form group camps in order to share resources, and to contribute to the overall spectacle by creating their own installations and forms of artistic expression. Like Burning Man, not for the faint-hearted.

Goingnowhere.org

Traena Festival

JULY 5 - 7

TRAENA, NORWAY

Dubbed 'the world's remotest festival', Norway's Traena festival has a strong claim to be recognised one of the world's most spectacularly beautiful music festivals too. Held on the islands of Husoya and Sanna in the Arctic Circle, the festival is set in surrounds whose physical features include a spectacular glacier, mountains and many a whale breaking the surface. This year's line up features Neneh Cherry, Manu Chao, The Whitest Boy Alive and Josh T Pearson, as well as many an undiscovered Scandinavian gem. The trip will involve a boat to the islands via a flight to Bodo, via a flight to Oslo, via a connecting flight to London, so make sure your iPod battery's charged for the journey.

Trena.net

Benicassim

JULY 12 - 15

BENICASSIM, SPAIN

Since the first event in 1995, Benicassim has grown to become one of the biggest and most popular music festivals in Europe, with an army of Brits making the trip to the east coast of Spain for the event. With a capacity of 50,000 it's a major festival but not on the mammoth scale of the likes of Glastonbury or even Reading, and has a line up that'll keep most indie and dance music fans happy for the weekend. Bob Dylan, The Stone Roses, New Order and Florence & The Machine are joined by the likes of David Guetta and Sebastian. Perhaps not the most adventurous festival holiday you could take this summer, but a fun-filled one all the same.

Benicassimfestival.co.uk

Pukkelpop

AUGUST 16 - 18

HASSETT, BELGIUM

Going since 1988, Pukkelpop has enjoyed immense success in its near-quarter century lifespan. However, the chaos of last year's festival, during which a ferocious storm caused the collapse of several stages, the deaths of five people, injuries to many more and ultimately the early cancellation of the event, were well documented. The unprecedented and tragic events may be enough to put some people off going back, but this hasn't deterred the organisers. A blockbuster line up featuring Bjork, The Stone Roses, The Foo Fighters, The Black Keys and Dizzee Rascal suggests that the festival is set to bounce back in style.

Pukkelpop.be

La Route Du Rock

AUGUST 10 - 12

ST MALO, FRANCE

Well known to many a local music fan, La Route du Rock is just a short ferry ride away from Jersey, and since 1993 has been laying on a mouthwatering line up of leftfield indie and electronica that's definitely more ATP than V; previous guests have included Sonic Youth, TV on the Radio, Mercury Rev and Yeah Yeah Yeahs, and this year's line up features electro-deity Squarepusher, American lo-fi heroes Mazzy Star, as well as Spiritualized, The XX, Mark Lanegan, Alt-J and many more. With a capacity of just 10,000 it's a cosy affair, and just a stone's throw from the pubs and restaurants of St Malo, there's plenty to keep festival-goers entertained.

Laroutedurock.com

Soundwave

JULY 19 - 23

TISNO, CROATIA

Set on a strip of coastline where the Dalmatian coast meets the Adriatic Sea, Soundwave boasts one of the most idyllic surroundings of any festival in Europe as well as a tasty line up of indie, hip hop and electronica. De La Soul, Ghostpoet, DJ Yoda and DJ Kentaro are amongst the highlights over the festival's five days of music, and with daily boat parties, nearby mountains, national parks and fishing villages to visit, it's a great way to discover a part of Europe you might otherwise overlook.

Soundwavecroatia.com

Splendour in the Grass

JULY 27 - 29

BYRON BAY, AUSTRALIA

A fairly spectacular line up features the likes of Jack White, Bloc Party, The Shins, At the Drive In and Smashing Pumpkins, and dozens more live bands and DJs make this 30,000 capacity event one of Australia's most popular music festivals. It's mid-winter at this time of year in New South Wales, but you'll find the weather not dissimilar to a British spring/early summer. If you're going all that way, it's worth packing a surfboard; Byron Bay boasts some of the world's best and most famous breaks.

Splendourinthegrass.com

Exit Festival

JULY 12 - 15

NOVI SAD, SERBIA

Taking place in the impressive Petrovaradin Fortress overlooking the River Danube in Serbia, Exit Festival is now considered a mecca for Europe's music fans, and with a lineup that includes Guns N' Roses, New Order, Hercules & Love Affair and Plan B alongside some of the most exciting names in electronic music, this year looks as strong as ever. 500+ artists perform across twenty stages annually at the festival, which began in 2000 as a protest against the then-leader of Serbia, Slobodan Milosevic. It has since proceeded to follow a more commercial than political path, but remains a huge draw, and represents an opportunity to visit one of the oldest cities in Europe.

SAMANTHA POWER IN ABUJA

Hot Town, Summer in the City:

words | Viv Pallot

Life in the capital city of Nigeria is a far cry from the peaceful parish of Trinity where 28-year-old Forensic Psychology graduate, Samantha Power, grew up. For a start Abuja is hot, very hot – the last dry season brought temperatures of 43°C plus – it's also extremely crowded too. With the country's population capping 170 million, Nigeria is not only the most populous country in Africa, but for this ethnicity at least, it ranks even top in the world.

Yet it is also a place where the former States of Jersey Scrutiny Officer has adapted surprisingly well. "Nigeria makes me feel alive", she confesses, "no matter where you go there is laughter and music and noise ... and always something going on. I miss that when I'm not here."

A rather sobering fact, however, is that more than 3 million people in Nigeria are living with HIV/AIDS and this is where Samantha's work as a volunteer comes in. Her skill-sharing placement with Voluntary Service Overseas involves training locals working in a youth and reproductive health charity so that they can continue the work when she leaves. Sam says she genuinely loves her role as a monitoring and evaluation adviser - particularly as it offers variety as well as frequent opportunities to visit the charity's offices spread throughout the country.

"No two days are the same", she concedes, "from running training courses, to working in communities to collect data, data analysis, writing various reports and publications to help showcase the organisation's work – it's incredibly varied". She adds that an international health journal has just published one of their articles and that some of the charity's research has recently been submitted to a sexual and reproductive health conference in Namibia.

Sam was also present at the roll-out in Abuja of the United Nations' ground-breaking strategy "CrowdOutAIDS", in which her organisation played a part. It's an innovative approach using social media tools and "crowdsourcing" technology to engage young people on AIDS issues and is rapidly gathering momentum worldwide.

It's not all work though, and Sam has had plenty of time to acclimatise and make the most of her life in Nigeria. She recently took a trip to the scenic mountain resort of Obudu near the Cameroon border, which she says is absolutely beautiful, and certainly much cooler than Abuja.

Back in Abuja, there are frequent power cuts and water shortages which are part of everyday life in Nigeria. She has learned to manage without modern appliances such as a washing machine and vacuum cleaner and to adapt to living off the modest VSO allowance. As a special treat, she and her roommate pour a glass or two of the uniquely-flavoured Nigerian “Sangria”, which comes in a box.

Now in the steamy wet season in Abuja it has “cooled down” to around 30C in the daytime (with a balmy 23C at night), so Sam is able to go out running again to keep herself fit. In the blistering dry season, she found the only way to cool off was to submerge herself totally in the local swimming pool.

Being vegetarian has also presented its own set of issues – a bowl of “vegetable” soup ordered confidently on her first night in Nigeria transpired to contain fish, cow skin and even a few bones! She has subsequently discovered a fondness for yams and is hoping to introduce the crop to her native Jersey. She remains nostalgic, however, for cheese, chocolate, and real rosé wine – items we take for granted here.

Not only has she had to be creative in sourcing food for herself, but Sam has also taken on a pet. Her love for animals meant she simply couldn’t turn away from a tiny kitten abandoned in the street. “I did a VSO no-no and adopted a cat!” she admits, “I’ve recently been spending a lot of time at the vet trying to get everything put in place for her to come home with me, whenever that might be. Nigeria certainly isn’t the easiest country in the world to own a pet – just trying to find cat food is a nightmare.”

Naturally, Sam misses her Jersey family and friends dearly and she has returned to the Island a couple of times in the interim, relishing the fresh air and beautiful beaches ... as well as the opportunity for shopping for “fixed-price” items, rather than having to haggle for everything. She says that on her last trip home she forgot where she was and tried haggling for the taxi fare, much to the confusion of the driver!

Of Nigeria, she says, “This has been the most amazing experience. I’ve made friends for life and I really like the country. I love my placement here and feel exceptionally lucky to have had the opportunity to do it – but there are limits to how many birthdays, Christmases, and other special occasions that I can miss back home...”

STAYCATION CORNER

A SUPERIOR SOMER

It’s great to see local hotels still committed to tourism growth. As part of the Dolan Hotel Group’s ongoing investment, they are proud to announce the opening of the new Somerville Hotel Superior Garden Rooms, three luxury summer garden suites enjoying their own private sun terrace located within the hotel grounds overlooking St Aubin’s bay.

Each room boasts spacious bedroom and living space, large marble bathrooms fitted with walk-in ‘rainforest’ showers and bath, and access to a private south facing sun terrace. Guests can enjoy the excellent services and facilities provided by the Somerville Hotel whilst making their own complementary cocktails using an exclusive minibar starter pack of ingredients and carefully selected recipes provided by the hotel’s head barman Florin Cenan.

The new development follows an increase in guests booking the high-end accommodation already available at the four star hotel. David Plowright, General Manager at the Somerville Hotel commented ‘Over recent years the Somerville Hotel has noticed a growing demand for its larger luxury rooms, particularly from locals booking weekend breaks or ‘staycations’. The Superior Garden Sea View Rooms were designed in direct response to this, and although only completed in April, they are already receiving a great level of interest from both tourists and locals.’

The only hotel on the Island to be awarded 4 Gold Star grade through Jersey Quality Assured (JQA), the Somerville Hotel has already established a strong reputation for its outstanding service, accommodation and its award winning restaurant. Its immaculately kept lush gardens, heated pool and terrace make this the ideal location for a luxury get away.

SEA STUDY

An impressive author and photographer team visited the island last month. Author Dr Huw Lewis-Jones and photographer Nigel Millard were in the Island capturing the essence of RNLI Jersey for their forthcoming book. When they sent these images ahead of time it really whet our appetite.

The book will show life behind the scenes at the charity and will be published next year. Interviewing and photographing the island's Lifeboat crews at St Helier & St Catherine's, Huw and Nigel are in Jersey as part of an epic road-trip of all 235 stations around the UK and Ireland to catch life behind the scenes at RNLI. They will also be capturing images of RNLI Lifeguards.

Huw, originally a Channel Islander, read history at Cambridge as an undergraduate before earning his masters and PhD at the same institution in Philosophy. He was a fellow at Harvard, curator at the Scott Polar Research Institute and then curator at the National Maritime Museum.

Nigel, who lives in Devon, is a renowned photographer who became involved in the RNLI as a student living by the sea. He was drawn to the colours of the RNLI boats and kit, the light on the water and the lines in the crew's faces which told stories of humbling life-saving voyages at sea.

The collaborative book between Lewis-Jones and Millard will be published in September 2013 by Conway & the RNLI and profits have been pledged to the charity.

Dr Lewis-Jones says 'This book is a year in the life of the RNLI; a celebration of the courage and the humanity that defines the RNLI and shows it as part of the fabric of island life. We hope we do them justice.'

HIGHLANDS

LEVEL 2 DIPLOMA IN ART & DESIGN EXHIBITION 2012

WORDS CLAIRE ROWLAND ■ DESIGN CHELSEA WHITE

It's drawing close to the end of the school year and at Highlands, to celebrate the finished pieces of the Level 2 BTEC art and design course, the students put on an exhibition for their friends and families last month

The course leader Alison Richards, who specialises in darkroom photography, who is also the students' personal tutor was on hand to talk to us about the course, and the exhibition. There were nine students that took the BTEC Level 2 Art and Design course this year, two of which were mature students. The course takes one year to complete and is the equivalent of two to three GCSEs. The students took workshops on an extensive range of artistic areas from print, painting, drawing, design, photography, 3D design, and pottery classes to glass work. Soon the course will be offering film making workshops too!

The level of the work in the exhibition was of an extremely high standard and made us really want to get our hands dirty! There was work presented from all sorts of aspects of art and design. We caught up with a few of the level 2 artists and they talked us through the ideas behind their work.

If you're interested in this course, whether you're a student wanting to explore the arts or a loving mother with an artistic flare then check out Highlands website about how to apply!

www.highlands.ac.uk

Natasha Whitcombe (16) created some very fun looking origami figures dangling from pieces of metal. "The combination of metal and paper may seem a bit odd but I wanted extreme contrast". These would look great on our desk in Gallery HQ Natasha!

Oliver Woodall (17) Oliver based his final pieces on textiles and exotic birds of paradise. Using embroidery he made 4 beautifully intricate canvases featuring different exotic birds. He also worked from images which he took himself.

Edward le Couteur (18) created a two sided sculpture featuring the Minotaur from Greek mythology. Edward described his piece as "symbolic, as the maze represents something to be afraid of, and the Minotaur just makes it worse". Very scary stuff!

We were struck by this beautiful dress made of bottle caps, which had been made by Bleue Tilstone. Bleue said that she had always wanted to make a dress, but not a traditional one. I think it's fair to say that she's definitely achieved that!

11TH-14TH AC HISTORIC LOVE

ACT presents a bawdy romp of a Roman Comedy, originally produced over 2000 years ago. Calidorus is in love with the girl next door. Unfortunately, the girl of his dreams is a Courtesan and, to make matters worse, she's just been sold to a Macedonian Captain who is coming to collect her in the next few hours. It's up to loyal slave Pseudolus to come up with a plan to unite the lovers and deprive the depraved Macedonian of his prize. Suitable for 16 years +

14TH OH BLUE SKY THINKING

In 1970 in Birmingham, a musical super power was established. Jeff Lynne and the Electric Light Orchestra became one of the world's best known and greatest recording bands. Their 1977 album "Out of the Blue" sold 4 million copies on pre-orders alone. From 1972 onwards, ELO toured relentlessly, and packed stadiums throughout the world. A seemingly endless list of hit records stormed the global charts. Radio broadcasts worldwide played hits such as Living Thing, Telephone Line, Wild West Hero, Sweet Talking Woman, and perhaps their most famous - Mr Blue Sky.

14TH FR THE WEST END MEN ARE COMING TO JERSEY

Three internationally-renowned musical theatre singers, The West End Men, will be performing in Jersey this month. The singers, Lee Mead, Matt Rawle and Stephen Rahman-Hughes, will be performing in the Gloucester Hall at Fort Regent on Saturday 14 July. The show, produced by Milton Morrissey, is one that breaks the mould and it is a great coup that we will get to experience talent of this calibre.

"It's a musical theatre concert - but not as we know it: it's dynamic, it's sharp, it's sexy and it features the finest performers of a generation," said Paul Morrissey, of Milton Morrissey Productions. "It is a production driven by astonishing voices and formidable musicianship. The handpicked cast have played leading roles on both sides of the Atlantic and are quite simply as good as it gets," he said. Charismatic and fiercely talented, the men will present a selection of signature numbers from some of their most famous roles together with a carefully chosen collection of some of the best known show tunes.

Lee was already a West End performer when he won Any Dream Will Do, the BBC's search for a lead for Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. His acclaimed leading performance as Joseph created an enormous following which he has consolidated in such roles as Fiyero in Wicked and Emmett in Legally Blonde - together with solo concert tours and album releases.

Matt started his career playing the title role in the original production of Martin Guerre and has gone on to appear in an enormous range of major musicals including Les Miserables, Miss Saigon, Aspects of Love and most recently the lauded revival of Evita in which he played Che.

Stephen trained initially as a dancer at Rambert before discovering his voice and landing a leading role in West Side Story. He went on to play the lead in the Lloyd Webber produced musical Bombay Dreams amongst many other roles, which led to being selected as a founder member of Sony BMG's group Teatro.

The West End Men will be supported by special guest Kerry Ellis. Kerry is fast becoming the first woman of British musical theatre. She created the role of Meat in We Will Rock You and went on to play the lead in a number of West End musicals before landing the role of Elphaba in the original London cast of Wicked - a role that she went on to play on Broadway. She has released three albums and recently toured with Brian May with the show Anthems.

Milton Morrissey is returning to the Channel Islands following hugely successful productions of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat starring Chesney Hawkes, as well as Les Miserables in Concert, Cats and Buddy.

The performance will take place at 7.45 p.m. on Saturday 14 July and tickets can be purchased at www.gov.je/events, by calling the box office on 01534 449827 or at Fort Regent.

JM WE DEMAND THE GREATEST...

This exclusive Jersey Heritage film club features critically-acclaimed masterpieces in the Museum's private cinema. The nature of their licence means that we can't actually tell you what the film is unless you're a member, but we can give you a hint - from a squalid Camden apartment to a country cottage - care of a relative, these two unemployed & humorously unemployable actors seek respite from their uneventful & alcohol fuelled lives.

STITCH UP

Julie de Gruchy East originally trained as textile designer at Winchester College of Art, specialising in print. Since then she has worked in numerous disciplines from illustration to sculpture and create diverse, themed pieces. She's recently moved to Gloucestershire and now lives in the beautiful town of Winchcombe. She send us some of her work to show us what she's been up to.

She tells us; "Being in a new environment has completely inspired me to capture the true essence of this working town. The folk here are lovely, extremely interesting, hard working and friendly. They remind me of the people back at the place I still call 'home' - 'the rock'. Being from St. Mary, Julie was used to 'a real community full of warm and friendly people'. For the last 6 months her work has focused on local tradesmen and classical portraiture on traditional materials as shown in the series above.. She machines and hand stitches her pieces with a faithful old retro sewing machine (borrowed from her Mum at the start of my University days, years later still not yet returned!). Her machine 'simply goes back and forth enabling me to create unique characteristics, much like the characters and content of my portraits'. Julie is now known as 'The Blanket Lady', a title she quite likes, due to her work being talked about around the town and constant requests to locals for their old blankets.

