often get confused over Etymology. It's a word I like because it's the term used to describe the study of the history of words. I like words, therefore I like the word. Sadly I can't seem to differentiate it from the term entomology, which is the study of insects. I'm sure if you're into insects, it's a barrel of laughs but just not for me. This clearly leaves me at the potential ridicule of literate science geeks. Never a good thing.

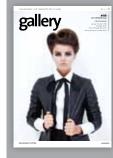

The existence of entomology to mess with my head aside, studying the meaning and history of words frequently becomes a topic of discussion when we're choosing themes for a magazine. This month's theme is 'vintage', a word that's bandied about all over eBay and Pinterest with wild abandon. It's generally used to refer to anything battered and old that someone is trying to upcycle for a ghastly margin.

When you're in a restaurant where people that are trying to impress each other are taking about wine you'll doubtless overhear comments about the vintage. That's the only context in reality that the term makes sense, taken to refer to the grapes picked during the season in question - simply 'of the era' in a chronological sense. In actual fact, without a historical frame of reference it means nothing really. 'Vintage 1960s lamp' - yes, 'vintage lamp' - no. Next time someone says; 'Look at my bag, it's vintage' you can reassure them all bags are.

So where does it leave us? Well, what it means is we could have pretty much filled this issue with anything we wanted that's ever happened. That would just be lazy though. Instead we've taken a few vintage elements and focused on them. Vintage 1980s tourism gets a look in, Vintage 1950s fashion does too and we even have a 'what kind of vintage are you?' Quiz. We've even got some wine too; a vintage so good that, wherever and whenever you are in the world, they send someone to you to open it for you when you're ready. Yes, I sh*t you not.

So, enjoy the issue in all it's vintage glory. By the way, does anyone want to buy an old sideboard I found in a skip and dusted it off? It's vintage. Yours for only \pounds 600.

GOODBYE FROM PONTING PLEMONT BAY

words | Chris Bell illustration | Ben Robertson

הוחה גרה הרבה בהגרות

BACK IN THE DAYS BEFORE CHEAP AND EASY AIR TRAVEL, WHEN WINING AND DINING WERE CHEAPER HERE THAN IN THE UK, AND WHEN THE ISLAND HAD OODLES OF FREE PROMOTION THROUGH THE ICONIC BERGERAC, JERSEY WAS A MECCA FOR BRITISH TOURISTS. YOU MAY LAUGH, BUT IT WAS RATHER THE IBIZA OF ITS DAY, ALBEIT WITH RATHER MORE END-OF-THE-PIER ENTERTAINMENT THAN INTERNATIONAL DJS. SURE ENOUGH, THE ISLAND IS STILL VERY MUCH A DRAW FOR MANY A VISITOR FROM THE UK AND BEYOND, BUT ONCE UPON A TIME TOURISM WAS THE BE ALL AND END ALL OF JERSEY'S CULTURE, AND WE HAD MANY RATHER CHARMING TOURIST ATTRACTIONS TO SPEAK OF THAT NOW, SADLY, HAVE DISAPPEARED. IN THIS MONTH'S VINTAGE ISSUE, WE'RE JUMPING IN OUR CONVERTED JOEY PLANE (COMPLETE WITH FLUX CAPACITOR) AND TAKING A TRIP DOWN MEMORY LANE TO LOOK AT SOME OF THE HOLIDAY HOTSPOTS OF YESTERYEAR...

FORT REGENT

First stop on our whistle-stop tour of Jersey circa 'the old days' has to be Fort Regent. Built in 1814 as a military fortress, the 22 acre site was redeveloped as a leisure and entertainment centre in 1967 with the much-missed cable cars introduced in 1970, taking visitors from Snow Hill to the Fort on a daily basis until they were decommissioned in 1991. Upon arriving at Fort Regent, tourists would find a veritable Aladdin's Cave of attractions. There was, of course, the swimming pool and its 'Pluto's Playtime' days (basically a free-for-all with loads of inflatable rings and rafts, which was much better than that sounds). It had a roller disco, a ghost train, dodgems, the Jungle Gym play park, an outdoor playground, the aquarium, the Exploratorium – a darkened room crammed with plasma balls and weird optical illusions, a vivarium full of insects and plants, the Golden Nugget 'casino' and Bonapartes and the Firehouse nightclubs. Not to mention regular shows in the Piazza throughout the day. It used to be packed all day, every day. What went wrong? Humphrey the Lion of course was laid off in the late-90s and now works in Spar. He lives alone.

LUNCH BREAK - THE WATERFRONT

Deep pan pizzas with a Bolognese topping, a wall of TV screens showing music videos, baseball memorabilia lining the walls, and a complimentary Trebor Imperial mint on the way out. What more could you ask for?