Julie is also developing a second, very different style of work running in parallel. Her second area is constantly developing and has formed a group of 'anthropomorphic' characters that have been adopted by admirers. These creations indulge a very playful, 'youthful' side. They are usually based on the people Julie sees; how they dress, their interests and the way they stylise themselves; 'I love to people watch and figure out what animal they would become in this strange 'anthropomorphic kingdom' of mine. I'm a squirrel'.

If you'd like your portrait in Julie's unique style, look up her blog;

SKIPTON INTERNATIONAL OPEN STUDIOS LAUNCH The Royal Yacht Hotel 22/06/12

Now in its fifth year, Skipton Open Studios started in style. Twelve shipping containers found their way to Weighbridge place and have been transformed into an art installation, gallery and workshop for Jersey's leading artists. Skipton Open Studios 2012 is organised by the Jersey Arts Trust and kindly sponsored by Skipton International.

We can't wait to see what Skipton Open Studios/ Jersey Arts Trust's hands-on art workshops program has to bring to 2012.

HIGHLANDS LEVEL 2 DIPLOMA IN ART AND DESIGN EXHIBITION Highlands College 11/06/12

Highlands Level 2 Diploma students put on an exhibition of their end of year work for friends and family to come and see. The work was of a very high standard, with pieces of work ranging from textiles, glass work to sculptures and even custom dresses. Alison Richards, the course leader, said that the students had been working hard over the past year to put on this show. I think it's fair to say they put on a great show!

Black, gold and pearl; everthing is getting a little bit sophisticated this season....

ALICE DOES THE LBD

The little black dress is a wardrobe must have. It can take you anywhere, from office to dinner, shopping to dating; and finding the perfect one can be a life mission.

The new season ALICE by Temperley collection, which has just arrived in store at Renaissance, has some truly gorgeous ones they are chic, sleek, feminine and just that little bit sexy; which is the ideal LBD combo. Make sure you check them out ASAP as half of Renaissance is currently on sale!

ALICE by Temperley is exclusive to Renaissance.

SOMETHING TO MUSE OVER

In collaboration with award-winning contemporary designer, Joanna Dahdah, Jersey Pearl introduces Muse, a breathtaking fusion of sumptuous elements and statement design.

Captivated by the poetic interaction of shape, colour and textures in Gustav Klimt's 'The Kiss', Joanna mirrors the painting's enduring appeal in designing beautiful, long-lasting jewellery. Her signature style of brushed metals contrasts vividly with the collection's centrepiece; nestled within the intricate, multi-textured curves of silvers and golds, the opulent freshwater pearl shines iridescently. Dramatic pendants and drops, bold cuffs and exquisite rings celebrate the organic gem through Joanna's fervent design.

Striking and luxurious, Muse fuses a unique sense of aesthetic, love of art and instinctive understanding of materials to create a collection that truly inspires.

The Joanna Dahdah Muse Collection is now in store at Jersey Pearl; remember to visit their fab new stand in deGruchy!

NEW BRAND ALERT!

Sophie Hulme bags are the business. Womenswear designer Sophie has gone from strength to strength since graduating from Kingston University and receiving the Student of The Year & Best Collections awards!

She adds her quirky, unique ideas to classic designs with fabulous results. We are currently in love with her totes which have just arrived into Manna.

Sophie Hulme bags are exclusive to Manna who have a range of gorgeous summer colours now in store.

HOUSE OF CATHERINE

This is a new Jersey based clothing website with a great mix of pieces, from glamorous dresses right through to more casual day wear which won't break the bank.

The company was created in May this year and Owner Katrina De Jesus commented; "We created this business in memory of my brave auntie who passed away with cancer. She loved to shop and was typically a hoarder when it came to clothes, she had two of everything! Five percent of all sales made are being donated to the Jersey Hospice in her memory as they did a such wonderful job in looking after her."

As if you needed any justification to shop you can now do it in the name of this brilliant cause!

BANG ON TREND

Who to envy, what to wear and the new season trends to covet

HOT SUMMER COLOURS

It's all about block colour pastel shades this year; lovely lilacs and bright yellows look fab on tanned skin whereas baby blues denims are better for all of you who are bound to a desk this summer!

Yellow summer dress £65 and the black wrap around belt £25 both from Pebble Boutique

UNUSUAL MATERIALS

The latest Gucci watch collection uses handcrafted pieces of bamboo which is one of Gucci's most iconic motifs; it was developed during the Second World War when materials were scarce. We love the chic summer feel of this cool watch.

Available at Rivoli Jewellers.

MEOW

One big trend this season is animal prints, but not as we know it. Gone are the dalmatian spots and tiger stripes and in are the giant pictures of our four legged friends, as seen on bags, jackets and swimwear up and down the catwalks this SS/2012

BRIGHT AND BOLD

We've just spied these gorgeous Melissa shoes which are perfect for summer fun. They have these feathered flats for laid back lovelies and also something with a bit of a heel for glamourpusses.

Available at www.nonnon.co.uk

GOING UP: ADVENTUROUS SUNGLASSES

The classic shapes for shade are taking a bit of a back seat this summer and we're seeing a huge rise in the o-so-glamorous Hollywood starlet starlet type shades. It's all about channelling the ever-gorgeous Grace Kelly.

Both pairs of sunglasses pictured are available from One Specs.

ELLE "THE BODY" MACHPHERSON

Born in 1964, Elle is an Australian model, actress and businesswoman. Whether she is being papped on the beach or going to a launch party she always looks awesome. Her signature style pairs tight black trousers and huge black shades, mixed with feminine pieces and chunky jewellery.

Aging gracefully and stylishly, Elle we salute you!

StyleStalker

We sent our Style Stalker out into the streets of St Helier, camera in hand, to find some fashionable folk who are ahead of the trends and working their own style.

Jasmine. 21, Student

'I thought it was going to be sunny, so I dressed for the weather.'

Style Stalker: It's nice and refreshing to see someone stand out in a crowd. The bold prints and contrasting colours get a big YES from us.

Chris. 21, Photography Student

'I wanted to be comfy for a photoshoot, and I thought this would do the job!'

Style Stalker: Chris pulls off this aztec print jumper with ease. Vans always complement jeans very well and this pair from flatspot.com do just that.

Jenna. 17, Student

'The sun was out this morning when I got dressed, and I therefore wanted to be summery.'

Style Stalker: This basic outfit is pulled together well by a pair of coral coloured cropped jeans. Her understated handbag and oversized sunglasses finish off the look.

Jess. 19, Student

'I'm off to lunch with my dad so thought this was appropriate.'

Style Stalker: We love stripey maxi dresses and this one from New Look is perfect on Jess. Suitable for any occasion and definitely a wardrobe must have.

Kelsey. 18, Sales Assistant

'I've just been at work so had to dress smart.'

Style Stalker: How lovely to see a young girl dressed so smart, the cut-out print dress is very flattering. The look is completed with a classic Mulberry Bayswater.

Gigi. 18, Dancer

'As the sun was out I thought it was the perfect reason to wear this dress.'

Style Stalker: Blues and Blondes are just the perfect Summer must. The floral pumps add that little feminine twist that the look needs.

GRADUATED ART: FREYA RABET

Freya Rabet left JCG in 2008 having achieved an A in Textiles at AS and A2. That led her to Kingston where she undertook a one year Foundation Diploma in Art & Design, being awarded a distinction. This allowed her to move onward to the BA(Hons) Fashion Design degree course. We first met her when she entered our Student Art Awards and came runner up. In her second year she won her first design project for the young designer Sophie Hulme and got to intern for her over the summer, directing and editing an animation for her which was then shown in Selfridges for 6 weeks last September. Her final year has been non-stop with her getting into Graduate Fashion Week; the highlight so far.

Freya has now been accepted into the fashion recruitment agency InDesign and has also had interest shown by Max Mara so far.

Freya's project is called Connections A/W12 and has derived from the idea of a couple that has been separated through war and how this connection will change or stay the same. The woman is left at home to cope. The man must carry out his military commitments abroad.

This collection aims to create a meeting point between the male military influences and the women's home comforts. A connection between the military and the mundane. She finds comfort in the everyday objects that surround her, that once surrounded them. Knitwear creates the base of this connection. From military jumpers to hand knit cables, it comforts her and keeps her warm. It is oversized and slightly androgynous as she finds comfort in shapes that connect elements of him and her.

SHRINKING VIOLET BODY WRAP EXCLUSIVE TO MATISSE HAIR & BEAUTY

With the sun about to make an appearance any day now we're all going to have to consider the very serious possibility that we're about to have to show some skin!

To make this prospect a little less terrifying make sure you book in for the amazing shrinking body wrap new in at Matisse which will shift fat from difficult areas. It's non-invasive and pain free. Our intrepid Gallery guinea pig hasn't stopped raving about her results: "my thighs haven't looked like this since I was in my twenties! I had it just before I went on holiday and donned my shorts with pride. The whole treatment was really lovely in their boutique salon in St Aubin. Whilst the formula was working its magic I had a fab facial too, which made me feel like I'd really been pampered top to toe. This one is really worth a go if you've got some stubborn bits, which won't budge. I also felt that as well as slimming, it left my skin softer and smoother. After adding a bit of fake tan I've honestly never thought that I have looked in such great shape before!"

This is ideal if you have a special event this summer or are off on holiday and want to be looking your best.

HAIR TRENDS

We chatted to Stuart Farmer, Creative Director of Hairdressing at Elmina Boutique Salon St. Brelade to find out which celebrity is getting it right this summer.

WHO'S GOT GREAT HAIR?

I really like the way Molly King from The Saturdays does her hair at the moment. It is the ideal summer look; long, down, tousled, just very natural. Kate Middleton has a similar look but it is too constructed and styled. The key for popular look is to make it seem effortless.

WHAT COLOURS ARE BIG THIS SUMMER?

Same as always, we're seeing a lot of golden and cool blonde highlights. There is also a trend for high contrast colour which we'll be seeing more of as summer progresses!

THE HOLLYWOOD SECRET IS HERE

The award winning Intraceuticals infusion is exclusive to Softlight Laser Clinic in Hatley's Hairdressers.

It is how J-Lo gets her glow and how Madonna defies Mother Nature! This treatment has been tagged the natural face lift and delivers incredible results, instantly hydrating and tightening skin. You can also opt to have an Atoxylene infusion as part of the treatment which delivers results similar to injectable muscle relaxants. Atoxylene relaxes the tissue without the accompanying paralysis associated with some cosmetic injections, giving you a younger but still natural look.

The skin therapist will be able to tailor the treatment to your specific skin needs. It also feels wonderful, like cool air is being worked over your skin.

We love reading about all our favourite celebrities raving about it: "There is nothing like Intraceuticals... It really helps you look and feel your best." Victoria Beckham

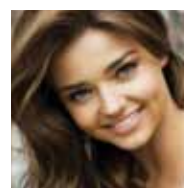

"Intraceuticals leaves my skin glowing and radiant" Miranda Kerr

"Intraceuticals not only makes you look radiant and glowing, it feels so wonderful to use. I have one before every shoot and event." Bar Refaeli

"I love the treatment and so does my skin." Madonna

TRY DENTISTRY WITH A RELAXING APPROACH

Spa Dentistry is a new trend that combines dental visits with relaxation treatments. To achieve this The Dental Spa is continuously working hard to improve your dental experience.

We offer treatments in a nice and relaxing atmosphere by eliminating as much of the clinical environment as possible whilst maintaining the highest professional standards. We provide aromatherapy using scented candles; sleep dentistry and relaxing sessions during or before your dental treatment. You can combine dental procedures with foot or hand reflexology, which has been proven to induce Alfa relaxation by reducing stress and anxiety, increasing pain relief and speeding up healing time. Whilst awaiting your dental appointment you can enjoy a cup of tea from our herbal selection and relax in a friendly and comfortable room.

We provide our patients with the highest standard of treatment with sufficient information on preventative dentistry, which means prevention of decay and gum disease. We offer a wide range of dental treatment such as general and cosmetic dentistry including Zoom and Enlighten whitening, orthodontic treatment (braces), implants and non-invasive facial cosmetic services like Botox and fillers.

We encourage parents to invest in their youngsters future providing them with regular dental visits during which we monitor plaque growth, apply fluoride and fissure sealants which play an important role in the prevention of decay. Thanks to regular dental appointments our young patients feel relaxed and comfortable during visits and most importantly they benefit from healthy teeth.

Come visit us and invest in your, and your children's future!

TREATS FOR THE SUNSHINE

Things are hotting up so we've sought out a few summer essentials to keep you looking beautiful. A slimming tan and skin smoother can go a long way to getting you bikini-ready!

SHISEIDO

BIO PERFORMANCE ADVANCED SUPER REVITALIZING CREAM

You're going to need to go with less make up over summer so make sure your skin is as perfect as possible. This cream reinforces skin's elastic fibers, the key to promoting skin's resilience and firmness. Prevent the first stages of line formation with this richly textured, ultra-hydrating formulation.

CLINIQUE

AGE DEFENSE BB CREAM

Sun damage can lead to older looking skin, and no one wants to look like a Shar Pei puppy. So use this BB cream around your eyes and on your face for a youthful glow.

REN SKIN CARE

BODY CONTOURING ANTI-CELLULITE GEL

Unsightly lumps and bumps can be banished with this wonderful skin smoother.

SISLEY

BODY FLUID SUN CREAM

Everyone wants a tan that lasts longer. This fine luxurious sun cream helps to promote a luminous and long lasting tan whilst also protecting you from harmful UVA and UVB rays. Smells like summer.

M.A.C

MINERALIZE SKINFINISH IN EARTH SHINE

When a night out calls, don't bother with foundation on top of your sunkissed skin. Reach for this amazing bronzer instead, with 4 different shades of gold and brown, you'll look smoking hot.

AROMATHERAPY ASSOCIATES

ENRICH BODY SCRUB

Created with hints of coffee, frankincense and grapefruit. Make sure you use it before sunning yourself so that your skin is primed for tanning!

BRONZE GODDESS SELF-TAN

Finally a fake tan that doesn't smell of fake tan! It'll tan and firm you at the same time. Easy peasy.

DERMALOGICA

MULTIVITAMIN SUN BLOCK SPF20

Skin Hydrating Booster. Add this to your daily moisturiser for super soft skin which is protected from the harmful sun.

HE-SHI QUICK+EASY TANNING KIT

This great new tanning kit comes in 3 stages; exfoliating, tanning and moisturising. Great for that bit of prep before your summer holiday. With micro-dermabrasion crystals and Aloe Vera, there is nothing that isn't good for your skin with these products, so smell like a watermelon and get bikini-ready in one night. We were impressed with its clever instant colour so you know what you're getting and don't have that scary 'development time' where everything can go so, so wrong. Two thumbs up.

EXCLUSIVE SUMMER MAKE-UP LOOKS

By Shiseido's Artistic Director Dick Page and Feelunique at Au Caprice

His technical skill and painter's eye for colour, texture, and detail have firmly established Dick's reputation as an industry leader. He has achieved widespread recognition for his editorial and advertising work, as well as for his more than ten years' experience on runway shows worldwide.

EFFORTLESS SUMMER DAY LOOK

Created for the Spring 2012 Marc By Marc Jacobs collection. Dick created a back-to-basics makeup look which is bright and playful.

HOW TO

Dick applied a wash of foundation to the face to even out skin tone, followed by Shiseido Makeup Translucent Loose Powder to ensure a matte finish. To the cheeks, Dick blended Makeup Luminizing Satin Face Colour in High Beam White with Luminizing Satin Face Colour in Soft Beam Gold, lightly dusting the highlighters under the eyes for a "soft halo" effect. Next, Dick mixed Makeup Luminizing Satin Face Colour in Petal with Luminizing Satin Face Colour in Soft Beam Gold, blending and diffusing the blush onto the apple of the cheeks for a flushed effect.

For the eyes, Dick brushed a coat of Perfect Mascara Full Definition Mascara in Black on the upper lashes and then used a comb to create separation and definition, followed by a light coat on the bottom lashes. Dick used Benefiance Full Correction Lip Treatment on the eyelids for a glossy shine. Custom brows were created for each model by mixing Makeup Shimmering Cream Eye Colour in Sable, Patina and Leather and applying the combination with a mascara comb. On the lips, Dick used Makeup Perfect Rouge Lipstick in Roseate, blotting gently with fingertips to diffuse for a soft look.

FACE

Shiseido Foundation £33.70
Translucent Loose Powder £30.20

CHEEKS

Luminizing Satin Face Colour in High Beam White £27.55
Luminizing Satin Face Colour in Soft Beam Gold £27.55

Benefiance Full Correction Lip Treatment £28.00
Shimmering Cream Eye Color in Sable, Patina and Leather for eyebrow £17.95

LIPS

Perfect Rouge in Roseate £18.80

LAIID BACK SUMMER NIGHT LOOK

Created for Spring 2012 Band of Outsiders' catwalk show. This look is soft, feminine and tailored.

HOW TO

Dick prepped skin with Shiseido The Skincare Multi-Energizing Cream followed by a wash of foundation to correct imperfections. He customized brows for each model by mixing Makeup Shimmering Cream Eye Colour in Sable, Patina and Leather and applying the combination with a mascara comb.

Dick created a stronger eye by applying Makeup Accentuating Cream Eye Liner in Black to the top lash line and inner lower water line. Dick then brushed Makeup Perfect Mascara Full Definition on the top lashes. On the lips, Shiseido Benefiance Full Correction Lip Treatment hydrated and conditioned. A wash of foundation blotted with a damp base sponge removed any natural colour.

FACE

Shiseido Foundation £33.70

BEAUTY FROM THE DEEP

Biotherm uses biotechnology to harness the oceans' powerful and unique properties to infuse their advanced skincare. Since 1952 they've been developing best selling and award winning products.