FANTASTIC TROPICAL GARDENS

Now that you've taken in the majesty of Fort Regent, and fed, it's time to enjoy the great outdoors. Before the days in which people would sod off half way around the world to go backpacking in Thailand or holidaying in Cancun, you didn't have to, because all of the wonders of the tropical world were crammed into a 'world full of mystery and surprise' in St Peters Valley. It launched in 1986 (qualifying it as 'vintage', just) and lasted just over a decade. Upon entering, visitors would be given a passport to stamp as they visited its various areas. There was a Mexican-themed funfair, Thai dancers, an animatronic crocodile and hippo in a pond, a park with dinosaur statues in and a wishing well which shouted back at you when you shouted into it. This is also known as an echo. The piece de resistance though, was its parrot show. Fantastic Tropical Garden's prize parakeet rode a bike across a tight tope and did little jigs for punters, and was something of a star back in the day. Since Fantastic Tropical Gardens closed down, our feathered friend went on to work in Woolworths. When that also shut down, he took the hint and flew back to the jungle.

INN ON THE PARK

When you talk to Jersey's old school ravers about the fabled Inn on the Park, they often get a little teary-eyed and wistful, and for good reason; the 1500-capacity art deco ballroom was the place to be for the island's clubbers at the turn of the 90s, when the dance music scene was just beginning to take a grip on popular culture. However, if you had access to a time machine, you could venture back to any point in the 20th Century since it was built in the 1930s, and enjoy a wholly different experience. In its original incarnation, it was a high society meeting place, more champagne than vodka and coke, more ball gown than boob tube. In the seventies it was a rock n' rollers. dream, with the likes of Led Zepellin gracing the stage regularly. It was its spell as an electroheads' party hub that seems to inspire the most nostalgia though; superstar DJs like Sasha, Carl Cox, Laurent Garnier and Jersey's own Warren Le Sueur were amongst those that manned the decks there on a regular basis, leading Mixmag to declare it the third best venue in the UK at the time. It's flats now, in case you hadn't noticed.

PONTINS

Pontins, the chain of UK holiday parks, had two sites in Jersey; Portelet Bay, which opened in 1994 and closed in 2000, and Plemont Bay, which opened much earlier in 1961, also closing in 2000. The Plemont site had in fact been the Jersey Jubilee Holiday Camp since the early 1920s, but when the Nazis came along and occupied Jersey they used it as a base for their forces and left the place in such a state of disrepair that the most viable option was to find a buyer. Along came Fred Pontin with 375,000 big ones, and the Pontins-Jersey relationship was born. Cashing in on the height of Jersey's popularity as a tourist destination, with a swimming pool, a tennis court, nightly cabaret shows and all-important bar, it was a winner until tourists' tastes became more refined. It now resembles Chernobyl, and its future is apparently still very much up in the air.

HAVRE DES PAS

With 45 miles of coastline, Jersey has long had a soft spot for swimming, and no location in the island has played such a key role for Jersey's swimmers than Havre Des Pas. The bathing pool was originally built in the early 1890s by Jersey Swimming Club (who still hold their annual Christmas Day dip there put it in your diary) and officially opened by the Lieutenant Governor of Jersev on May 22nd 1995. A popular Victorian seaside resort, the area was frequented by many a famous visitor, including Victor Hugo and T.E Lawrence (of Arabia). The blue terrace and shelters were opened in 1927, one year after which Jersey Swimming Club's K Le Rossignol competed in the Amsterdam Olympic Games. With the advent of heated swimming pools in the 1960s, the bathing pool's pull with tourists declined somewhat, but as a beach resort on town's doorstep, it remained a popular destination, evidence of which can be seen to this day, with much of the area is populated by hotels, guest houses, restaurants and cafes.

For a snapshot of Jersey tourism in the Victorian era, check out this communication between the founding fathers of Marxist theory, Frederick Engels and Karl Marx, which describes a Jersey which may seem somewhat familiar to its 21st Century residents...

London 5.September 1874. Dear Moor [Marx],

Jersey has changed a great deal since we were there together. A vast amount of building, elegant villas, big hotels - high, almost English prices in them, everything also much more expensive in the market. Here, too, the London market has a price raising effect. The French language rapidly disappearing, even the country children now speak almost nothing but English without any French accent, nearly all of them. Only the elderly distinguished citizens still cling firmly to the French. During the season there are daily trips through the Island by five different entrepreneurs.

On one occasion we joined one of over 150 persons in 8-9 carriages, the public - philistines, commercial clerks and volunteers, and snobs - giving rise to some amusement and occasional annoyance. The true Briton casts off his cultivated manner as soon as he is on such a trip in Jersey, but resumes it more conscientiously at the table d'hote. The increasing availability of money among certain rising individuals - one can hardly call them strata - of England's small middle class and the resulting extent of luxury and of refined so-called good society was easy to observe in Jersey just because Jersey is still regarded as inexpensive and hence unfashionable little island. The respectability standards of Jersey visitors seems to decline each year - but we made the same observation also in Ramsgate, where no one complained more vociferously about this than the unfortunate barber who cut our hair so short last April.

> Yours, General [Engels].