We met up with Biotherm Coach Jeanette Nexgaard in Feelunique at Au Caprice when she flew into Jersey to find out what her top three favourite products are from the Biotherm range:

"It is so hard to pick just three, I'm addicted to so many! I do love our Aquasource, it is one of our most in demand products. It's a drink for your skin and was voted Best Moisturiser in 2010 in Cosmopolitan Magazine. With summer coming it's great that it is very cooling and soothing so will double up as a fab aftersun.

Then the Skin Ergetic Concentrate is packed with pure products and antioxidants. It's a lovely boost of radiance and I think of it as a five-a-day for your skin. It smells edible and will transform tired-looking skin to fresh-looking skin!

And finally I couldn't live without the D.Code as I've had such great results whilst using it. It is a summer must have. This wonderful anti-cellulite gel will give you visibly smoother skin in 10 days, I've also found that it helps alter where I store fat. This is my wonder product!"

COSMETIC DENTAL GROUP LAUNCH COSMETIC SKIN CLINIC

The Cosmetic Dental Group, based at 9 David Place, St Helier has a well-earned reputation for their holistic approach to the care they offer patients. To this end they work in conjunction with a variety of other healthcare practitioners.

Part of this holistic approach has been the offering of injectable treatments for skin. For some time, Jeremy Willetts, partner, has offered injectables such as toxins for softening lines to complete smile designs for patients. He has however, always harboured a personal ambition to expand this part of the service for some time. 'I totally believe that treatments that increase the confidence of our patients is good for their overall well-being. Due to the success of my dental implant clinic I was simply unable to keep up with the demand for skin treatments. That has all changed now with Jayne Sproson joining us. Jayne owned an extremely successful aesthetic medicine clinic, based within her UK based cosmetic dental practice. I am delighted that Jayne has introduced internationally renowned Medical Aesthetic Practitioner Deborah Forsythe, who has trained many plastic surgeons, GPs, dentists and nurses in the art and science of advanced non-surgical facial aesthetic treatments for skin,' Jeremy explains.

In anticipation of the clinic's success, Deborah was keen to find the right person to join her in offering solutions to address problems such as wrinkles, lack of volume and definition, poor pigmentation and acne. Deborah's first clinic in June is full already, so she is thrilled to have found the right skills in Mary O'Keeffe-Burgher. Mary has been a Medical Aesthetic Practitioner on the island for the last five years and already has an established following in the Channel Islands. "I like Mary's approach. She understands that less can be more, to achieve a natural enhancement. Mary doesn't just 'chase a line', by that I mean - spot a wrinkle and inject. We need to have a proper assessment of the medical history; listen to the patients concerns and what can be realistically achieved. We understand that sometimes what the patient thinks they require will not achieve the outcome they desire, but we have the skills and experience to offer so many alternatives to give them that confidence back" explains Deborah, who is the founding member of the International Institute of Aesthetic Medicine.

Deborah believes her specialism is actually World Peace not skin - "Our clinics are like confessionals and we know that if Mum is happy, the kids are happy and so then Dad is happy, as I say, we deal in World Peace!" she says. "On a more serious note, we of course guarantee confidentiality. Nobody will know your secrets - everyone thinks you are visiting the dentist or hygienist. The clinic time allocated ensures that you leave with post surgical makeup so there are no tell tale signs and payment arrangements mean you do not have to return to reception. Of course we offer confidence in our treatments and convenience in clinic opening times, but confidentiality is paramount." Deborah adds.

The Cosmetic Skin Clinic has also considered the financial implications of ongoing maintenance - after all, you don't expect to nip to the gym for a couple of sessions and the results stay forever, and this is exactly the same principle. The great thing about non-surgical is that it is not permanent, however, once you have seen the dream team already hailed as 'The Jersey Lip Queens', 98% of patients will never see anyone else and will want to keep up with treatments. Unique to Jersey, the clinic have a reward system for loyal patients with their payment option through FACEplan. Similar to their hugely successful Dental HealthPlan, patients agree a treatment programme and pay on a monthly basis, which gives privileged member discounts.

HARRY FOSTER ADVANCED VISION CARE

Mr CT Pillai, medical director and lead surgeon of Harley Street clinic Advanced Vision Care answers some frequently asked questions about vision correction treatment.

I've been told I'm not suitable for laser - does that mean I can't have any treatment? Not at all. That was the case in the past but developments in vision correction treatment have come on in leaps and bounds since then.

I'm fed up of wearing one pair of glasses for distance and another for reading and I don't want varifocals - is there any treatment for it? Clear Lens Exchange does what was previously impossible - correct both long and short sight at the same time. This means an end to juggling two pairs of glasses or wearing varifocal glasses, which many people find tricky to manage.

What does it cost? To make our treatments accessible to all we have a range of 0% finance and deferred payment plans so you don't have to wait to free yourself from glasses or contact lenses. In fact, there will be some great money-saving offers only to those who come along on the night. You may be surprised at just how affordable treatment can be, and when you consider that it's an investment that lasts a lifetime it's money very well spent.

Is it safe and will it hurt? There really is nothing to worry about. Treatment is over so quickly - within around half an hour - then you're back on your way home before you know it. We use only the most advanced techniques and technology that have been proved without a shadow of a doubt to be clinically safe, and all our procedures are performed using anaesthetic drops so that you won't feel a thing.

Just how good will my vision be afterwards? Amazing! It's no exaggeration when our patients describe their experience of vision correction as "life-changing" - the results really are that outstanding. 100% of our patients achieve driving standard eyesight after treatment but 95% of them go beyond that to achieve 20/20 vision. When you are short-sighted it's hard to imagine being able to see everything in such razor-sharp detail and brilliant colours, but that is what you can expect.

Mr Pillai and his team will be at Harry Foster Opticians in St Helier on Wednesday 25 July for an open evening of information and exclusive money-saving offers.

Dominic Jones, Director of Jersey Potteries and Tony Morris, Executive Chef Director of Jersey Potteries.

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES

WORDS JOSEPH BAKER

LOCAL AND SUSTAINABLE were once the hallowed terms of a fastidiously conscientious foodie avant-garde; they are now the buzzwords of a more etiolated tranche of diners. The vast majority of us finally succumbed to a faint sense of debt to, and belief in, the integrity of eating local. At the forefront of this muddled epicurean consciousness is the knowledge that, in some way, a commitment to local provenance is the vital antidote to the homogenizing effects of supermarkets and cheap chain restaurants. I met with Dominic Jones, one of four brothers that together run the Jersey Pottery group, and their executive chef Tony Morris to discover that, fortunately, they are at the sharp end of it all.

Jersey Pottery has long enjoyed an iconic status with tourists and locals alike, representing all the best Jersey has to offer: from the cream teas that enraptured my German grandmother twenty years ago, to a contemporary quest to offer islanders top quality local produce at humane prices. These days the Jersey Pottery group operates 19 sites island-wide, including The Oyster Box, The Crab Shack and the Pottery cafes alongside an outside catering branch, at the same time serving nine of the Island's schools. These branches unite to form an eclectic enterprise bound by an ethos of honesty and an unwavering commitment to all things local.

Overlooking Gorey castle, at their Castle Green restaurant, I was privy to taste the commotion. With a tray of local vegetables, Executive Chef Tony Morris retired to the kitchen, returning three times over the next twenty minutes. Each time proffering a dish that blazed with locality. Significantly, this was not a unique exhibition. Each dish could be traced to the specials board: this food was a wonderful response to season and availability, making it a reflection and celebration of the local environment. First was Mackerel and hand-dived scallops, poised between sweet local tomatoes, Jersey Royals, courgette and spinach with garlic butter. Each ingredient sang, as did all that followed: Jersey Bass with sweet local asparagus, royals, green beans and shellfish cream; delicate Chancre Crab Cakes with roast red pepper dressing and herby salad. Finally, Jersey Lily jelly with summer berries. Relishing the zenith of the summer growing season, these simple dishes epitomized the best of local food; they were utter champions of soil and sea.

Dominic eagerly traced each ingredient to a web of local suppliers, stressing a buying ethos that wherever possible seeks to support local growers, fisherman and farmers. Whether it's the line caught bass from the Fresh Fish Company, the tomatoes from 3 Oak Vineries or their very own rare breed Manor Farm reared pigs; this is an enterprise emphatically committed to local produce. Their support doesn't end there; through a network of contacts in London the Pottery group are actively promoting Jersey produce on the mainland. And why not, as Dominic confessed, for it is a true pleasure to offer quality local food to lots of people.

Dominic and Tony spearhead a team that convinces of the Pottery group's staunch commitment to quality and transparency when it comes to local food. The quaint logistics of nine people tasting a single ice cream reassuringly conveys the personality that guides their business. Where this might not be entirely shrewd, it preserves an attitude toward their product that they believe benefits both them and the Island in the long term. Attempting to extend quality, local food to large numbers is an enormous challenge. Catering, as any other industry, must evolve and develop to stay afloat and compete with mass produced but inferior products. The delicate balance of commercial savvy and a genuine passion for food is something extremely rare; they certainly come close. Indeed, the Pottery group's next venture, Banjo's, promises to be an exciting, urban, cosmopolitan and energetic endeavor that will pay homage to a British food heritage that cherished the drama of eating out. Jersey Pottery recognizes that food is theatre: it can be instructive, entertaining, satisfying, and is above all, absolutely necessary. What was offered me today seems to perfectly suit the temperate condition of our windward Isle. In raising the profile of local food you also raise the profile and the joy of eating. Consequently, the company that shells out 40,000 oysters a year is constantly looking for the perfect alchemy of local product, service and value. The Pottery group is grasping at a shared experience of the Island, and in doing so rather importantly entrenches a distinctly local identity onto their plates.

ALL THE INGREDIENTS APART FROM A SEASONING IS LOCALLY CAUGHT AND FARMED IN JERSEY FOR THESE THREE DISHES:

Mackerel and seared hand-dived scallops served with Jersey Royals, Spinach, Courgette and Tomatoes with garlic butter.

Chancre Crab Cakes with local roast red pepper dressing and herb salad.

Bass with Jersey Royals, Green Beans and Asparagus with a Shellfish Cream.

EAT YOUR WAY AROUND OUR ISLAND

WORDS GRANT RUNYON ■ ILLUSTRATION CHELSEA WHITE

One of the things Jersey does extremely well is restaurants, and especially restaurants in beautiful locations. There are few places in the world where you have so many opportunities to eat risotto whilst staring at a castle, digest lobster metres from the breaking waves or tuck into a cheeseburger whilst avoiding eye contact with a meadow full of bemused cows.

We also do ambiance, despite the best attempts of the architectural sadists who designed St Helier. No trip to the Island is complete without the chance to soak up the Bergerac/Hungerford aura of St Aubin's, the refined elegance of luxury hotel dining at Ocean or the pirate village charm of Gorey harbour. We are also well on our way to having more gastropubs per square mile than North London, but when a man is tired of creme brûlée, he is tired of life.

Most visitors won't find the time to enjoy all of our restaurants in one trip, but one of the pleasures of living here is that there are so many places to enjoy great food in an unusual setting. Some of them are posh hotels, some of them are non-nonsense greasy spoons, and many more are just picnic spots that offer the ideal opportunity to devour sandwiches and scotch eggs before the ants carry them away. The thing they all have in common is the memorable combination of good food in a great location. Well, that and the seagulls.

As a professional glutton, Gallery doesn't have enough space to list all the places I like to stuff my face, so make sure you pick up a copy of Appetite, our companion guide to eating out around the Island. To get you started, here's a quick guide to the reasons I've been having to undo my top button in the last month.

SEASIDE SPICE

If you're hungry, you can do a lot worse than just turning up at Gorey village and following your nose. They've got a new branch of Danny's serving his signature fusion cuisine, the ever-popular Suma's, a great selection of informal pub and hotel restaurants, as well as the Castle Green perched high above it all.

My new Eastern favourite is Sudu's Spice House on Gorey Pier, where Friday and Saturday nights see the Cafe Du Port transform into a venue to enjoy delicious home-style Sri Lankan food. It's lighter and, dare I say it, healthier than the typical Indian and Bangladeshi menus that have made me the chubby man I am today, which consequently results in me eating twice as much.

The trend of seaside cafes opening late and switching up their menus is one I feel the Island could do with more of - St John is much improved by Bonne Nuit Beach Cafe's weekend Thai menu, and St Ouen is a better place since El Tico rose from the rubble a few years back and started serving after dark. If only The Hungry Man was open 24 hours and sold burritos, I could just live in one of those huts and not leave Rozel until they carry me away on a taco stretcher covered in grated cheese and guacamole.

COLOMBERIE: PASSPORT TO INTERNATIONAL GLUTTONY

If I was lucky enough to have three stomachs, I've often thought how wonderful it would be to eat my way down Colomberie, and by extension around the world. This unassuming strip of town crams in two of my favourite Thai restaurants, great Italian and Portuguese food, a traditional tea shop, a Polish delicatessen for my pierogi fix and more cafes than you can shake a cinnamon stick at. The most recent arrival is a Transylvanian delicatessen, which sprung up overnight after a powerful storm caused a mysterious freighter to dock at our harbour one evening. During regular hours, the owner assumes human form to tempt mortals with a fine selection of baguettes containing the smoked meat and cheeses of his bat-infested homeland, not to mention the unmissable 'chimney cake' - a sort of sugary kebab, if you can imagine such a thing. It's bloody marvellous, if you'll excuse the pun.

BURGER ME

Of course, it's not all fancy food in this Island of ours. What latte and sandwiches are to our capital, ice cream and burger fans are to Jersey's countryside. Chances are, if you can park your car and enjoy a view in Jersey, you can buy hot meat and a can of coke. You might have to fight off a mob of seagulls, but that's just a sign of how tasty the grub is, and who can fault a hungry bird from wanting to nourish its young with such fine food?

For starters, I recommend you get your burger on at Bouley Bay, the Line Up on the five mile road, or sample the outstanding home-made sausages by the entrance to Noirmont point. Both Le Hocq and La Rocque cafes have plenty of fans, and grease loving insomniacs can eat at the harbour cafe at the La Colette docks from the crack of dawn. The cycle path from town to St Aubins also has a decent cafe almost every hundred metres, so make sure your evening fitness ride is accompanied by the odd bacon cheeseburger, just to keep your spirits up.

Bon appetit, mes amis. Enjoy our Island, enjoy your food, and I'll see you at Weight Watchers.

ULTIMATE CHANNEL ISLANDS CULINARY SHOWDOWN

Jersey and Guernsey are gearing up for the inaugural Inter Island Culinary Muratti!

Two top chefs from Jersey and Guernsey, who were last seen battling against each other on ITV's Britain's Best Dish, are gearing up for ultimate inter island challenge where they will be tasked with creating a four course meal plus canapés from a mystery basket for 55 covers per team. Mark Jordan and Daniel Green, who went head to head to create the best British dessert on the cooking show last November, are now channelling their efforts into picking five chefs to take to the first Craft Guild of Chefs' Inter Islands Challenge on October 22-23 in the newly refurbished kitchens at the Academy of Culinary Arts, Highlands College Jersey.

Chefs that are interested in being a part of the team should email chef@defrance.co.uk The team captains will then select their teams which will include at least one student to reflect the importance the Craft Guild places on passing culinary skills on to the next generation. The teams will have to impress a discerning group of diners, including a judging panel of top London chefs; Henri Brosi, executive chef at The Dorchester; Paul Gayler, executive chef at the Lanesborough Hotel and Andrew Bennett MBE, who is food and beverages manager as well as executive chef at the Sheraton in Park Lane.

This year's winning team in the Inter Islands Challenge will be announced at the 2nd dinner on the Tuesday evening (23rd October).

For further information on how to be involved by sponsoring the food and wine for the challenge or to buy tickets for either evening (£50 each) please email: Eileen.Buicke-Kelly@highlands.ac.uk

CALLING ALL PYRO-GOURMANIACS!

'You like HOT, or you like, HOT HOT HOT??!' Ever been to Park House Thai Restaurant in Colomberie? If you have, that question will ring in your ears – especially if you've ever been daft, or drunk enough, or simply a liar, liar pants on fire and gone for 'HOT HOT HOT'.

Fact is, some like it hot. Some like it so effin' hot that chilli, Tabasco, Piri-Piri and the likes, are common, like seasoning... Whereas most people opt for the ordinary duo on the table, for others, pepper just won't cut the mustard.

Gallery went on a quest to find out more about the fiery little vegetable known as the chilli and how come more and more of us are liking a bit of a kick in our food. There's no shortage of Chinese, Indian and Thai restaurants in Jersey... A bit of Japanese and now a recently opened Sri Lankan restaurant on the Island, there are plenty of hot dishes out there for any pyro-gourmaniac to indulge in. Plenty of fusion restaurants are adopting a selection of hot culinary delights into their menus too... It seems a lot like it hot.

Chillies represent the majority in terms of hot ingredients. The heat in chillies is measured in Scoville Heat Units (SHUs)... The common green jalapeño pepper, for instance, measures in at 2500-3000 SHUs whereas Tabasco hits 30,000. It's the Capsaicin levels that decide the heat factor: the higher the Capsaicin levels, the hotter the chilli. Size and colour is of no consequence when trying to determine the intensity of heat or flavour. I would say though, that more recently, hybrid and modified freak chillies – the mega hot ones, all have aliases that give you the idea that it's a 'blow your backside off', type of hot - like a porn name for a chilli... For instance, the Chocolate Habanero, or 'Congo Black' as it's otherwise known, another is the infamous Naga Bhut Jolokia or 'Ghost Chilli'. Or how about the record breaking, world's hottest, 'Trinidad Scorpion Butch Taylor', which made headlines in April 2011 when laboratory tests measured its heat at 1,463,700 SHUs... That little bugger sounds deadly hot.

Check out some of the YouTube videos of self-proclaimed 'dicks' who take up the 'Ghost Chilli Challenge'. We do not recommend trying it at home. That particular chilli has recently been used to make grenades in India, replacing the usual explosives – it is equally as effective and better for the environment. Boom. There are a few local pyro-gourmaniacs out there who make powders and oils from the notorious Ghost Chilli. One of the powders I saw was labelled simply, 'DANGER', with the small print reading, 'Red-hot chilli powder. Do not allow contact with the skin. Do not inhale. Do not get in eyes. If handled do not play with yourself or anyone else for 6 hours.'

Chilli has been around since at least 7500BC. It has become a worldwide taste sensation (thanks to Columbus) and has been adopted as a common ingredient of everyday cooking in many households, from Jersey to Australia. Whether you like it hot or hot hot...

AT THE centre OF IT ALL

Sandbanks | Apt 1 | St Helier | new lower price: £695,000 Flying Freehold

WITH ITS ABUNDANCE OF high-tech luxury features and amazing location, this ground floor new-build apartment should be at the top of the list for all those of you who have been hunting for a two bedroom home.

The first thing that strikes you as you walk in is just how good this place looks, it's been created by one of Jersey's leading builders, A C Mauger Special Projects for Style Homes, and you can tell it is the work of people who do this as a passion. It's so much more spacious than it looks from the outside and all the rooms flow perfectly. You're left thinking, 'yes, that's how I would have wanted it laid out'; it just all works really well.

Benefiting from superb sea views, there is also a large paved patio area and lawned garden exclusively for this apartment. So when you don't fancy basking in the sunshine on the beach, which is a hop, skip and a jump away, then you can throw a garden party instead! Simply add a hot tub, BBQ, some lounge furniture, and open up the double doors to the kitchen, and you've doubled the size of your entertaining space. Also, since the exterior of this building won first prize in the recent Design Awards it is just a nice to be outside looking in as it is to be admiring the beach looking out.

The property is situated in a central location in St Aubin's Bay allowing for easy access into St Helier and St Aubin's harbour, so you're spoilt for choice with bars and restaurants. You can live the dream by having a leisurely cycle in either direction along the cycle-track, stopping for a drink, then grab some dinner and make your way home. You're also basically smack bang in the middle of everything, so whether you want to meet friends at El Tico for breakfast or show some relatives Gorey Castle you're not going to suffer from the Jersey mindset of 'oh-thats-a-bit-too-far-too-travel'.

If you've been looking at apartments for a while you will be struck by how large both the bedrooms are in comparison. We were especially taken with the grand master bedroom and it's idyllic sea views and bi-folding doors leading on to the patio.

Most people will wonder about the noise of the traffic with it sitting on the Avenue, but it has been specifically designed with this in mind and was built with state of the art soundproofing. The only time this will be a problem is if you are out in the garden entertaining, so simply pop some music on and 'hey presto' problem solved. Speaking of cars there is also a large garage with electric door plus parking for guests.

It's hard to pinpoint who would like this apartment most; young professionals who'll love that they can walk to work and easily make their way back from a night out in town, or people looking to down-size to somewhere easy to live. This property really presents a wonderful package, all wrapped up beautifully.

TOP DRAWER

It really is the little things that can make life so much easier. Until we had taken a look at the latest wonderful creation from Bulthaup we hadn't given drawer insides a second thought. However now we've seen this it's all we want.

As ever with Bulthaup, it has been designed with the user firmly in mind. Most current drawer systems dictate the sizes of the compartments and they are then fixed forever. With this system you slide the stainless steel 'dividers' along to create and change your own spaces - so if you go out and buy a super new giant pasta server, you can make it fit! The flexibility is endless. Also the quirky horizontal layout is actually incredibly practical as that is the natural way for your hand to reach into a drawer to grasp something; not the traditional front to back of the drawer that has just been repeated again and again. This is why Bulthaup products are so easy to fall in love with - you actually feel like they've taken care of every aspect. The kitchen is their arena and they know it completely.

We were also very taken with the optional extra fittings; beyond the basic prism and slider divider fittings you can buy specialist knife holders and containers for small items as well as wonderful little prism shaped see-through spice jars which leave everything blissfully organised.

BBQ SHOWDOWN

BEST FOR THE BEACH (AND BALCONY)

WINNER: THE WEBER Q120 PORTABLE GAS BBQ

WHY: This is a stand out winner in this category. It runs on small, light gas canisters (£6.99 each) which last about 4 hours on a medium heat, and since they are so small you can keep a spare on you (so no last minute running to a garage forecourt to get a gas bottle refill and no lugging it around). It also looks fab and it is so compact you can keep it in the car for spur of the moment BBQ'ing. We love that these are so much greener than disposable BBQs and because it has a lid it will cook your feast more efficiently and economically.

PRICE: £219 (which includes removable stand), but also check out the Q100 model available in pink and teal for £179

BEST FOR FIRST TIME BBQ OWNERS

WINNER: THE WEBER PORTABLE SMOKEY JOE

WHY: In our opinion, your first BBQ should be charcoal; get down and dirty and make fire... It's your initiation into the world of BBQs and has to be done.

The Smokey Joe is an easy to manage small charcoal kettle BBQ ideal for first time fun.

PRICE: £49.99 (available in lots of great colours). Make sure you pick up an 'Essential Charcoal BBQ Pack' made up of 4kg of charcoal briquettes, a chimney starter (must have for all charcoal BBQ owners - white hot charcoal with no hassle in 15 mins), fire starters and a Weber 57cm premium cover currently on offer for £44.99

BEST FOR LUXURY

WINNER: SWISS GRILL AROSA 250B GAS BBQ

WHY: This is the business. Just look at it and marvel. It has a large cooking area with 4 burners, infrared side burner and back burner for a rotisserie. There's a whole lot of shiny stainless steel here to get transfixed with, so who needs a kitchen anymore?

PRICE: £789 which includes free rotisserie, griddle, cover and poultry roaster worth £166.96 which looks awesome!

BEST FOR FAMILY

WINNER: OUTDOOR CHEF ASCONA GAS BBQ

WHY: This is a gas BBQ in the shape of a kettle BBQ with a hinged lid and two burners for more control over the temperature. It is the only BBQ that reduces flare-ups 100%, reducing the likelihood of cremated meats and best of all it's very easy to look after because all of its parts (the kettle, funnel and cooking grid) are made of porcelain enamelled steel meaning cleaning is a breeze.

PRICE: £459 which includes free cover and cookbook worth £61.58

ALL OF THE FEATURED BBQS ARE AVAILABLE FROM RANSOMS GARDEN CENTRE AND TO AVOID DOMESTICS / DIVORCES / PERSONAL INJURY / LOSS OF DIY PRIDE / HUNGRY PEOPLE GETTING TRASHED WHILST WAITING FOR BBQ TO BE ASSEMBLED, THEY ASSEMBLE AND DELIVER FREE OF CHARGE SO YOU CAN JUST LIGHT THE CHARCOAL OR ATTACH THE GAS BOTTLE AND START COOKING.

MARVELLOUS MONOGRAMS

Historically used as a royal signature, a monogram is a set of letters, usually initials, which are combined into a decorative mark used to identify a particular person or family. Romans and Greeks used them on coins, in the Middle Ages artisans used them to sign their work and during the Victorian era members of high society adapted the monogram for personal use as a symbol their social standing.

Contemporary British royals use a two-letter combination monogram with the groom's first initial in front, followed by the bride's first initial; however unfortunately for the latest royal newly weds this would have resulted in the monogram 'WC'!

You can WIN your very own bespoke monogram design worth £175, personally created for you by the talented design team at Ananya. Simply check out www.ananyacards.com and tell us what the Sanskrit word Ananya means, email your answers to win@gallery.je

Brett Muldoon The Cake Factory

Brett Muldoon

Born	13th November 1982
School	Le Rocquier school
Uni	Highlands College
First job	Paper boy
Car	VW Transporter T5 camper van
Book	The Hobbit (can't wait for the film)
Music	Radiohead (anyone can play guitar)
Film	Has to be Jaws - 'we're gonna need a bigger boat'
Gadget	Apple products all the way!
Last holiday	New York
Enjoys	Surfing, snowboarding and wakeboarding
Not many people know...	I'm dyslexic

So, tell us what inspired you to get this off the ground?

Well, apart from joinery I have been making cakes for years and love making mad designs, cakes that you would not think possible. This is my passion and that's why I put lots of work into my cakes, knowing this I wanted to move on in life and do something I enjoy, so after a lot of chatting with my partner I started The Cake Factory.

What did you do prior to this?

I am a Foreman for a joinery company. Yes, a weird transition you may think but it actually comes in handy as I use these skills to make large structures and base framing to some of my larger cakes. That's why at Cake Factory we can go big, but as this is a new business I still have to work doing joinery.

Did that teach you any lessons that helped you succeed?

Just to work hard and that every job you do you make it to the best quality and if you supply a great product people will be loyal and come back because without your customers you have no business! Plus, if it's just a passion only leave it as a part time fun thing to do don't get your heart involved in business.

What's the hardest lesson you've learnt since starting the business?

Underestimating the amount of work involved to start a business and that apart from JBV (Jersey Business Venture), who were a great help. There's not much other help out there to local people starting up, also taking into mind the strain on relationships and having support from your partner.

Any funny stories that you have about the business starting out?

Not so far, but as I'm getting stranger and stranger cakes to make there is a lot of potential. Mainly funny hen do and stag cakes!

What are your plans for the future?

To expand the Cake Factory name to an islandwide customer base and open a collection shop in town for every cake event and also to branch out to all of our local corporate businesses, supplying local people with the best, largest cakes in jersey as centrepieces to their events or functions.

What advice would you give to would-be entrepreneurs?

Maybe if you're starting a new business don't be scared to work with a joint partner to lighten the load as on your own there's a lot to do. Don't let business get personal - it's about making money. Also, not >>

ABOUT THE BUSINESS

Cake Factory is a local business offering a completely unique cake creation service - making the impossible possible. Their speciality is in creating personalised one-off sculptures incorporating joinery as a structural frame, giving the customer the freedom of any shape or size cake. They also have the structural engineering expertise to create self-supporting large scale sculptures from fully edible ingredients of anything from gymnasium equipment to drum kits, houses, instruments and special scenes personalised with your favourite characters in. So if you want moving parts, flames or even running water incorporated in the cake they love a challenge.

If you have seen Cake Boss or Ace of Cakes, this is Cake Boss, Jersey style. Our aim is to amaze your guests with a piece that will be talked about, photographed and then, importantly, eaten and enjoyed! Of course, we also offer a fast turnaround on smaller personalised party cakes and individual cupcakes to suit all budgets.

>> realising earlier that I could have done this years ago but let myself get intimidated by the thought of starting a business. At least give it a good go, because if it fails you can always get back up and try again, so go for it, you can only learn from your mistakes and gain more knowledge.

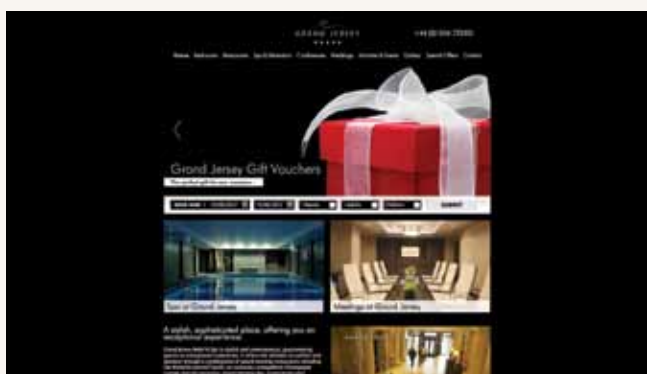

New Business

Synergy Secretarial Recruitment launched recently, a new boutique recruitment consultancy specialising solely in PA, secretarial, reception and administrative positions.

Established by Kathryn Duarte, herself a seasoned PA who has worked internationally, with several years experience recruiting secretarial staff in the City of London, Synergy Secretarial Recruitment (SSR) brings a fresh approach to this crucial sector of recruitment.

Recruiting for a range of positions from Executive Assistants, Office Managers and Private PAs, to Legal Secretaries and Receptionists, SSR offers specialist advice and expertise in this area, focusing on providing personalised service to both clients and candidates alike. "Having worked in these roles myself", says Kathryn, "I truly understand not just the content and requirements of the different positions, but also the candidate fit required for each different company culture and different roles and teams within those organisations. Support roles often tend to be overlooked by generalist agencies, when in actual fact they have never been more crucial to the success of an organisation, and at SSR we understand each role and every candidate's value. In today's challenging markets, companies are judged by clients on every single interaction, so it has never been more important to ensure the right support staff are in place at every juncture." Synergy Secretarial Recruitment works closely with clients to build long term relationships and function as an extension to their own HR department, providing a professional, discreet and bespoke service in the recruitment of high calibre support staff.

Sharon Therin

Legal Assistant | Collas Crill

I want to get on the property ladder but where do I start?

Collas Crill's 'Queen of Apartments' Sharon Therin gives her top tips...

1 Visit your bank's mortgage team or mortgage broker to find out how much you can borrow;

it is generally five times your own, or your joint, salary.

Beware: any outstanding debts could affect the amount you can borrow.

2 You now know what you can borrow and the fun begins - viewing properties!

Make a list of your priorities, for instance parking, private garden, the potential to extend. As a first time buyer you are in a strong position to strike a deal with a seller. Don't be afraid to make an offer at less than the asking price. They can only say no!

3 So you have found the property you want to buy.

You need to go back to your bank to make a formal application to borrow. The bank might have already said it would lend what you need but be aware their agreement is made subject to receiving a satisfactory survey on the property, which confirms that it is worth what you have agreed to pay. You pay the bank for this report, but it is undertaken for their benefit and does not look closely at the structure of the building. Therefore if you are buying an older property you might wish to get a more detailed survey. Bear in mind that the more detail in the survey, the more it will cost.

4 How do I find out what the legal fees will be?

Your estate agent will undoubtedly recommend some firms for you to call and get a quote for legal services. Friends and relatives may recommend their own lawyers. Do shop around and don't be afraid to ask what you are getting for your money. This is the biggest investment you are likely to make - the cheapest quote may not always be the best.

5 How do I make the best use of my legal adviser?

We are there to help and guide you through the transaction, so don't be afraid to call or email us with questions when they arise. Remember we have agreed a fixed fee so it doesn't matter how often you contact us, the fee remains the same. We are gathering all sorts of information for your benefit and will be happy to discuss any concerns you have, big or small.

HSBC Senior Management Appointments

HSBC have a new Senior Management Team in place to lead the local Corporate, Commercial and Business Banking services.

Gary Drinkwater who has worked in the banking industry for more than 35 years, first with Midland Bank and then HSBC, has been appointed Regional Corporate and Commercial Director for the Channel Islands and Isle of Man with responsibility for Business Banking, Corporate and institutional business. A former president of the Jersey Bankers Association, Gary was chairman of the Institute of Directors in Jersey for three years until 2011. Gary is married to Joy and lives at Gorey in St. Martin. His appointment follows the retirement of Dave Hellen, who was Regional Director for the Channel Islands and Isle of Man. Dave spent 40 years working for the Bank, the last ten of those in a senior capacity in Jersey.

Nick Henman and Tim Dare have also been appointed to senior roles as part of the bank's experienced management team. Nick Henman is the new Area Corporate and Commercial Director for Jersey. Before moving to the Island, Nick worked as Head of Business Performance for HSBC's Commercial Banking business at Canary Wharf. Latterly he was in the strategy team who alongside the British Bankers Association implemented a range of initiatives to support small and medium sized businesses. Nick is married to Claire. They have three children and live in St Saviour.

Tim Dare is the new Deputy Area Corporate and Commercial Director for Jersey. He has been with the Bank since 1982 and has extensive Commercial Banking experience at a senior level in the North of England. Tim has arrived in Jersey following two years at the Bank's Head Office where he led a team responsible for approving lending proposals from a variety of Regions within the UK. He is engaged to partner Loraine and lives in St Helier. Away from the office, all three Directors enjoy a range of outdoor interests including a shared interest in water sports; Tim is a qualified advance open water SCUBA diver and Gary lists surfing among his interests.

C5 boosts team with three new consultants

Three consultants have recently joined C5 Alliance in Jersey, further strengthening the IT consultancy's client service offering.

David Scambler brings over 17 years of IT industry experience to the firm and joins as a senior consultant. He specialises in desktop and server deployment methodologies and is a proficient Wintel engineer, particularly Microsoft System Center Configuration Manager (SCCM) and Active Directory. Mr Scambler has worked in several different business sectors and has experience in investment banking, law and the consultancy sector; experience that is valuable to many Channel Island businesses.

Louis Smit joins C5 as a consultant specialising in SAP Business Object reporting with experience of utilising this technology in the hedge fund sector as well as private banking. Mr Smit has over 10 years' experience in IT and has extensive knowledge of designing tools and systems that facilitate client reporting. He is also an experienced client relationship manager and will be taking on project management roles on C5 client sites. C5 has also appointed David Scott as an associate consultant providing expertise on data warehousing solutions. Mr Scott has been a specialist in this sector for over 17 years and has worked on large scale enterprise projects within high data-volume industries including retail, insurance, airlines, government and finance.

Mr Scott also provides C5 clients in the finance sector with bespoke data based application solutions for internal and regulatory reporting, fund management, Forex processing and client review systems.

Chief Operating Officer at C5 Rob Leader said: "Bringing in David, Louis and David adds some further diverse skills to our team. They will add expertise in very specific areas that we can utilise in bespoke solutions for our clients as well as core IT competencies that will add greater strength and depth to our client teams.

Celebrations at Side-on!

Time for another celebration at Side-on! This month Steve Hutchins passed his CIM Professional Diploma in Marketing.