TOO GOOD TO FORGET

RICK JONES

I'M HERE TODAY TO TALK ABOUT A NEW KIND OF ABUSE. THE VICTIMS OF THIS ABUSE CAN SAY NOTHING, DESPITE LITERALLY BEING THE VERY ESSENCE OF 'SPEAKING UP'. SUFFERING IN SILENCE, THEY FIND THEMSELVES MIS-REPRESENTED AND USED AS THE TOOLS OF THE UNSCRUPULOUS - OUT TO MAKE A FAST BUCK OFF THE BACK OF THESE INNOCENT COLLECTIONS OF CHARACTERS. THEIR VERY EXISTENCE BECOMES MEANINGLESS... IRONIC, AS THEIR ONLY PURPOSE IS TO 'MEAN SOMETHING' IN THE FIRST PLACE! I'M TALKING ABOUT WORDS THEMSELVES... YES... WORD ABUSE!

he word 'vintage' is the victim of a massacre of meaning... the cops wouldn't be able to outline it's prostrate form in chalk; it's been spattered up the walls and dismembered. It's remains, once collected, would be buried under a tombstone that read;

Here lies 'vintage' - once a proud, honest description for a hard year's toil in the earth and air of a vineyard... relegated to the king of a dusty cellar; gradually only brought into daylight for those with vast wealth, then stretched across the title of every worn out item on eBay - until he finally meant nothing, R.I.P.

It's true. 'Vintage' originally meant the year long process of creating wine. What with weather being the uncompromising S.O.a.B. force of nature that it is, some years it was kinder to the grape farmers than others, giving better yield of more sugary little yeast-covered berries for a better tasting wine... or quicker to get you red nosed and insulting people... whatever makes a 'good year' better!

A curious thing began to happen, and these 'good' years began to be saved for the very best occasions, or highest paying customers, and along the way the very amount of time they had been stored for began to add value. Thus 'vintage' evolved to mean 'older' and became a term that hit you square in the wallet... if you wanted it, you paid for it.

The word (or is it a term...? I never listened at school...) became used for similar objects of desire that were considered to be made in a particularly 'good' era. Cars, for instance... 'built' by humans, back when profit margins didn't dictate that steel bodywork be wafer thin and 'assembled' by robots. Guitars, made of tone-inspiring and beautiful woods, back before we used it all for paper... erm...

Vintage began to mean quality. As quality became rarer (and 'rare' is another abused word in much the same way), 'vintage' began to mean 'reminding one of quality'.

As quality slowly died of the fatal disease of capitalism - finally euthanized by the invisible hand of the market (please google that), 'vintage' began it's own descent into oblivion... ironically looking back to it's former self as a proud marker of all things built to last.

Briefly, fashion did what it does, and resurrected 'vintage' like the proverbial Messiah, putting it back on the throne as sexy, desirable and worthy of adoration. But fashion is fickle, and before long 'vintage' had returned to the bottom of the pile, to wait for a new generation to decide it applies to something they think is suitably retrospective - and make the last lot feel old!

Along came the internet, and we all began to sell by auction literally everything we didn't want anymore at the ubiquitous ubiquitous 'bay of evil'. The words 'vintage' and 'rare' - still thought by the less observant seller to imply a sense of value and create a desire for their old tat - began to be used so often that the sensible shopper hit the [back] button every time either word came into view.

Thus 'vintage' was abused until it had no meaning. Left to wander the netherworld, a whisper in the ethereal cloud of ancestral utterances. A terrible end for a terminology terminated by the time it came to imply.

But don't worry vintage... like all things inherently good, there will always be a few who remember you for what you are; the rich sonorous tone of a 1950's Gibson guitar! The unique pitch and wide frequency spread of a vinyl record grooved with real music! Real 1970s Levis thick enough to get actually better with time and wear! The roar of an engine built when things were really built - and not neutered to comply with a million regulations of the nanny state!

So we'll take back your meaning, and make it new... from now on vintage shall come to mean 'too good to forget!'

The skies above Jersey will come alive with the sights and sounds of arguably one of the largest free air displays in Europe. Both international military and civilian aircraft will perform in breath-taking formation teams and skilful solo aerobatic demonstrations to provide you with amazing entertainment. Grab your lunch or maybe early dinner and watch the display for a great afternoon out. If military planes aren't your thing and you prefer something a little more... colourful? Then don't worry as stunning routines will be performed in the display finale by none other than our favourites the RAFAT Red Arrows!

LOUISE BRALSFORD

THE LABEL THAT IS "VINTAGE". PUT IT IN FRONT OF ANYTHING, AND STUFF SUDDENLY BECOMES COOL...

y bicycle at university, for example, the mighty and appropriately-named Lance was the most hideous shade of pink. It was a skinny vintage Raleigh bike that had seen better days with drop handlebars and a distinct lack of braking power.

But it was vintage, and therefore cool and rapidly became the most desirable item I owned. The number of compliments I received back then...even though Lance let out a screech which sounded like an elephant giving birth at every red light.