Steve, who has worked within the design and marketing industry in various ways over the years both as a Graphic Designer and more heavily as Side-on's lead Account Director felt it would be beneficial to expand his knowledge and fundamentals of the many facets of the marketing process. Steve decided to take up the diploma to enable him to provide further support to his clients. Steve can now offer a greater depth of marketing capability and advice, guiding his clients in their brand communications. Steve has said about passing his diploma, "I'm overjoyed to have passed the CIM diploma because the CIM as a body are held in high esteem, as are the qualifications. It's a great way to develop my skills and I'm looking forward to putting what I have learnt into practice. I may look to extend my knowledge further after a bit of a break from juggling my studies amongst work and being a dad."

President for Chambre Des Ecrivains

The association of Jersey solicitors known as the Chambre Des Ecrivains has recently elected a new President.

Mr Philip Syvret a partner at Benest & Syvret has been elected to the post of President. He takes over the role from Malcolm Le Boutillier who has acted as President since 2007. The Chambre Des Ecrivains has existed since 1867. The President sits as a Member of the full Law Society Committee. Philip Syvret said "I am delighted to take on this role. The Chambre Des Ecrivains has existed as an association fulfilling a dual role of promoting the interest of solicitors within the legal profession and exercising disciplinary functions for over a century. The nature of legal services offered in Jersey and the way in which they are provided has changed dramatically over the last ten years let alone over the period in which the Chambre Des Ecrivains has existed. I look forward to representing the interests of local solicitors in ongoing reforms."

New Partner at Collas Crill

Collas Crill appoints new fiduciary partner Channel Islands law firm Collas Crill is continuing to invest in its fiduciary practice with the appointment of a new partner to its Jersey office.

Shining success for local Jewellers

Local business Rivoli Jewellers is celebrating after six members of staff gained a series of Professional Diplomas from the National Association of Goldsmiths (NAG) and the Gemological Association of Great Britain (Gem-A) during the past 12 months.

Three members of staff achieved the level one Jewellers Diploma (JET 1), Silvia Marques achieved JET 2 and is now recognised by the NAG as a Professional Jeweller, Carla Nunes, who already holds the Professional Jewellers Diploma qualified as a Gemstone Graduate and Melanie Mayer achieved the prestigious Gem-A Diploma in Gemology and was awarded FGA (Fellow of the Gemological Association) status. The team has spent between 6 months and three years studying for the various qualifications by distance learning.

The National Association of Goldsmiths Diplomas are nationally recognised professional qualifications for jewellers aimed at enhancing customer service, increasing consumer confidence and providing essential staff leadership, motivation and management skills.

The Gem-A Diploma in Gemmology, awarded to Melanie Mayer, is taught around the world and is globally recognized as the highest status in Gemmology.

Michael Hoare, chief executive of the National Association of Goldsmiths said; "I applaud the whole team on their achievements and for their commitment to excellent customer service. Customers don't always know who to trust when buying jewellery and gemstones, but by asking if the person serving has the Professional Jeweller's Gemstone Diploma they know that they will get the right advice, information and support."

Rivoli Jewellers is situated in the heart of St Helier and specialises in diamonds, watches and quality fashion jewellery.

New Volunteer to stop Crime

Niall McClure, Managing Director of G4S Secure Solutions (Jersey) Ltd, is the new Volunteer Chair for Jersey Crimestoppers, replacing Peter Cropper. The role is a three year commitment and Mr McClure is responsible for leading a committee of volunteer members and fulfilling the national charity's work and objectives in Jersey. The primary purpose of the national charity is to help make communities safer places to live by enabling people to give information they may know about crime in their area to the Police anonymously. The primary role of the volunteer committee in Jersey is to promote the Crimestoppers service and raise awareness of the anonymous telephone number - 0800 555 111 - and website www.crimestoppers.uk.org which can also be used to give information anonymously.

Two more recruited to local HR Consultancy

Outsourcing the many and varied tasks that fall under the heading of Human Resources to competent professionals is on the increase. Numbers are up at HR Now as they are joined by Liz and Siân Phillips. Liz and Siân bring a breadth and depth of experience in all aspects of HR management, gained over careers that span many years and a variety of sectors. Formerly Country HR Manager (Channel Islands and Falklands) with Standard Chartered Bank, Liz Hobden is an impressive change manager with particular enthusiasm for employee relations, performance and talent management, employee development and staff engagement. During her time with the bank she also had responsibility for the HR needs of 100 staff in the firm's Private Bank in London for 18 months. Siân Phillips, also part time HR Consultant for an international fiduciary services business headquartered in Jersey, has been a CIPD committee member and part-time tutor for CIPD qualifications at Highlands College for several years. Her career in HR started in the eighties with a large, international retailer and over the years her work with companies in the legal, accountancy, banking and hospitality sectors has contributed to her comprehensive technical knowledge and expertise. Siân is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel & Development.

New Appointment at ALX Training

ALX Training, the Channel Islands' leading provider of workplace skills training, has appointed Roz Ibbotson as the firm's newest trainer in a move that enables the company to expand its training services and reach more clients across the Channel Islands. Roz is an experienced trainer who started her career with JT where she spent eight years providing technology training to JT's business clients. As a lead trainer at ALX Training, Roz works with both corporate clients and provides skills training to unemployed islanders taking part in the Back to Work initiatives. Roz, who lives in St. Brelade with her husband and two sons, enjoys reading, exercising, geo-caching and films when she's not working or spending time with her family.

STATES OF JERSEY FIRE & RESCUE SERVICE ARE RECRUITING FOR PART-TIME FIREFIGHTERS - THINK YOU'VE GOT WHAT IT TAKES?

If you've ever felt the drive to learn and develop new skills, experience new things, work as a team and make a difference in our community whilst also having fun then you will have surely aspired to be a part of the States of Jersey's Fire & Rescue Service.

Interested in finding out more? They're currently recruiting for new part-time firefighters, men and women who have full time jobs outside of the Fire & Rescue Service but are ready to respond when their pager goes off to work alongside their colleagues in the wholetime service.

If you are able to respond to the Fire Service HQ in town within 15 minutes or to the Western Fire Station at Les Quennevais within 8 minutes day or night during the on-call period of 6pm to 9pm, are physically fit, between the ages of 18 and 50, have a minimum of a GCSE or equivalent level education, a full, clean driving license and good sight and colour perception in both eyes without glasses or contact lenses then you could fit the bill.

As well as receiving an extremely high level of training in a whole host of firefighting and rescue techniques and the knowledge and satisfaction that you are ready to make a difference in the community you'll receive an annual retaining fee of £250 per month as well as an hourly rate for callouts, weekly pay for training sessions (you'll be doing two hours of training along with your colleagues every week), a first aid certificate and a Large Goods Vehicle license to enable you to drive the fire appliances, should you not already possess one.

The training course for successful candidates takes place locally and is spread over a number of weeks and must be passed for you to progress in your role as a qualified part-time firefighter. Within your first year of service you will also undertake a 9 day breathing apparatus course as well as the training required to obtain an LGV licence as mentioned above.

Whilst most employers are more than happy to allow their staff to be in a position to respond with no notice from time to time, it is important to ensure that your employer would be willing to release you when necessary should your application be successful.

If you think you've got what it takes and would like to apply, visit www.workingforjersey.gov.je/ or alternatively call 440040 or email recruitment@gov.je for more information. The closing date for applications is 1st August.

PIERS DEGRUCHY

IS AN ASSOCIATE AT DELOITTE

AGE: 25

UNI ATTENDED: LANDER UNIVERSITY (IN SOUTH CAROLINA, USA)

COURSE: BSc BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION & ACCOUNTING

WHEN I WAS 8 I WANTED TO BE: THE NEXT PETER SCHMEICHEL

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX: GO FOR A RUN

FAVOURITE PLACE TO EAT: LA HACIENDA;

A MEXICAN RESTAURANT IN GREENWOOD, SC

FAVOURITE NOISE: THE FIZZZZZZ OF A GOLF BALL IN FLIGHT
AFTER STRIKING A PURE LONG IRON

What made you choose Deloitte?

As I took a gap year between my A levels and university (as well as having a 4 year course) it meant that many of my friends had finished university and moved on into the "real world" before I did. A couple of good friends had started at Deloitte and they encouraged me to apply for the Summer Vacation Scheme (SVS) at Deloitte to get a taste of accountancy and the firm. I did this and completed the SVS in the summer of 2010. It gave me a really good insight into the culture at the firm and the opportunities available to me as a graduate. The main things that appealed to me were the secondment opportunities within Deloitte and also the structured training program in regards to becoming a Chartered Accountant.

What professional training are you undertaking?

I am currently working my way through the ICAEW Chartered Accountancy qualification which broadly consists of 15 exams studied for over a period of three years.

What do you do on an average day?

Usually I like to wake up early and get a quick run in before heading into the office. When at work, the average day consists of conducting various audit testing on clients. Even though Jersey has an extensive finance industry, Deloitte have a variety of clients outside of finance (in addition to many finance based clients) which means the work we do is varied and interesting.

What's the next step?

I love to travel, so after qualifying I would like to take advantage of the secondment opportunities within Deloitte to live and work in other countries around the world.

What advice would you give yourself as a graduate considering the experience you have now?

Hard work pays off, especially in relation to revision. Make a study plan early on and stick to it. You will reap the dividends come exam time!

JOHN LE BRETON

IS AN ADMINISTRATOR AT SANNE GROUP

AGE: 25

UNI ATTENDED: BRISTOL

COURSE: LAW

WHEN I WAS 8 I WANTED TO BE: A PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALLER

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX: SPENDING TIME WITH FRIENDS

FAVOURITE PLACE TO EAT IN JERSEY: THE NAVIGATOR

FAVOURITE NOISE: THUNDER

What made you choose Sanne Group?

The decisive factor was the opportunity for career progression, both in terms of the professional qualifications on offer and the potential for progression within the company. During the interview process I also got a sense of a friendly and welcoming atmosphere, whilst being impressed by the company's ambition.

What professional training are you undertaking?

I have recently started the ACCA qualification programme. Coming from a legal background, it offers an opportunity to broaden my skill set, while obtaining an internationally recognised qualification. Support is offered at every level and a reassuring balance is struck between colleagues taking a genuine interest in how you are progressing without making you feel pressured.

What do you do on an average day?

The average day involves a range of tasks. Typically it includes bookkeeping, minute writing, processing payments and preparing accounts and reports for customers. Ad hoc tasks often arise when responding to customer requests and enquiries, which usually involves referring to trust deeds, company articles and liaising with external service providers. Being part of the corporate services business I have also been involved in company formations and customer specific projects.

What's the next step?

My focus in the short term is to concentrate on passing my exams. Longer term, I hope to progress within the company. Sanne has an international reach and offices overseas so the opportunity to travel with the company or work in other jurisdictions would be fantastic.

What advice would you give yourself as a graduate considering the experience you have now?

Although we are fortunate in Jersey with the job opportunities available, it isn't the easiest time to start a career given the current economic climate, so perseverance is essential. Determine what criteria are most important to you regarding your career, then be open-minded as to the opportunities that present themselves. Don't be disheartened if things don't immediately fall into place.

JULIE HARRIGAN

IS AT COLLAS CRILL

AGE: 26

UNI ATTENDED: NATIONAL UNIVERSITY OF IRELAND GALWAY

COURSE: LAW AND HISTORY AND LL.B

WHEN I WAS 8 I WANTED TO BE: A VET

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX: ENJOYING THE SUNSHINE ON A BEACH

FAVOURITE PLACE TO EAT IN JERSEY: CHEFFINS

FAVOURITE NOISE: THE SOUND OF WAVES CRASHING ON A BEACH

What made you choose Collas Crill?

I joined Collas Crill in November 2008 as a legal assistant in the Probate department. The Probate department has a wealth of experience and expertise, with our Probate manager having worked in the area for almost thirty years, and I am extremely lucky to have the benefit of working with such an experienced team.

What professional training are you undertaking?

Collas Crill has a high reputation for developing the skills and knowledge of its staff to a high standard, whether they are lawyers or support staff. The firm encourages staff to attend in house seminars and training sessions on particular areas of interest and we are encouraged to attend conferences outside of the firm which deal with our particular areas of work. I am starting my Jersey Advocates and Solicitors examinations in September and I intend to take the Jersey Solicitor title.

What do you do on an average day?

No day is the same in the Probate department as the work varies case by case. The one aspect of my work which I really enjoy is the fact that it is very client focused and I am dealing with individuals from all over the world everyday. I feel that working in a department such as Probate you have to be quite personable, as not only are you meeting with people to take instructions for their Wills, which can be a sensitive area for people, but you are also dealing with people at one of the saddest times of their lives when they have just lost a loved one.

What's the next step?

As mentioned above I am starting my local exams in September and whilst the thought of returning to studying after such a long break is somewhat daunting having been out of University for five years, I am still looking forward to it. I feel that the experience I have gained from working with Collas Crill, and especially the Probate department, over the past four years will greatly assist me with my exams.

What advice would you give yourself as a graduate considering the experience you have now?

On completion of your degree it is not always possible to find suitable employment. However, irrespective of what you might find yourself doing directly after University or what obstacles you might encounter along the way, never lose sight of your goal.

Employer info: Collas Crill

MICHAEL KINROSS

IS A TRUST OFFICER IN PRIVATE WEALTH MANAGEMENT AT BEDELL

AGE: 27

UNI ATTENDED: BOURNEMOUTH UNIVERSITY

COURSE: ENVIRONMENTAL AND COASTAL MANAGEMENT BSC

WHEN I WAS 8 I WANTED TO BE: ERIC CLAPTON

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX: SAILING

FAVOURITE NOISE: THE SEA

What is your formula to success?

In my opinion success is built on hard work and not letting any opportunities pass you by. I would base my success so far on embracing my work 100% with a positive attitude. Don't be embarrassed to ask your peers questions, however small they may be, we are all there to make the business succeed.

There is a perception that trust is 'boring'. Dispel the myth...

At the beginning of my career in trust there were tasks that were repetitive, such as payments and simple letter writing. However, you can't run before you can walk and these initial tasks assist you as you progress and develop. As you build your own portfolio, you start to understand why you are doing what you're doing and really begin to enjoy the responsibility that is placed upon you. No working day is the same and there is simply no time to be bored.

How has your career progressed?

I have been working in the trust industry for nearly 5 years. I began my career as an Assistant Trust Officer and was in this position for 3 years before being promoted to the role of Trust Officer. Over the past 5 years I have achieved the ICSA Certificate and I am currently working towards the ICSA Diploma. I have progressed from assisting a busy trust team to having my own portfolio of clients.

What do you enjoy about it?

I enjoy the fact that every day brings something different. The variety in my client base means that there is always something unexpected going on often involving tight time pressure situations, and I really enjoy the pressure! I am always learning new things and meeting and speaking to new people.

Why Bedell?

I wanted to work for an independent business that was Partner/Director led rather than working for a bank-owned trust company where you can sometimes lose client contact.

What personal qualities do you need to succeed in trust work?

The most important qualities to succeed in trust work are being organised and having an eye for detail. The job can change from one minute to the next, so it is vital to be able to stay on top of your work and be ahead of the game.

How do you see your career progressing?

I plan to complete my ICSA Diploma qualification by July 2013. At the same time I hope to expand my portfolio as I'm gaining valuable experience by working in the industry alongside experienced professionals. On completing the ICSA Diploma I am looking to continue onto the ICSA Professional Level (CSQS). I want to continue enjoying what I'm doing and to do the very best for my clients and Bedell.

What do you do on an average day?

On a daily basis I assist our clients with any requirements they have which can involve anything from speaking to property managers, to organising a valuation of a painting. Alongside this I assist in the preparation of business packs for board approval, prepare trustee or directors minutes, review trust and company accounts and attend to any correspondence.

Sum up life at Bedell

Professional yet relaxed and friendly.

What about life outside work?

Outside work I try to go sailing as much as possible both in and around the islands or competing around Europe on the F-18 catamaran circuit. I also enjoy skiing and always try to get at least one ski trip each season and if I'm lucky, two. Other than that I am a passionate F1 fan.

A WEEK IN THE LIFE OF...

SPENCER LAMB

SENIOR ASSOCIATE, AUDIT AND ASSURANCE AT PwC

LIVES IN: ST LAWRENCE

FAMILY LIFE: ENGAGED TO EMMA GREEN

LOVES: TRAVELLING, COOKING AND SPENDING TIME WITH FAMILY

HATES: CLEANING UP AFTER COOKING!

"With a demanding workload I often stay late during the week, but I try to keep weekends work free to spend some quality time with friends. A work / life balance is really important."

MONDAY – MUST MAKE SURE ...

I chase my Australian Visa.

IN MY DIARY.....

8.30am - Chase Australian visa

9.00am - Head down to the client offices with the team

10.00am - Meeting with the Financial controller to discuss arrangements for billing

5.00pm - Prepare for a meeting with the Partner

HOW IT WENT.....

I'm due to go on secondment with PwC Australia's Sydney office for 3 months in the summer and I am waiting on final clearance for my visa. Chasing this through was a bit of an organisational challenge due to the time differences as I needed to check with the HR department in Sydney to make sure they have everything they need to progress with the visa application.

I've just come back from a 4 week job in Edinburgh so it was an early start in the office this morning to get adjusted and organised before I start a new audit this week.

This year is my third year on this client therefore I get to take on additional responsibilities and coach a team. By 10am I leave PwC and head down to the client's offices, I introduce the team to the key contacts and also agree on a plan of attack for the week. Throughout the day I ensure that the manager is updated on the status of the audit and that the team have suitably challenging work for them to get their teeth stuck into.

It was great to re-establish the relationship with the financial controller, who was very helpful in the prior year audit. One of the things that I really enjoy about the job is that we have direct access to some of the key individuals in the businesses we work with and this proves to be a great way to gain an insight into the way these organisations work.

TUESDAY – MUST MAKE SURE I...

Catch up with the Partner I did last week's job for

IN MY DIARY.....

9.00am - Meet with the Partner to debrief on a prior job

11.00am Meet with Clients HR department

4.00pm Review my notes from this morning's meeting

7.45pm Bowling with Emma

HOW IT WENT

The meeting with the Partner went well, he is pleased with the progress of the work that we completed in Edinburgh last week. He has asked me to look at a technical issue we have identified, which is going to allow me to further develop my understanding and build on the experience that I have gained so far on this client. Whilst our work is primarily about ensuring the financial statements of the business we audit are accurate, we also have to ensure we have a good understanding of the business sectors that our clients are operating in and also the way their business works internally. Today's meeting with the client's HR department was so we could understand how their HR function works. This is important as it affects our ability to assess effectively how well they follow all sorts of processes, from payroll expenses to compliance requirements for staff training.

On Tuesday evenings Emma and I try and make sure we spend some time together, work can be time demanding and it can often mean working late so it's important we spend time together. This week its bowling, unfortunately she beats me (but I'm used to that by now!)

WEDNESDAY – MUST MAKE SURE.....

Speak to PwC UK's Edinburgh team about the IT report

IN MY DIARY.....

8.30am Breakfast briefing on the impact of regulatory changes on the PE industry

10.00am Speak to my contact in the UK firm's Edinburgh office

2.00pm - Provide comments on Financial Statements to client

3.00pm - Review the teams work from last week

5.30pm Finalise the client audit memo

HOW IT WENT?

This morning's briefing was about some changes to regulations that are likely to have an impact on the Private Equity industry in Jersey and the rest of Europe. A colleague from the PwC Sweden firm, who is on secondment in Jersey, provides us with the latest update on the matter. The firm is keen to ensure we are kept up to date on technical matters and aware of the changing regulations/technical issues that are relevant to our industry, so we can confidently discuss them with our clients.

I spoke to my contact in Edinburgh and they are finalising the IT report that we have asked them to produce for us, on a mutual client. One of the benefits of working for PwC is that we have network member firms all over the world, with experts in many fields, this gives me access to a fantastic amount of knowledge in a number of industries and sectors that I might not otherwise have access too.

The client was happy with the comments that we provided on the financial statements. They have purchased another investment property this year and because we've shown we know them and the industry they have turned to us for accounting advice. I really enjoy working together with Clients in order to achieve a successful outcome for both parties.

As an extra bonus I received clearance for my visa today, looks like I'll be heading down under!

THURSDAY – MUST MAKE SURE...

Prepare for the appraisal meeting with my coach

IN MY DIARY.....

9.30am Meeting with clients financial controller

2.00pm Appraisal meeting with an associate

5.30pm Book the flights!

HOW IT WENT?

The audit is progressing well and we are on track to meet the targets we set ourselves at the beginning of the week. My role in the team this year means that I spend quite a lot of time working with more junior members of the team, sharing my knowledge and supporting them with their queries. The firm has a good development programme so you are always being pushed forwards into new roles, which is great for everyone as it means the work is interesting and stretches you.

Another part of my coaching role is to provide feedback to those staff working for me. I always try to make sure that I give constructive feedback that really helps colleagues feel good about their achievements and be clear on what they need to focus on building next. Whilst it's nice to be told how great you are I find my development points and setting future challenges are the most useful part of the process, and help me know what to do to further develop my career.

I'd researched flight options to Australia and now that I have the visa I've gone ahead and booked them. I've also booked holiday at the end of the secondment so that Emma and I can travel around Australia, there has to be benefits to both of us with me being away for 3 months!

FRIDAY – MUST MAKE SURE...

Catch up with my coach

In my diary.....

9.00am Coffee with my coach

10.00am Provide the audit memo to the Partner

1.00pm Meet Emma for Lunch

4.00pm Team meeting with the audit Manager

5.30pm After work beers

HOW IT WENT?

The meeting with my coach went well, we discussed the jobs that I have been on recently, what I've learnt and how I can use this knowledge on to my future jobs. We also discuss how plans for the Sydney secondment are going and he gives me his advice on settling in over there, as he has joined the firm from South Africa and so has been through the settling in phase himself. I'm really looking forward to the secondment now; it's going to be a great opportunity to experience working in a large city, with different teams, at the same time as building on the skills and knowledge that I have gained working in Jersey.

We finished the week with an update meeting with the Manager for our audit, to discuss how we've got on during the week, share what we have learnt skills wise and to let the manager know the issues that we have identified so far during the audit. We then come up with a plan for next week to make sure that we're organised and ready to work with the client to complete the project on time. I try to always leave at 5.30 on Friday nights and go for a beer with friends to mark the end of another busy week, before heading home for dinner with Emma.

MY WEEKEND.....

SATURDAY

11am - Cycle into town for travel brochures and something fresh from the market

2pm - Meet up with friends

5pm – late Cook something nice for dinner

SUNDAY

9.00am - Catch up on some sleep!

12pm - Head to the north coast for a walk

4pm Holiday planning and weekly phone call to mum!

8pm - Check emails/diary for the next week

HOW DID IT GO?

After a busy week, some R&R is much needed. Emma and I love to travel and now that we have the go ahead for Sydney, we can start to plan the trip we intend to take at the end of the secondment. It's not until you start writing a list of everything you want to see/do and look at driving distances that you realise what a big country it is. I think that we will have to invest in some internal flights! I really enjoy cooking so I spend some time preparing us dinner, before a DVD and bed.

Sunday is more of a lazy day, catching up on some sleep before we head up to the north coast for a relaxed Sunday afternoon walk stopping off along the way at a pub or two for some refreshments. Though I work late weekday nights I do try to keep weekends free from work. I like to have a quick run through what I need to get done the next week though to get ahead of the game, so I spend an hour or so running through emails etc on a Sunday night.

CHRIS DERRIEN

IS AN IT SYSTEM ADMINISTRATOR AT JT

AGE: 24

UNI ATTENDED: UNIVERSITY OF DERBY

COURSE: BSc COMPUTER NETWORKS

WHEN I WAS 8 I WANTED TO BE: A FIGHTER PILOT

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX: SOCIALISING WITH FRIENDS, WATCHING SPORT AND GOING TO THE CINEMA

FAVOURITE PLACE TO EAT IN JERSEY: THE WATERSPLASH

FAVOURITE NOISE: CRASHING WAVES

What made you choose JT?

JT are the leading telecoms operator in Jersey comprising of several promising areas which I am very interested in working in.

As a telecoms operator their core business is very tightly linked to IT and as a result offered a great opportunity to get further involved in the core networking that makes up the web and wide area networking infrastructure.

Cloud computing was the focal point of my dissertation while at University; this entire area is reliant on telecoms and as a result furthered my interest to work at JT.

The graduate scheme which JT were offering seemed perfect for me and lead to a globally recognised qualification and invaluable experience.

What professional training are you undertaking?

Since starting at JT I have completed the Microsoft Certified IT Professional (MCITP) Server Administrator and Enterprise Administrator qualifications. These courses have given me the knowledge required to design, implement and maintain small to large scale Microsoft Windows Networks. I have also completed courses on Windows PowerShell, Linux and Citrix which have allowed me to further my education and understanding in IT.

What do you do on an average day?

In IT Systems we are responsible for the design, implementation and upkeep of JT's IT environment; our responsibilities include both the hardware and operating platform which run many different technologies. As a team we are committed to several projects which take up the majority of our time however we are also involved in the troubleshooting of issues as they arise. Recently I have been heavily involved in the implementation of JT's Citrix environment to provide a remote access solution to JT employees. Alongside the Citrix implementation I have also spent much of my time on the installation of a new internal hosting environment.

What's the next step?

I am currently working towards the next phase of our Citrix implementation which will extend our platform to allow for the introduction of a bring-your-own device policy. Further to this I would also like to become certified in the Citrix products which we currently use.

While at University I began work towards my Cisco CCNA. Unfortunately I was unable to complete this qualification - I have always had a keen interest in Computer Networking and passing this qualification is something I really want to complete in the future.

What advice would you give yourself as a graduate considering the experience you have now?

I would remind myself to really go over the areas I had covered while at Uni and to know them in depth before going into an interview. It's also important, I think, to pursue a company that has an in-depth and clear post-graduate programme that will guide you to becoming a professional in your chosen career.

CALUM BRENNAN

IS A CONSULTANT AT JCS

AGE: CALUM BRENNAN

AGE 21

EMPLOYER / POSITION CONSULTANT

UNI ATTENDED CARDIFF UNIVERSITY

COURSE UNDERTAKEN EUROPEAN POLITICS & INT'L RELATIONS

WHAT DID YOU WANT TO BE WHERE YOU WERE 8 FOOTBALLER

FAVOURITE WAY TO RELAX SPENDING TIME WITH MY GIRLFRIEND

FAVOURITE PLACE TO EAT IN JERSEY MANO'S, WEST CENTRE

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE NOISE ANYTHING, AS LONG AS IT'S NOT BEFORE ABOUT 10 O'CLOCK

What made you choose the company you work for?

There were several reasons, but I primarily wanted the challenge of a broad range of opportunities rather than specialising in a single sector of the finance industry. After I came back from university I found the range of services offered by JCS gave me a great variety of experience. Also, as it was only started last year, the company is still small and growing, so getting the close contact with experienced directors provides invaluable professional development and mentorship opportunities, as well as the opportunity for real responsibility.

What sort of professional training do you take?

A lot of the training I have received has been delivered and tailored personally by the JCS directors. This includes subjects from anti-money laundering and banking operations through to technical work such as enhanced excel and software skills. I'm also currently looking to study for a Diploma in Business Analysis. Being a consultant means being able to fit into our clients' culture to add value to their projects without distracting from routine business operations. The breadth of skills and opportunities we've been exposed to at JCS helps us to fit in while remaining positive about our unique contributions.

What do you do on an average day?

It depends purely on where I am working. If I am on assignment with a client, I will be working within my team to do whatever is required - for example analysing business processes, putting together management portfolios or preparing material for the strategic leadership team. If I am back at the JCS base, it could involve anything from carrying out due diligence work on a prospective client to organising JCS's 35 day tour of Europe: 18 cities and 203 meetings takes a fair amount of organising!

What is your next step?

Who knows? In this job flexibility is vital as the next client could be anywhere. I work in Jersey, but the next contract could be London, Geneva or Africa! The possibility of working abroad is something that most graduates find appealing. Within the year I could be looking at promotion to Associate and be given the opportunity to try to win new clients and share personally in the success that would come from that - which is pretty exciting given that I only graduated last summer!

What advice would you give to yourself as a 2011/12 graduate considering the experience you have now?

Make the most out of the network of people you know. Having someone you know being able to give you a good reference might be the difference between getting a job offer and not getting one. This is even more relevant in a place like Jersey, and with such strong local connections within the island it would be foolish not to use your network!

TARPSURFING

TARP SURFING

01/ Tarp [tahr-paw-lin] - large sheet of strong, flexible, water-resistant material, often cloth such as polyester coated with urethane.

02/ Surfing [('s3#fiñ)] - riding on the crest and face of a wave, which is carrying the surfer towards the shore.

FIRST DOCUMENTED IN JULY 2010 BY ROBERT BRADY IN CALIFORNIA, TARP SURFING IS A PURSUIT THAT CULTURALLY UNIFORMS SEVERAL LOVES OF THE CASUAL INTERNET VIEWER; SLOW MOTION FOOTAGE OF SKATEBOARDS, RELAXED SUMMER VIBE, AND A DIY INGENUITY FOR CREATING FUN.

This activity has been picked up and tried out by thousands of landlocked surfers (or those without swell) since becoming a viral hit online. So How do you tarp surf?

When there's little wind, lay out the tarp, weight down one side, grab one of the other corners and run towards and across the weighed down side. This makes the tarp billow up like a standing wave and gives something the tarp-surfer something to 'ride' through. The actual timing of when to start to running and when to start skating through is something that comes after a few tries and leads to a number of hilarious bails (especially if the tarp happens to be wet). Add a skateboard or indeed and device with wheels and Hey Presto, your a Tarp Surfer!

The 'surfing' part really comes alive once you start filming it. You have to picture the tarp-wave as if it was an actual wave and how it would be film as if in the water - this leads to footage that temporarily fools the eye into thinking the tarp is actually moving with force.

Our friends at The Observatory had been wanting to try out this activity for a while, but had never really had an excuse to do so, until The Collections Group asked them to look out for something special to announce the opening of their new Quiksilver store in Queen Street. This married with the fact that there had been absolutely no waves for 8 weeks made for a no-brainer for the video making crew. The tarp surfing event at the drop of a hat and we at Gallery even got involved in creating some waves.

Within 24 hours the video was online a makingwaves. After putting together a quick edit of just the tarp surfing, we quickly realised that this had the potential to do incredibly well online by itself. A day after it being online it was picked up as a Vimeo Staff pick (followed by 73,200 subscribers) it was quickly featured on many other websites / feeds and blogs leading to the amazing stats and to the global reach of countries that have viewed it. See the stats opposite.

So many businesses develop online promotions and seek a 'viral' campaign success. The tarp surfing project shows that a bit of creativity is what you need to truly elevate a campaign online,

Is the monotony of the 9 to 5 is getting you down? Feel like you need to escape but know that if you're not back at your desk tomorrow morning your manager will be hunting you down with the ferocity of a pack of wild dogs? Gazing out to sea from your favourite beach after work not quite cutting it?

Jersey Seafaris is a brand new business run by local guy Richard Stevens, an experienced boatman with a love of the coastline and waters around our island who, in conjunction with local expert and marine biologist Gareth Jeffreys have formed the perfect team to take people away exploring anything and everything from sea and bird life to even the smallest of our Channel Islands. Or to France for lunch or dinner, if that's more your kind of thing.

Whether a short blast around the coastlands, a half an hour tour to Corbiere with complimentary drinks, a two or three hour trip to the Minquiers to the south or Ecrehou to the north east, an evening trip to the French island of Chausey or the French mainland for dinner or a whole day out exploring, they're able to cater for it all so don't be scared to ask. Why spend time queueing and checking in for the ferry when you could be sitting in a French restaurant enjoying your meal and a glass or two of wine less than an hour from when you finish work? Their boat seats up to 12, so there's plenty of room for a friend or eleven to tag along.

Setting off from either the Albert Pier, St Catherines or St Brelade's Bay depending on tides and intended destinations, we travelled from the Albert Pier out to the islets of the Minquiers - a mere 25 minute ride south of Jersey when you're in a 400hp RIB! If you're after an exhilarating, edging toward white knuckle ride I'm sure Richard and Gareth would be willing to indulge, but on the other hand if a more sedate ride works better for you that can be catered for too. They're nice like that.

It almost goes without saying that safety is of the utmost importance and not only is Richard's seamanship second to none but all passengers are provided with compulsory lifejackets and offered nice warm, waterproof sailing jackets if they don't have their own so that any potential cold wind or water splashes don't dampen your spirits. That's another part of the joy of a trip with these guys - you don't even have to be particularly prepared for the potential rigours sea, they've got that covered for you.

A pleasantly warm day, we were surprised to see a Royal Navy vessel steaming past operating just out of St Helier before Jersey had passed over the horizon in the distance which is something you wouldn't usually notice let alone have the opportunity to see so closely. Within moments we were slowing to arrive at our first stop of the morning, a sandbank that forms part of the Minquiers only accessible when the tide is low enough. Twenty minutes of exploration upon this welcome to

fast disappearing spit of sand later we were boarding the boat once again to make the move onto more solid ground over on the main island that forms the southern most point of the British Isles, and believe it or not, part of Grouville! On the short journey to land alongside the pier we spotted a pair of grey seals playing before making our way to have a look at the small houses and outbuildings and even a helipad that seemed quite popular with the Greater Black Backed Gulls protecting their nests. Gareth was very clear to indicate and make sure that nobody interfered with any of their habitat and also that nobody was hurt as a result. These gulls are huge, but soon quietened down when they realised we meant no harm.

Returning home a couple of hours after our departure we passed by the seals from before and even spotted a pair of dolphins, a frequent (although not guaranteed) sight out there. The sandbank that we had once walked on was now but a barely visible submerged patch of contrasting water and closer to St Helier Richard even gave us a quick demonstration of the boat's handling capabilities which was an exciting end to the morning. We were back in time for lunch, but couldn't help thinking that taking a picnic to enjoy whilst we were out there seemed like a missed opportunity so learn from our mistakes and pack something to enjoy!

ST LAWRENCE CHARITY HORSE SHOW

JUMPING FOR JOY - RECORD JUMP PRIZE MONEY FOR JERSEY!

This year's St Lawrence Charity Horse Show will once again be held at Tamarind Showground, St Peter, over the weekend of 3rd to 5th August. Generous sponsorship from many local businesses and individuals - including our Principal Sponsor, local investment management firm Spearpoint Limited - has allowed the organisers to put up a Channel Island record jumping prize of £500 for the Diamond Jubilee Senior Masters.

That jumping class will be held on the second day of the Show, Saturday 4 August. The first round will be a qualifier with the top 8 competitors going through to the next round. Each round is then drawn and the first competitor back in the ring must elect to raise a fence by one hole. With a starting height of 1.10m-1.15m and the potential to go much higher, this class will attract the more experienced competitors and promises to create considerable excitement, with riders drawing on their own strengths and letting their competitors fend for themselves!

Younger riders been forgotten either! The Snyman Family have kindly sponsored the Diamond Jubilee Open Pony Jumping, which will take place on the first day of the Show, Friday 3 August. This will be a two-round competition with fences set at a starting height of approximately 1.0m. With a top prize of £100, plus £75 for 2nd, £50 for 3rd, £25 for 4th and £12 for 5th place, this class will also attract a large entry and be exciting to watch as the young riders show off their skills in the jump-off by taking the tightest turns to give them the best time and possible victory.

In the Showing Section of the Show, a prize of £100 will be presented to the winner of the Diamond Jubilee Ridden Supreme Championship. Other popular classes at the Show will be the Ladies' and Gents' Championships with a top prize of £75 for each class, and the Senior Puissance with a top prize of £50.