A while ago I stayed with a friend near Limoges and we spent a lot of time toddling around the markets which sprouted up every Tuesday in the neighbouring villages. On one occasion, browsing a car boot full of tat, I came across an acceptable jewellery box that had quite an interesting design. I opened it to find a couple of dead flies and a tube of ointment which must have gone off in the 70's. Curling my lip, I was putting it back when an old man who was sitting under a fig tree shouted something unintelligible. Smiling warily I waved and said "Non merci!" in my chirpiest French. This did not do the trick, and he hobbled over. Placing his hand a little too far down my back, he started explaining why I needed this hingeless wonder in my life. He claimed it used to belong to Marie Antoinette. My resolve strengthened. He told me it was a pretty thing for a pretty girl

- but I stood firm. And then Cara bounced over and said "Oh wow, that's cool, love it! Vintage, yeah?" Next thing I knew I was handing over €25.

Being a clumsy person, I'm generally a fan of old things, like my second-hand car which doesn't mind getting its wing mirrors scraped. There's something about newness which makes me slightly uneasy, like women who wear white trousers. It makes me uncomfortable when something is so perfect, I just know that I'm going to break it. My iPod lasted an impressive four hours before receiving its first scratch. My laptop was doing well until I dropped a plate on it. Most books in the house have been dropped in the bath or had tea spilt on them, but for some reason it makes them feel more mine. This is quite the opposite to vintage I suppose, when the value of the item stems from the fact that it was once someone else's.

The thing is with vintage is that it makes it all the more unlikely that anyone else can have it. It's never fun when you turn up somewhere and there's another person wearing the same thing. You can pretend all you like that you honestly don't mind and laugh it off with a cry of "twins!" and pose for a photo.

My fashionista New Yorker friend bought me a pair of vintage boots for my eighteenth birthday and even now I love being asked where I got them and being able to come back with "oh actually they're vintage", accompanied by a facial expression which clearly means "Ha!" Such power with this simple reply. By claiming an item's vintage status, you're asserting its uniqueness and mind-bending unattainability. It can be difficult to fight the magpie-like tendency to fall for anything shiny and new, but vintage stuff often expresses a lot more originality and personality than your everyday purchases. And originality and personality are never going to go out of fashion.

WHOOPS... Canadian Dale Whitmell, 40, of Goulais River, accidentally shot himself in the forehead with his own rifle after trying to kill a mouse with the rifle butt. Apparently, Whitmell hadn't realised the gun was loaded and got quite a shock when the it fired. He lived to tell the tale, after escaping with only a grazed forehead from the bullet Whitmell was then charged with careless use of a firearm, however it is not known what happened to the mouse.

FALSE ALARM!

After a mad rush to evacuate a building in Chur as there was a report of a 'giant bird eating spider' on the boss's table, police arrived to discover that this oh so very dangerous spider was in fact a plastic toy. As the call was in fact genuine, staff at the firm weren't fined for wasting police time but had to instead sit through a lecture with a dangerous animals expert on how to tell the difference between real spiders and ones of the plastic variety.

NEVER MIND THE ANABOLICS

Scottish brewery, BrewDig, has unveiled a new beer called Never Mind the Anabolics containing eight illegal performance enhancing ingredients.

Containing the banned products for professional athletes, creatine, guarana, lycii berries, kola nut, Gingko, matcha tea, maca powder and steroids, they say their limited edition beer was designed to 'undermine global sponsorship' for the London Olympics.

James Watt, cofounder of BrewDog said: "It seems a beer laced with performance enhancing ingredients isn't actually illegal, but it is definitely frowned upon', apparently it gives the sponsors of the games 'the finger in the best way we know how.'

A percentage of the proceeds of the craft beer is going towards a new surfboard for a surfing dog called Abbie.

WHAT A FISHY STORY...

After locking up their supposedly empty home in Changji, Xinjiang Province, Xu Xianmin and his wife returned home later to find that their home had been ransacked! After initially thinking that their home had been burgled, they found that nothing had been stolen. On closer inspection, Xu suddenly "touched something cold and slippery" and discovered the thieving catfish. He added, "No thieves would leave a giant fish in the house while stealing nothing. And it's not possible that someone threw the fish in through the window, as the door and windows were locked. All we can imagine is that the catfish somehow sneaked into the house in the time between us opening the door and then leaving for work." To add to the mystery, the couple's home lies in a residential area with no river or pond nearby.

WHAT BETTER TO COMPLEMENT YOUR VINTAGE OUTFIT THAN A STRING OF PEARLS? WHERE DO THEY COME FROM AND HOW ARE THEY MADE?

A pearl is a mollusc's response to an irritating particle - it covers it with layers of nacre, also known as mother of pearl and so the pearl is made. Contrary to popular belief, a grain of sand is rarely the offending particle, it is more likely to be a micro-organism. The pearls used in jewellery come from the tropical pearl oyster or the freshwater mussel. Pearls are sometimes thought to be tears but a bride often wears pearls so there will be no tears in her marriage.

Here in Jersey we have the edible oyster which has been eaten for centuries. There is evidence that Neolithic man ate them here 6000 years ago and oyster shells have been found at La Hougue Bie. Oysters were also popular with the Romans.

By the Middle Ages , oysters were being extensively fished and there is mention in the 15th century that the Gorey oyster beds were being over-exploited. However this would not compare with the scale of harvesting in the 18th and 19th centuries, when the oysters were sent to London and Europe. In those days they were not considered a luxury but a food for the common people. However overfishing depleted the stocks and the industry died out in the second half of the 19th century.

In the last 40 years a new oyster industry has grown up in the Bay of Grouville, using another species - the rock or Pacific oyster. Millions of seed oysters are bought in and grown on in the Bay where the shallow tidal waters are ideal growing conditions. After 5 or 6 years they are big enough for the table and are sold to the U.K., France and Jersey. More recently native oysters are now also being farmed.

The native oyster has a very unusual life cycle as it starts out male but changes sex with each spawning! The breeding season is in the summer from May to August hence the saying that oysters should only be eaten when there is an "r" in the month. Oysters are an excellent source of minerals and vitamins and are well known as a supposed aphrodisiac. They usually live around 6 years but some can live for 15 years.

QUIZ: WHAT VINTAGE ARE YOU?

words | Osbourne Ruddock illustration | Ben Robertson

his month Gallery has gone vintage mad, rolling through the streets of Jersey like a pipesmoking man in a tweed jacket, finger-snapping to experimental jazz in his classic Jaguar. To get into the spirit I wrote this entire article using an Etch-A-Sketch, wearing a chunky cardigan and a sweatband - but no pants. I am expecting to get paid in a combination of Mary Anne Bitter, Marathon bars and vinyl copies of Now Thats What I Call Music.

Personally I'm as vintage as Blue Stilton, but the question is: how vintage are you? Have you matured like a fine wine, or turned to vinegar at the back of a dusty cupboard? Are you classic like a tuxedo in Tangiers or just a bit out of date, like a carton of yellow milk with some lumps in it?

The only way to tell is to take this objective test of vintage-ness, developed by a bunch of scientists we thawed out from a sixties time capsule found under the old Odeon building. They're hard at work in our lab, so don't tell them that it's against the law to manufacture proper light bulbs, Um Bongo and LSD.

1. WHAT'S YOUR IDEA OF A GREAT SATURDAY NIGHT OUT?

A: I'm a bit too old for the disco, but if I'm at a wedding I've been known to cut a rug to some Hall & Oates and Tina Turner. If you give me a few pints, I've still got disco fever. B: A decadent, yet intimate, gathering where my fellow initiates rendezvous to drink absinthe, discuss Byron's poetry and play backgammon. It's the flat above the chippy, ring the bell with a spider drawn on it. C: Clubbing in Hoxton with Zazzie, Beasel and the guys from twanky.net. We're over dubstep and moombaton since the media got hold of them, but footwork, nu-clownstep and Belgian goatcore are pretty cool right now. D: Journeying through the electronic oceans of cyberspace with hackers, tweakers and a few Chinese dissidents. The web is our conduit; the earth our destination. Alternatively, if the internet is down again, staying in and watching Doctor Who with a curry.

2. YOU'VE GOT A HOT DATE TONIGHT - WHAT ARE YOU WEARING?

A: White chinos, cowboy boots and a powderblue sports coat. Classic style never gets old, unlike my ex-wife. Yeah, baby! B: A floor-length frock coat, leather riding boots, silk cravat and a 1930s airman's helmet. I dislike dressing up too much unless we're going anywhere special.

C: I found this amazing puffer jacket at Oxfam, which I will team with some ski leggings, a mohawk and the hot pink moccasins I scored at a Paris flea market. It's totes a classic look. D: A wearable GPS with EEG monitor and Google Glass augmented reality goggles. Also a neck brace, because I fell off my chair whilst playing Diablo III all weekend.

3. WHAT'S YOUR PREFERRED MODE OF TRANS-PORT?

A: Ford Escort, 1978. The passion wagon. I've still got an 8-track, furry dice and enough space in the back seat for two, if you get my meaning. Steamy windows!

B: Ideally a zeppelin, although a horse-drawn carriage or steam train would suffice. I am prevented from using the bus by the angry stares of the plebian hordes that surround me.C: I only ever ride my bicycle, which has neither brakes nor gears. Keep out of my way, because I won't be able to hear you over the Pitchfork chillwave playlist on my Walkman. D: The Tokyo bullet train, although I am technically unable to leave the country due to a 'misunderstanding' with NASA about some very poor network security.

4. WHAT WOULD BE YOUR IDEAL JOB?

A: Darts commentator, taxi driver or a policeman back when you could drink on the job and terrify criminals just by unbuttoning your shirt and flashing some chest hair.

B: An alchemist, warlock or sky-pirate, roaming the earth in search of adventure. Failing that, I could probably wear my own clothes if a got a job at a theme park.

C: When I'm done with uni, I plan to open a pop-up boutique selling upcycled fabrics and mixtapes from international DJs. Dad's going to source all the stock from a factory he owns in Hong Kong.

D: Astronaut, cyborg or a Predator drone pilot. Until then, I'm happy working in as an IT supervisor.

5. WHAT DO YOU DISLIKE MOST ABOUT THE ERA WE LIVE IN?

A: You can't hear the words on the radio any more, and political correctness means you can't pay a lady a good-natured compliment by pinching her bottom. On the other hand, Viagra's great.