The 3-day Show on August 3, 4 and 5 consists of over 70 classes and is run by a loyal band of volunteers who spend many months organising the showing and jumping events as well as the inter-island-UK team jumping competitions. The organisers are most grateful to the many individuals and organizations who sponsor classes. The funds raised from the Show in excess of current requirements, are distributed to purely LOCAL Jersey charities, in time for Christmas and New Year. For the year 2011, donations were made to 17 local charities.

Of the many Jersey Parishes which ran horse shows in the past, St Lawrence Charity Horse Show is now the only Parish Horse Show to have survived. Its 50th Anniversary was celebrated in 2005. Formed in 1955 by Members of the Municipality of St Lawrence and some equine enthusiasts of the Parish, the first meeting of interested parties was held on the forecourt of Three Oaks Garage in St Lawrence, and as a result the St Lawrence Horse Show and Gymkhana Club was born.

The first show was held in July 1956 at Biles Field, First Tower (now Clos St. Andre). Two years later the show moved to St Andrews Park where for many years the Show and evening fête was a very popular event drawing large crowds. From the start the intention was to make donations to charity out of funds raised; the first donation being made to a cancer charity.

After some years with an ever-increasing number of entries, a larger showground was needed to enable the Show to have space to accommodate two arenas, working-in areas, marquees as well as parking for the cars and horseboxes, so St Lawrence Horse Show has moved to various locations over the years. Since 1986, by kind permission of Mr and Mrs Andrew Tait, the St Lawrence Charity Horse Show (as it is now known) has been held at Tamarind, St Peter, which offers a large natural showground in a country setting. The 3-day Show consists of showing and show jumping classes for both adults and juniors, as well as inter-island and UK team jumping. Since 2011 an annual Heights Jumping Competition has also been held.

The organisers aim to provide good competition for the horse and pony world which will be enjoyed not only by riders and enthusiasts, but also a show which local people and holidaymakers alike will enjoy as spectators. As usual, there will be a variety of stands and kiosks, as well as canteen and refreshment tents. Entry to the showground at Tamarind, St Peter on 3-5 August is FREE to all spectators.

penniless pile-up!

CHEAP, TOPLESS AND LIVELY

Sounds like someone you'd find on a Balearic island, don't you think? I'm not talking about that though, this is an article about convertible cars.

Originally considering the Peugeot 205 CTi, the definitive Gallic answer to roof-down hot hatching, I was shocked at just how expensive they are these days, probably because most of their constituent parts will have fallen off and required replacing by now. Around seven grand for a decent example, just in case you were curious.

The truly bargain basement yet still credible alternative? A BMW Z3 Roadster, of course! £1,750 is all it would take to pick up an example of the entry level 1.9i Z3, which I'd say is a decent wedge of Bavarian bang for your buck. Okay, so a 2.8 litre one is going to set you back around another grand but that's still relatively small change for a reliable, rear-steer roadster.

As much as it pains me to admit it, Mazda's MX-5 is probably the better car handling and performance wise, but when it comes to securing the maximum amount of motoring kudos for the minimum amount of pennies you can't go too far wrong with anything that proudly wears a blue and white propeller on its bonnet.

A SURE-FIRE STUTTGART STEAL

As long as you can steer yourself away from the stigma of Porsche's Boxster being a steed for stylists you can have a slice of German pie for mere pennies.

The earlier 2.5 litre Boxsters have started going for under three grand in the UK (yes, the big island where people travel enough miles to weed out the niggles and fix everything that is likely to break then don't ask the original purchase price for their second hand motor) but a less problem prone 2.7 litre can be had for around four thousand pounds these days.

The chassis on these puppies from Porsche are absolutely brilliant and at but a tenth of the original sale price you can't go too wrong with a Boxster if you're looking for convertible fun with a little class.

The alternatives? Don't get me wrong, I'm a big fan of Audis with their stunning contemporary looks but they just tend to be a bit woolly and soulless sometimes. Why have a TT with its front wheel drive configuration and a puny 1.8 litre motor (a very solid, turbocharged 20 valve motor no less, but still) when you can have a mighty 2.7 litre flat six howling behind your head putting power down through the back axle?

GRANDEUR FOR UNDER 20 GRAND?

A fellow petrolhead of mine was almost driven to backhanding me across my boat race at Le Mans when I told him the going rate for a DB7 last month.

That somebody should have to consider violence for the sheer cheek of saying that an early supercharged six DB7 Volante can be secured for under £20,000 has got to mean something, and that something is that anything bearing the Aston Martin bewinged badging oozes such class, sophistication and exclusivity that it must cost a small fortune to own. Except when it's based on a Jag and made out of steel, it seems, so keep that under your flat cap.

Still, I'd be tempted at that kind of money and have caught myself looking at them many a time, I just haven't quite reached the age where I'm dependent upon a pipe with which to inhale the finest shag through and slippers with which to shuffle to my trusty Stannah in yet.

For only a few thousand of your English pounds more, the six litre V12 Vantage and Volante DB7s are within reach, and only an utter peasant would be caught wafting around in the supercharged 3.2 litre six over the mighty V12, daaaahling.

SAY 'HI' TO THE NEW HYUNDAI i20

Jersey Hyundai pride themselves on delivering quality cars and quality service to all our customers. This commitment to providing the best service and customer experience runs throughout Hyundai and the new i20 is proof that quality and new thinking are an integral part of everything they do.

Every aspect of the new i20 combines confident and contemporary design with greater purpose and logic. A focus on aerodynamics, brighter visibility, improved safety and stability has resulted in a perfect match of form and function. Classic and Active 1.2 petrol models are available in 3 or 5 door versions to cater for your needs as an individual, couple or family.

The new i20 is also one car that possesses many senses. Smart technology is one of its hallmarks and everywhere you look you'll discover intelligent features. From emissions-lowering technology to state-of-the-art parking assistance and sensors that react to light and rain. Not to mention electric front windows, USB, I-Pod and aux connections and one touch indicators as standard.

What's more, Active and Style models also benefit from Bluetooth® connectivity with voice recognition keeping you in touch with family and friends, while steering wheel audio controls give you the freedom to choose your music without being distracted.

You'll find that the new i20 is just as forward thinking under the bonnet. Across the range, every engine in the i20 range has been updated compared to its predecessor, to provide better efficiency and lower CO₂ emissions. Plus we've introduced the i20 Blue 1.1 CRDi, which at only 84g/km, produces the lowest CO₂ emissions of any conventional diesel combustion car in the UK. The Blue model also benefits from a staggering combined 88mpg all thanks to Blue Drive technologies like Intelligent Stop and Go, where the clutch cuts out the engine at stops then re-starts when pressed again.

With brains comes style. The new i20's interior has evolved the simple elegance of the previous model by introducing a gloss black fascia - lending definition and clarity to the dashboard. Like all of our passenger cars, subtle blue lighting adds to the overall relaxing ambience in the new i20 but also helps limit eye strain on longer journeys. The centre console places all safety, air conditioning (not available on i20 Blue) and audio controls in a highly intuitive layout.

With prices starting from £9455, when you buy the new i20 you're not just buying a stylish and efficient car. You're also buying peace of mind, because every passenger car in the Hyundai range also comes with our industry leading 5 Year Triple Care package, which includes our Five Year Unlimited Mileage Warranty, Five Year Roadside Assistance and Five Years of Vehicle Health Checks. So why buy an ex-fleet car when you can all this?

Another year, another session of Eurosport highlights to watch so that I'm capable of holding even the briefest hint of a conversation when asked 'So, how was Le Mans?' upon returning, a hung-over, bruised and broken shell of my former self.

Amusingly, I even managed to meet a group from the UK this year who departed with the sole intention of ensuring that one of their complement remained so incredibly intoxicated that he would miss the entire race. Four hours in when we met, they were certainly in pole position, the stickers as part of the Le Mans livery on their Ferraris and Lamborghinis bearing an illustration of a noble knight slaying onions and cheese whilst a bikini clad blonde bearing a bottle of Kronenbourg for a head waved a chequered flag above the words 'Race..? What Race?'. That's the spirit!odka, to be precise.

Is that not as pointless as those who go to Glastonbury to get messed up on a cocktail of allsorts only to miss all of the bands? Probably, but there seems to be a black cloud casting its shadow over the once vibrant spirit of the 24 heures du Mans at La Sarthe in any case.

Audi's seeming ownership of the event, from their incredible press area to what feels like 90% of the overhead track advertising and sponsorship of the 'Audi Hourly Update' on Le Mans FM as well as the phenomenal amount of pre-race PR forcing its way into our eyes and ears coupled with their absolute dominance of the event has started to get old. Even the safety cars are Audis. An exclusively Audi-based podium and all of their R18s, both e-tron and 'ultra', finishing in the top 5. Yawn. Toyota's entry (the LMP1 underdog no less, would you believe) taken out by a Ferrari (a regular occurrence now it seems after Ferrari drivers almost thwarted Audi's clean sheet of victories last year), it was all left to Rebellion Racing's Toyota-engined Lola to fight for fourth place. Of course, I knew little of this at the time, sliding into a drunken coma ashamedly soon after midnight having heard that Oak Racing's Morgan-Judd in the LMP2 class, my chosen team to support this year, were forced to drop out having lead the class and reached 7th overall. Game over, for both them and me it seemed.

Audi just seem to make winning look too easy, so easy in fact that the black cloud of apathy I mentioned has formed, but if you step back from the Ingolstadt manufacturer's advertising and merchandising that blinds you everywhere you go at La Sarthe it's not too hard to summon up sunny weather. The technology that they've either used or developed; full-carbon gearboxes, the e-tron 'flybrid' KERS system, full LED headlamps, a single piece monocoque chassis and high-performance diesel engines will almost certainly end up in their road cars - look at the SQ5, for example, the first S-badged Audi sporting a diesel engine and one that can deliver 30mpg whilst also packing a gargantuan 650Nm of torque. In my eyes, using such a prestigious and highly revered motorsport event as a testbed for emerging automotive technology is nothing short of heroic. As Roman Dumas emerged from his crash-stricken R18 to rip off body panels and limp back to the pitlane (rules state that if a driver can singlehandedly return their car to their garage to be fixed they don't have to retire) it seemed all too easy to overlook his passion, the spirit of Le Mans, and not to care simply because it was an Audi.

It's almost a shame they're so typically efficient and German, just so damned good at what they do that they just make it look woefully easy.

POWERTREKK FUEL CHARGER

JUST ADD WATER?

The concept behind this very real product is still blowing my mind in a kind of future-arriving-early kind of way, but what this pocket-sized powerstation does is understandably 'out there'.

Pour a tabespoon of water into it, let it breathe, and it supplys instant power to any device capable of being charged via USB. That's right, just add water.

Using Swedish-devolped fuel cell technology, the clever hydrogen-oriented science packed into each 'fuel cell' reacts with the water to provide a current, so you won't have to rely on solar powered chargers which, let's face it, even at this time of the year aren't going to be capable of operating at their best.

CLEVER TEMPERATURE CONTROL FOR YOUR OWN NEST

NEST IS A LEARNING THERMOSTAT

According to the manufacturer, Nest helps you understand how your house uses energy so that you can save more, which is a welcome proposition in almost every home, I'm sure. It only takes a week to begin the thermostat's training, after which it will alter the temperature to suit how you use your environment and even knows when you're away so that it can adjust the heating or cooling appropriately. You'll get a full lowdown of how much energy you've used or saved each week and there's even the obligatory app for iPhone or Android so that you can monitor or adjust your home energy consumption on the move.

FEELING THE GRIND?

GRINDING BEANS AT HOME HAS NEVER LOOKED SO GOOD

Simplicity is key with Bodum's Bistro electric coffee grinder, which allows you to adjust just how finely or coarsely ground your roast of choice is with the twist of the hand. The grounds are then stored in a container made of borosilicate which, unlike plastic, is static free and more efficient at catching the coffee.

Thanks to their trademark silicon band the glass also has slip-proof qualities so no matter how wet your hands are or how butterfingered you tend to be, breakages are as good as out of the question.

NIKE+ FUEL BAND

TRAIN HARDER, BETTER, FASTER & STRONGER

Looking suspiciously like something that Guy-Manuel or Thomas from Daft Punk would wear down to the gym when they're feeling a bit health conscious, there's no denying it looks pretty tech-tastic as well as helping you track your exercise. Bonus.

It's a watch as well as a 'fuel point' counter, so the functionality isn't limited to counting your steps. Whenever you're moving, it's rating the amount of fuel points you're earning and tracking it online to make keeping fit fun, and if you're that way inclined, competitive too. Not earned enough fuel points today? It's time to take the stairs instead of the lift after that lavish lunch. Or cigarette break. Not that you smoke, right? Calorie counting has never been so easy.

It's not just aimed at people who want to exercise more, but is also handy for those already running the morning marathon to work with a hometime duathlon every day too. Just don't take it swimming as it's only water resistant and not rated as entirely waterproof.

AVAILABLE FROM NIKE STORES IN THE UK AND ONLINE RETAILERS FROM £160 - £180 DEPENDING ON SIZE REQUIRED

LYTRO LIGHTFIELD CAMERA

CHANGE YOUR FOCUS

Everybody with a DSLR is a photographer these days, apparently, but the variation in results between different so-called photographers can differ so wildly that they might as well be lightyears apart. Making your photos stand out from the crowd can be tough for the enthusiastic amateur, and with the easy to use post-processing capabilities offered by Instagram, Camera+ and the like all on your iPhone (other mobile telephones are available, incidentally) it may have never been easier.

Now though, there's the Lytro Lightfield camera too. Compact and with the appearance of a tiny, cubic kaleidoscope, it has an extremely clever trick up its, er, tube.

Capturing the entire light field that enters the lens as opposed to just a single plane, the images produced allow you alter the focus after having taken the shot using clever software on your Mac. Sorry Windows users, they're still working on software for you guys.

With no auto-focus, no shutter lag and no complicated modes to play with and no flash (it's got an f2 aperture so is able to collect a phenomenal amount of light) the only thing you'll need to adjust is the 8x optical zoom and the direction you're pointing it in. This means capturing the moment you're looking for instantly and with no fuss or need to fiddle about. The rear screen is an interactive touch screen as you'd expect from technology these days and there's just one button on the entire device, cleverly positioned right where the camera's centre of gravity lies to give a perfectly balanced feel in your hand.

AVAILABLE IN 8GB & 16GB CAPACITIES

ICE COLD DRINKS ARE A BLAST

LG LFX31935

With the ability to cool a can of beer in five minutes or a bottle of wine in eight, the blast chiller drawer in LG's new smart fridge is sure to go down a treat this summer. The compartment is fairly compact but if nothing else it'll at least eliminate having to clean that sticky, crystallised mess that results from leaving a can of fizzy pop in the freezer for too long.

IT'S BOXY, BUT GOOD

MEET THE SOMEWHAT ODD-LOOKING BOXX BIKE

It looks a bit like the illegitimate child of an old PowerMac and a white MacBook, but the Boxx is actually an electric bicycle. No pedals, just battery power and a mere metre long it boasts features such as a heated seat for those wintertime journeys as well as twin headlamps up front.

Also boasting that their creation is 'o MPG economical' (which at first sounds absolutely terrible for the environment, suggesting it couldn't even travel one mile on a gallon of fuel until you realise that it technically couldn't in any case as there's no fuel involved) they're available in a host of different colours from stealthy black, grey and white to the vibrant pinks, reds, yellows and greens and take just an hour's charging to transport you 80 miles if you go for the 'upgrade' specification. Power travels to both the front and rear wheels for extra traction and charging comes courtesy of a standard power outlet, although I'm guessing this means 110v as the Boxx is currently only available in the US.

You'll need a moped license to ride one on the street, mind, and whilst the Boxx is capable of travelling at a governed 35mph maximum, although I'm sure that with a little hacking this limiter could be raised slightly.

At $3995 the Boxx isn't cheap, but it's definitely quirky as far as alternative transport solutions go.

(WHILST STOCKS LAST!)

This entry level smartphone is light and feels great in your hands yet is still incredibly powerful in your pocket. Sleek and streamlined, the Galaxy Pocket's 2.8" screen and 832MHz processor have got what it takes to keep you connected via both telephone, SMS and your favourite social networking applications.

With the option to expand the Pocket's storage using 32GB memory cards there's plenty of space for all of your photos, music and apps.

Speaking of apps, there are over 300,000 available for download from the Google Play store for Android phones which will be enough to keep you busy browsing for a while!

APPLES, ANDROIDS, WINDOWS AND BLACKBERRIES SURE HELPS CHOOSE THE RIGHT OS FOR YOU

92% of mobile phones sold in the Sure Store in King St are smartphones, which means it won't be too long till smartphones are the only phones in town. It also means that choosing the right smartphone is becoming increasingly difficult.

At Sure, we thought we'd help by giving you a quick look at the main operating systems used in smartphones today because when you're choosing a smartphone, perhaps the best place to start is with the operating system.

There are four main systems: Android, iOS (Apple), BlackBerry and Windows Phone. All are powerful systems capable of supporting a huge range of apps as well as the built in features such as the camera, MP3 player and streaming video.

For many people, it is a case of choosing the same operating system as they had on their last phone but this doesn't help new users. However, that doesn't mean the choices you made with your previous handset are redundant. If for example, you've been using a BlackBerry for work, it will be worth your while looking at the new BlackBerry Bold 9900. It has the same look and feel as previous versions of the Bold so you'll feel right at home but this one is smarter and comes with a touchscreen to aid browsing and navigation.

It goes without saying that Apple fans will choose the iPhone 4S but if you've only dabbled with the Apple ecosystem, for instance by owning an iPod or Apple Mac desktop PC, then the iPhone could well be the phone for you. It integrates seamlessly with your previous Apple hardware iCloud means that you can keep all of your photos and downloads in one secure, cloud-based location, thereby enabling your other pieces of Apple kit to synch and access them easily.