B: Everything, although antibiotics came in pretty useful when I got ringworm from hanging round in cemeteries.

C: Nothing, because we can have the best of every era at once. My current look is Pet Shop Boys meets Isembard Kingdom Brunel and Jeffrey from Rainbow.

D: Lack of a functioning hyperdrive.

6. TELL US ABOUT YOUR IDEAL PARTNER:

A: Somebody that's mature on the inside, and about 23 on the outside. Must know how to do the funky chicken, and cook a greasy breakfast. B: A timeless creature of the night like myself, we can split the bill for our dry cleaning. C: Somebody cool, fun and totally original, like me. I expect we'll like all the same bands, films, books and places though.

D: Must have own monitor and be prepared to share bandwidth equitably. No bronies.

WHAT DID YOU ANSWER?

MOSTLY A:

You're so vintage that you've gone out the other side and are probably past your sell-by date. Still, if you can hang out long enough there's a chance that somebody who picked mostly Cs will adopt you as an ironic fashion accessory.

MOSTLY B:

Hello goths and steampunks! In one sense, you were born in the wrong century, although in another sense you're lucky not to have been alive in a time when dressing like a creepy vampire or villain from one of the Castlevania games could have got you locked up (or worse).

MOSTLY C:

Your entire lifestyle is a headacheinducing mishmash of irony, garish clothing and crap bands that people only pretend to like. The only thing that separates you from shouty street people and Timmy Mallet is a trust fund and another ten years of ketamine abuse.

MOSTLY D:

You're not vintage - you live in the matrix. Anything that doesn't have a microchip is old to you, and you're probably only reading this because the power went out again after you crashed the electricity grid by uploading a whole series of Babylon 5 to Pirate Bay at once. Live long and prosper.

AIRTEL-VODAFONE FIVE YEARS IN JERSEY CELEBRATION In store : 21/07/12

Airtel-Vodafone marked five years in Jersey recently with a handset and accessories sale for customers and a specially designed cake for staff and guests in the store. Commenting on the company's milestones since 2007,

Ian Campbell, vice-president of Airtel-Vodafone, said it had been a period of firsts for the market. He said: 'Our arrival in Jersey marked the beginning of competition in the telecoms market. We were the first operator to introduce free incoming calls when roaming and unlimited texts. We've fiercely targeted pricing and have dropped our call charges by 55% since we began trading. It's clear that competition works.'

OUR COMMUNITY

MIND THE WET PAINT

Owing to an elaborate system of ropes, the photographer was soon to meet his maker

MIND Jersey's nearly new shop will get a facelift thanks to facilities management company AFM working in partnership with Waitrose, St Helier, and B.G. Romerils.

The shop in St Helier provides an invaluable source of income for Mind Jersey, which promotes and protects good mental health and treats those experiencing mental distress. AFM will strip out and replace the flooring, put up new shelving and display facilities whilst the team from Waitrose will redecorate the interior with paint and other equipment provided by B.G. Romeril.

'We are pleased to be able to help Mind Jersey with the refurbishment of its shop from which proceeds go towards helping members of our community who are affected by mental health issues,' said AFM joint managing director Darren Etasse.

'Supporting the community is not just about providing financial backing and so we are proud at AFM to be able to offer charities such as Mind Jersey our time and expertise.'

The shop, which is open six days a week, sells nearly new clothes, books, DVDs and a wide range of bric-a-brac and household goods. The shop is run by Pam and Joe Hamon who are supported by a dedicated team of volunteers that give up their time freely each week.

"We cannot thank AFM and the other generous supporters enough for helping us to provide what we hope will be an opportunity to lift the profile of the shop as a go-to place for second-hand goods in the island,' said James Le Feuvre, Mind Jersey executive director.

24 HRS RIDING FOR AUTISM

Taking care to enter the correct coordinates into the GPS, Peter's start wasn't the swiftest

JT's staff around the world joined together to cycle a total of 1327.5 miles in 24 hours, smashing their target mileage of 1,000 miles and raising almost £3,000 for global Autism charities.

During their annual Charity Day on Friday 27th July, which coincided with the Olympic Opening Ceremony, around 160 JT employees took part in an 'Olympic' challenge of their own, a 24 hour, 1,000 mile cycle challenge which started in Melbourne, handed over to Oslo, London and the Channel Islands and finished up in Boston.

Almost 100 staff signed up for a 30 minute slot on one of the static bikes, which were set up in JT offices. In addition, a large number of staff took to their own bikes to cycle to and from work and the total mileage was matched by JT with a £1 donation for each mile. Further funds were raised through a raffle, global cake bake-off, a sports themed sweepstake, smoothie sales and other in office activities.

Richard Summerfield, JT's Human Resources Director, said: "We are absolutely delighted that our Charity Day was so successful and our staff excelled themselves in raising a significant amount of money in just one day. By identifying a global cause such as Autism for our three year commitment in which we aim to raise £50,000, our teams around the world can get behind one common cause and the cycle challenge was a fantastic example of just how successful we can be when we join together."