If you're willing to break from the past, then trying one of the many smartphones built around the bestselling Android operating system may be the best route for you. Take for instance, the HTC One X or the Sony Xperia S. Both are elegant phones with large, high resolution screens, excellent usability and all the features you could want from a phone. The Android operating system gives you access to the Google Play app store where you'll find thousands of apps for all occasions.

The system's popularity means that it now outsells Apple's iOS and is the most popular smartphone operating system. Nokia have chosen to use the Windows Phone operating system on their range of smartphones and the beautiful Nokia Lumia 900 shows the system off to best effect. Praised for its ease of use and navigation, Windows Phone has suffered from being late to the smartphone party but that doesn't stop it being a great system to use and ideal for smartphone newcomers.

The best thing about all of the smartphones mentioned here is that they are all available for free from the Sure Store when you subscribe to a £36 per month Smart Plan. Call in at the store or visit surecw.com if you want more information about these or other smartphones.

INTRODUCING:

TRE

Introducing, a girl group with a difference... If you've yet to hear the delightful sounds of Tre, do look out for them. These young ladies have certainly been making a name for themselves in Jersey, with their unique and mature style and approach to music... We caught up with Tre to find out more about this classy trio.

Who are Tre?

Tre are a female singing trio who are classically trained and specialise in singing close harmonies. We started off purely singing classical songs but have since branched out into singing jazz, folk and contemporary pop music. We used to sing everything A cappella or to a piano accompaniment but now often self accompany or sing to backing tracks if the occasion calls for it. All three of us play piano and other instruments. We hope to use our instruments a lot more often in our performances in the future and also started writing our own material but are only at the early stages of this, as we are just finishing school exams.

How did you all come together?

We first met singing in the Musical Originals choir quite a few years ago, decided to enter the Eisteddfod two years ago as a trio (we won the small groups trophy for the last two years) and were then booked to perform for the W.I. annual lunch by the chairwoman who saw us at the Eisteddfod. More bookings followed and we haven't stopped since.

How would you define your musical style?

Our musical style varies, depending on our audience. We would call ourselves a classical singing trio combined with a dash of pop, a large glug of folk, topping of jazz and just a hint of rock. Bit of a cocktail really.

Who or what inspires you girls musically?

Grace: - I'm a massive fan of Regina Spektor who is a Russian born, but brought up in New York, a singer and musician - but am also inspired by folk musicians such as The Punch Brothers and Ingrid Michaelson and classical composers such as Debussy and Handel.

Liberty:- I love any type of music but my favourite artists are Beyonce, Charlie Simpson and Ben Howard.

Chloe:- I'm inspired by Art Garfunkel or Etta James, who are both so different but equally amazing.

What are your thoughts on the local music scene?

The local music scene is fab for such a small island. There are so many opportunities for gigs and so many talented musicians for us to take inspiration from. The number of classical teachers for all instruments, including our singing teacher Imogen Nicholls, gives us and other musicians a fantastic introduction to being as best as we can. And then there are people like Aaron Labey and Kate Taylor from the Teenage Cancer Trust who have given us and many others so many great experiences and the Warrens from Jersey Live who also provide opportunities for local bands and singers and bring over lots of bands for us to hear. And of course La Motte Street who help and encourage so many teenage bands and groups.

Who is your favourite local artist?

Grace:- Frankie Davies who used to go to my school, Beaulieu and who writes all her own material and Kevin Pallot.

Liberty:- I've recently heard Jordan Burrows playing and thought he was fantastic but I do love Nerina Pallot.

Chloe:- Definitely Nerina Pallot. We sang with her as part of Musical Originals for the Queen's Jubilee concert recently and all thought she was amazing. I also love The Little Big Band and we were on BBC Jersey Introducing recently and I thought the guy who was on with us was brilliant. His name was Steve McVay.

What's most played on your iPods?

Grace:- Regina Spektor and The Punch Brothers for music but I have Book 3 of Game of Thrones on my iPod as an audio book at the moment and am absolutely hooked on it.

Liberty:- A mix of Beyonce, Ed Sheeran, Jack Johnson and Elton John. I've recently got into older music. I think it's fab.

Chloe:- Coldplay, Aretha Franklin and Mundo Latino.

If you could play anywhere, where would it be and with whom?

Grace - I'd love to sing with Regina Spektor absolutely anywhere in the world or be in a folk band with The Punch Brothers or in a world-class orchestra. Recently I played sax with the Band of Her Majesty's Royal Marines and that was wonderful and gave me a real taste of playing with top class musicians who I was totally in awe of.

Liberty:- Well, I'd love to sing with many people but to be on stage with either Rihanna or Beyonce anywhere in the world would be absolutely amazing.

Chloe:- The O2 with Michael Buble and Tre.

INTRODUCING:

VANGUARD

This month, we thought we'd introduce you to the brains behind one of the Island's premier DJ collaborations and music producers: Vanguard. Vanguard Audio has been making some serious noise both locally and off Island – so here's a little word from them on who they are and what they're up to... If you like Drum and Base, you'll LOVE Vanguard.

What is Vanguard?

Vanguard is a new concept from production and DJ outfit Terminal State, it was launched just over one year ago as a monthly club night representing the real happenings on the Drum and Bass scene, alongside the club night we have our record label Vanguard Audio which is now on its 3rd release and already the label's records have been supported heavily by the top DJ's and Radio stations.

Growing up, who or what inspired you musically?

I was first properly inspired musically in the early 90's when the hardcore/rave scene came about and then around 94' Jungle music started blowing up and from aged around 16 I would travel to some of the biggest raves such as Dreamscape, Helter Skelter, World Dance etc and this just reaffirmed to me that a huge movement was born which would never go away, I was hooked!!

Which new local artists have caught your eye recently?

DnB wise you've got to be checking out Night-Shift, Pranksta and Archetype and the extremely talented MC Wildee, all these guys can be found at our monthly Vanguard nights. We have also been recording with a couple great artists recently, we did a track with rapper UG Cameron called 'Space of the Earth' forthcoming on LifeStyle Records plus we just started recording with female vocalist Lesina which we are very excited about.

What's your favourite thing about working within music? Production or playing?

We all DJ under Terminal State which for all of us is the main reason we got involved in music, the production was just a natural progression and some studio sessions can certainly be just as rewarding as playing to a huge crowd.

5) What are your thoughts on the local music scene, is there enough balance between live acts and DJs?

I think so yes, the main concern I have being a DJ and club promoter is the opening hours need to be extended in the clubs, at least 3am or 4am closing times. This is standard across the UK and Europe and I really thing the powers to be here need to address this, plus it would certainly ease the pressure on police, taxi firms etc with staggered closing times and not having 5,000+ people put out on the streets of St. Helier at 2am.

6) Where is your favourite place to play in Jersey, or where would it be if you could choose anywhere?

Well Jersey wise it's Pure (best sound system in St. Helier) the Watersplash and of course Jersey Live, elsewhere it's got to be the Melkweg in Holland, one of the best clubs in Europe and we have been lucky enough to play there on many occasions.

7) Who is the biggest super star DJ in your humble opinion?

The DJ culture is in a very funny place at the moment, I had a good chat with Bailey when he was over and we both agreed about certain things. Global prominence and popularity of DJ's is at an all time high. DJ skill and ability required at an all time low. Unfortunately a lot of DJ's are now after the hype and the fame and forgetting the music, writing for the charts and forgetting what they are all about.

8) What's happening with Terminal State?

Production wise we have records forthcoming on Soul Deep Recordings, Criminal Records, Dance Concept Records, Protect Audio and of course Vanguard Audio amongst other projects. You can catch us DJ'ing in Jersey in July at Havanna on 7th July with Danny Byrd for Chaka, 21st July at the Watersplash with London Elektriccity for Theology and Vanguard at Pure with Kasra on 27th July.

9) If you could remix or produce anyone, who would it be?

We have just done a collab with Jungle Drummer from London Elektriccity (who you can catch at the Splash on 21st July!), which was a lot of fun and have an EP project with him and World Beatbox champ Ball-Zee on the cards. We would love to also collaborate with artists such as Break, Ed Rush, BTK and a dream collaboration maybe Adele or Chase and Status.

10) Where and when can the Jersey public catch a bit of Vanguard?

Our next night is Friday 27th July at Pure where we invite Critical Records boss Kasra over to Jersey for the first time, he recently had a Fabric LIVE CD out and we are very excited about this booking. Terminal State have many gig's forthcoming in Jersey the UK and around Europe this summer. Check out Vanguard Audio at www.soundcloud.com/varecords sees Morning Face (formerly, 'Bones') take to the stage in Tanguy's Back Room. One of Tanguy's favourites, Morning Face bring a real speakeasy vibe to the Back Room... With sultry Annie Law and her merry band of musical wizards performing an acoustic set from 9pm till late.

COMING UP THIS JULY

is the second installment of Jersey MUSE. The musical aspect of Jersey Heritage's latest offering will be held at The Museum and merchant House Brasserie... Performers, Rick Jones, Ali Richomme and Brave Yesterday will all be hosting the evening, with an exhibition by local artist Deborah Buterbaugh and a photographic projection from local photographer Jose Pires, which will be accompanied by a composition from violinist Vanessa Moore.

Havanna is a celebration for Chaka's 2nd Birthday, hosted by none other than Hospital Records legend... Danny Byrd! One of the biggest drum and bass artists of the last few years, with huge releases under his belt such as 'Red Mist', 'Tonight' (feat Netsky), 'Ill Behaviour' and 'We Can Have It All' all being picked up by Radio 1 and earning Danny mainstream chart success. Danny Byrd has gained a reputation as one of the greatest DJs on the drum and bass scene, he has been one of the key elements to the success of the legendary Hospital Records. Danny Byrd will be accompanied by one of the best MCs in the game today... MC Risky. Support on the night will be provided by local legends Terminal State, Nightshift and the hugely exciting JE3. Proceedings will be hosted by Chaka's resident MC... Wildee MC. Doors open at 10pm and it's a £10 entry fee on the door (or early BYRD tickets are £7).

21

sees another Drum and Bass legend, 'London Elektriccity' grace our shores and provide a soundtrack to the Watersplash for Theology... For those that know him and those that don't, Tony Colman (no 'e'!) cuts a formidable figure. Having been involved in the DnB scene since the mid-90s, the co-founder of Hospital Records has been instrumental in the development of the genre as we know it today - see londonelektriccity.com. Doors open at 10pm and tickets are £15 available from White Label Records and Carob in St Brelades.

GET YOUR GROOVE ON...

If you've been to JerseyLive over the last few years I'm sure many, if not all of you have experienced Headway's 'Tease' themed areas that have transported festival goers to alternative and vibrant environments; whether the Pirate Paradise of 2010 or back in time to the Wild West for 2011.

With a Glastonbury vibe, the fancy dress wardrobe, face painting, games and entertainment invited everyone to lose their inhibitions all in the name of a good cause. Headway have raised over £19,000 thanks to generous festival goers and community of volunteers who have made it possible to put on the event at Jersey Live over the last three years.

This year, instead of Jersey Live, Headway will be hosting their own fundraising festival, 'Groove de Lecq' a community event celebrating the best of Jersey. Headway will be transforming Le Moulin de Lecq historical pub into an unmissable all day event with local music, artist installations, games and of course fancy dress.

Starting at midday with a choice of 2 stages, the Valley Stage will see the likes of the Little Big Band, Brave Yesterday and Pirate Party Brigade perform in the woodland. Within the beer tent there will be an acoustic stage with intimate performances from Rosie Barrette, Rick Jones and many more. Throughout the day over 20 different musicians, groups and DJs will ensure everyone will get to enjoy their favourite Jersey musicians and discover new artists.

There will be plenty of entertainment for kids and for those adults who are still yet to grow up. The kids field with playground will have face painters, games, expression wall and even the reinstatement of the historic kids cocktail bar, no alcohol of course!

Le Moulin de Lecq will be providing fantastic food from a hog roast, BBQ favorites, bean crock and an option to dine inside for a more glamorous festival experience. Alongside the usual tipples adults will get the chance to sample special festival ales and cider. Rocksteady DJ's will be playing chilled sounds throughout the day and in the evening, tickets for the after party will be in highly sought after, with only 150 guests being able to purchase these limited tickets with an extension till 1am.

The ethos is simple; to create a community festival with a cooperative of artists and volunteers to help Headway raise funds to support those locally who need help following a brain injury. With the support of local business including Sure CW it will ensure that the cost of every ticket will go directly to Headway.

To support Headway fundraising and also to encourage local people to recycle, Headway are appealing for donations of items including clothing, accessories, household goods, furniture, props and materials. The Headway Charity Shop on New Street will collect items which are not used at the festival to sell and raise funds for the charity. It is intended that a workshop will be set up to create props and decor for the festival and encourage the community to get involved. If you think you are able to assist in any way please contact beth.headway@gmail.com or call 505937.

Headway Jersey Groove de Lecq
Saturday 4th August 2012 in partnership with Sure CW

From 12 Midday to 11pm
Tickets £20
Child £10 (14 and under)
6 and under Free
Ticket + After Party £30 (over 18's only)

GOING LIVE IN JUST TWO MONTHS

With just two months to go until Jersey Live takes over the RJAHS for another year the organisers are still maintaining an air of suspense about who the final remaining handful of acts will be.

Until they see fit to put us out of our misery though, here's what this year's festival has to offer. Curiously, looking at this year's lineup for both days side by side it seems that the order of acts has been cunningly engineered to appeal particularly to the youngsters attending on one day and more to the not quite as young as they might hope attendees on the other. As somebody who sits fairly snugly between these two age distinctions I'm fairly confident that this was a shrewd and potentially popular decision that will be welcomed by many people. Those without devious hidden agendas, mainly.

SATURDAY

CHASE & STATUS

Who? You ask? Well if that's the case there's no hope for you and I must urge you to scurry back underneath your rock clutching this copy of Gallery tightly before you see what we call a 'car' and suffer a cardiac arrest. They've been bringing drum & bass and dubstep steadily into the mainstream since whilst engaging in big name collaborations and even writing songs for film soundtracks.

PROFESSOR GREEN

A friend of mine recently screamed 'WHAT ARE YOU EVEN SAYING?!' in a rage at my turn of the century hi-fi as Professor Green's 'Remedy' emanated from the speakers courtesy of Radio 1 (other radio stations are available). As much as I couldn't argue that I had absolutely no idea what they lyrics are I'd say that overall it's a pretty catchy tune.

RIZZLE KICKS

Fresh faced, hip and hailing from Brighton, this hip hop duo consists of Jordan 'Rizzle' Stephens and Harley, you guessed it, 'Sylvester' Alexander-Sule. Hang on, why the 'kicks' then? They both like football, apparently. Over 1,000,000 singles sold definitely says something though. I'll leave it up to you to decide what.

JAGUAR SKILLS

The masked DJ that is the 21st century re-incarnation of Jive Bunny & the Mastermixers all rolled into one and packing an iPod instead of a walkman full of sellotaped together cassette tapes. Surprisingly though, this is no bad thing. Definitely one to watch, although I'm not sure about the mask - somebody should tell him that the threat of SARS isn't an issue over here.

BWANI JUNCTION

Horried to discover that nobody has made a Wikipedia entry (university students are allowed to cite the mighty online encyclopaedia these days so I thought 'why not?') I've just listened to 4 minutes and 19 seconds of their track 'Two Bridges' on YouTube. Performing on a bridge wearing high-vis and hard hats before being ushered onto another one by a girl NOT wearing a hard hat to paint it a lovely shade of eggshell, they're certainly safety conscious, if vandals. Their blend of northern rock-pop was pretty pleasant too. Think Arctic Monkeys, but not as droning.

SUNDAY

NOEL GALLAGHER'S HIGH FLYING BIRDS

Having ditched his brother at long last in favour of creating music instead of controversy, his band's name is derived from a Jefferson Airplane / Starship / Battleship / Dishwasher song. Zutons bassist Russell Pritchard is in the band's lineup, making this his third time playing at the event. Get that man a frequent traveller card!

PRIMAL SCREAM

A huge player in the British Indie-pop scene throughout the eighties, there's no denying the uplifting appeal of 'Movin' On Up' so check it out if you're not familiar with it. I saw them at Glastonbury and am inclined to say that they were incredible, although I must also admit that I was in a condition of consciousness that would have made the band proud.

THE STRANGLERS

If you've managed to weather those incredibly tough teenage years and emerge into what older folk proudly refer to as 'the real world' it's likely that you will have heard at least two Stranglers songs in your lifetime. If you're young enough for them to have slipped under your radar go listen to 'No More Heroes' and then prepare yourself for two or more encores of 'Golden Brown' on the night.

B. TRAITS

An undeniably pretty Canadian DJ & producer with a recent UK liquid drum & bass release in the form of 'Fever' she's sure to play a few of your favourites in one form or another from the past twenty years. I've just listened to the minimix she made for Annie Mac's Radio1 show so I'm pretty much an authority on the subject now and have been left wanting more. No lie, six minutes of her definitely wasn't enough. Not like that - now get your mind out of the gutter.

JAKE BUGG

No stranger to playing summer festivals, having performed on the BBC Introducing stage at Glastonbury when he was just 17, Huw Stephens (also of BBC fame) has been championing Jake's take on music influenced by artists such as Dylan, Oasis, The Beatles, Jimi Hendrix and Donovan. So pretty much his Dad's entire back-catalogue of LPs then.

Jersey's annual foodie directory

Appetite began when we couldn't find a local restaurant guide that would tell us when all our favourite places were open, and what was on the menu. So we decided to write one ourselves.

The fourth edition of Appetite is out now and has all the key features you love about your food annual – easy to navigate sections, sample menus and clear contact details as well as a few extra tasty tidbits like interviews, features and special offers and giveaways for Appetite readers.

Fancy winning a meal for two at a restaurant of your choice?