The totals for each office were Melbourne 142 miles; Oslo 27 miles; London 29 miles; Jersey road miles 309; Jersey static bike miles 572.85; Guernsey 170.5 miles; and Boston 76.7 miles.

24 PEAKS, 24 HOURS

Exhibiting a serious commitment to safety, 2 helmets per employee were provided

A TEAM of Garenne Group employees will be tackling the 24 Peaks Challenge next month to raise money for the Jersey and Guernsey Cheshire Homes. They aim to climb 24 peaks in the Lake District, each over 2,400 feet, within 24 hours.

It's going to be physically tough and mentally exhausting but the team knows that this challenge is only short-term compared to the lifelong challenges that the residents of Jersey and Guernsey Cheshire Homes deal with on a daily basis and the never-ending task that the staff face trying to raise enough money to ensure the facilities remain available and accessible to islanders.' said Garenne Group chief executive officer Andy Hall, who will be travelling with the team as support.

The event, which takes place in the Lake District, will see the team climb some of the UK's more famous peaks including Red Pike, Scafell Pike, Helvellyn and Great Gable. The team will start early on 29th September and climb 10 of the peaks and walk 17.5 miles on day one. After a brief sleep, they will then walk another 14 miles and climb a total of more than 13,000 feet.

'The team has set themselves the target of raising £24,024, which we thought was an appropriate figure given the challenge we face. Although that is an enormous amount of money, it is only a fraction of what the Jersey and Guernsey Cheshire Homes need to continue providing the exceptional care and support for those islanders with serious physical disabilities. Both homes are an essential part of the fabric of the islands and it's important that we all do whatever we can to support them,' said Camerons chief executive Martin Holmes.

MARCHING TO THEIR OWN BEAT

In the week leading up to their summer 'Carnival' concert on 4th August, the Jersey Symphony held a Percussion Workshop and a subsequent Percussion and Samba Parade through town (on Friday 3rd August), involving around 20 young percussionists.

Richard Thomas, Chairman of the JSO, said: "The Percussion workshops enabled young local musicians to gain from the vast experience of our concert soloists whilst the Samba Parade brought St Helier a taste of Carnival fun ahead of our concert."

Getting involved with the event is key. Speed is less relevant!

The Cancer Research UK Jersey Committee will again be hosting the Run4Men event this year on Sunday 16th September, after the event proved popular with male runners last year and raised much-needed funds for Cancer Research UK.

Last year the race attracted over 150 participants, this year the organising committee is aiming for a good increase in numbers. The charity has organised the Race for Life event, a similar event for ladies, for many years and it has proved to be remarkably popular, with over 1,300 ladies and girls taking part this year. The Run4Men is intended to encourage men and boys to contribute in a similar way. The organisers want to encourage runners of all ages and abilities to get involved and have some fun whilst also raising some valuable funds for Cancer Research UK. The event costs £15 to take part, which includes a Run4Men T-Shirt.

HEADWAY MARK'S '5 ISLAND CHALLENGE'

Mark remained undeterred in the face of some of his colleagues' questionable footwear choices, let alone the headwear...

Mark Harris, Olympic torch bearer and Headway Jersey Services Manager, last year completed 7 Marathons in 7 consecutive days in Jersey. The support he received locally was fantastic and he raised a significant amount for Headway Jersey. Mark Harris explained "This is going to be a difficult challenge, both mentally and physically, as it will involve a route I have never run and on the smaller Islands I will need to run many laps to complete the distance. The funds I can raise through my challenge will make a great difference and I'm really looking forward to taking on this challenge across the Channel Islands and would like to thank Aurigny for sponsoring my flights for the challenge"

By completing the 5 marathon challenge across the 5 Channel Islands, Mark hopes he can raise much needed funds for Headway Jersey. In the past 10 years he has seen the number of members helped by Headway grow from 6 to over 150 and the funding needed increase dramatically. It currently costs £250,000 a year to provide services and support to people in Jersey affected by brain injury. Headway is encouraging Islanders to support Mark by joining him on part of his marathon or showing their support by giving him a cheer or honking your horn in appreciation of his efforts.

To help Mark reach his target of £5000, individual sponsorship forms are available but the easiest method may be to donate online at www.justgiving.com/5islandchallenge or cheques can be sent to Headway (Jersey) Limited, Le Coie, Springfield Road, St. Saviour, Jersey C.I., JE2 7DN

The Cost of Cohabitation

words | Rose Colley Partner, Viberts Jersey Lawyers

There is a popular myth that people who cohabit without getting married eventually acquire the same legal rights as married couples.

The media choose to use the term 'common-law wife' or 'common-law husband', but strictly speaking this is better expressed as 'cohabitants'. Many couples choose to cohabit as a precursor to marriage, or wholly in its place.

Cohabiting couples that separate have very different legal rights to married couples that divorce. The legal system does not recognise cohabiting and provides the same rights as if the couple were unrelated individuals, despite the length of relationship, joint financial contributions or any parental responsibility.

One area that can cause concern when a couple separates is what provision can be made for their children? Recent cases indicate the sum of money awarded when making financial provisions for children of unmarried couples is increasing.

The court is guided by the means of both parties and the standard of living that the child would have enjoyed if cared for by both parents, the paramount concern is always the child's welfare not just the financial capability of the parent. The court will not only make decisions on child maintenance, but also other financial measures such as carer's allowance, lump sum payments, school fees, and the provision of accommodation whilst they are in education.

A cohabiting couple may also be concerned about their property. Cohabitation agreements can help add a sense of certainty to questions surrounding property rights. Jersey has an added layer of complexity with housing qualifications being an issue. If one party does not hold the relevant housing qualification they are not permitted joint ownership of the residence, nor can they take it over once the relationship ends. A cohabitation agreement can help an unmarried couple divide the share of the financial investment made in a property. Furthermore, each party's contribution to day-to-day expenses such as household bills, but also larger housing decisions such as renovations can also be considered.

Cohabitation is an economically productive way to combine two incomes and can be seen as a step toward marriage or a life long commitment. However it does not provide the same legal protection as marriage, therefore when property is purchased or sold, when a relationship ends, or when a child's needs must be considered, it is essential that legal advice be sought.

GET KARTED AWAY

As part of its 25th anniversary charity fundraising campaign, Jersey law firm Sinels has teamed up with the Living Legend to offer prizes to the person with the best score on the Living Legend's 'Adventure Golf' course and the fastest time on their Jersev Karting track.

Those attempting the Adventure Golf and Karting Challenge have from this week until 10th September to prove their golfing and karting prowess, with winners being announced shortly afterwards. The prize for winning each competition will be a Kindle Touch with built-in Wi-Fi.

Each participant will pay £1 to enter the challenge, above the normal Living Legend fee, which will be donated towards Sinel's 25th anniversary charity fundraising campaign

ONE'S TRASH IS ANOTHER'S TREASURE

You'll be needing these... derren hands rhain the keys to their new beast as gerald looks on

JT has extended its community support and joined together to support Durrell by donating a Suzuki Supercarry van which will be used by Durrell's staff at the 32 acre Wildlife Park in Trinity.

Derren Le Breton-Glover Head of JT's Property Portfolio Office, said: "We are delighted to see one of our ex-fleet vehicles, which is still in excellent condition, being put to good use by the team at Durrell. We replace our works vehicles every few years and where we would usually sell them on, we saw a perfect opportunity to pass this one on to a well deserving new owner and continue to strengthen our great relationship with Durrell. We're very much looking forward to seeing it travelling around the parishes."

The vehicle was valeted by Martin Fernando and rebranded by the Sign Shop with Durrell's logo free of charge simply for this moderate editorial promotion of their excellence.

YOU GOT YOUR GROOVE ON AND RAISED £15.000

Yes, a rainbow. next year they're organising a double one

The 1st ever Groove de Lecq festival in aid of Headway was staged at Le Moulin de Lecq on Saturday 4th August. Groove was set up by a group of volunteers with the support of local business' to raise funds for the charity. Sponsors which included Sure, IQ applestore, Beau Construction, Harsco and Totem Plastics and many hours of volunteer time ensured that over £15,000 was raised by the community to benefit Headway Jersey.

Groove de Lecq proved to be a fantastic family event with play area, expression wall, fancy dress, face painter, games and home made cakes. A stage for live music was set up in the Valley field which was filled with bright props and the sounds of the very best local music. Performances from over 25 local bands, musicians and DJ's kept everyone in high spirits despite the occasional shower and when the sun shone through a full rainbow filled the sky.

Beth from Headway Jersey said " We are so grateful to all those who made Groove de Lecq possible, the atmosphere was fantastic and raised much needed funds which will go to support people locally who are affected by brain injury. It has been a difficult year to raise funds and this alternative family event showed what a community can achieve coming together to support a fun event"

A GOOD HAIR DAY FOR A GOOD CAUSE

Great hair ladies, great hair. You too Justyn

Earlier in the year the teams from Le Salon, Aruba Salon, Matisse, Planet Hair, One 2 One, Bonitas and RIO got together to raise a total of £4,550 for Macmillan Cancer Support Jersey in just one day!

With Pimms on arrival, 70 clients went to the salon to enjoy either a cut and blow dry or have their nails done in return for a minimum donation to the charity. Justyn Thomas from Le Salon saw 14 clients, including 3 young ladies who were shortly to begin cancer treatment and had come in to have their long hair cut short in preparation. He said; "I have often faced this with clients and at first I did not deal with the situation that well, especially when I have known a client for such a long time. Macmillan helped me by providing guidance and support as it does for relatives and those people close to those suffering from or being treated for cancer. Like myself and other hairdressers or beauty therapists, working closely with their clients this has been a great help and we are better informed to support our clients during this time."

WE'RE GOING ON A BEAR HUNT

WORDS | DEE CUNNINGHAM

This is the story of a big black bear that lived on a big, big mountain, in a land far, far away. It lived with more than 50 of its bear friends and lots of sporty humans on bikes and skis and snowboards. Yes, this is the story of a fairy-tale trip to Canada's Whistler Mountain: bear country. Grrrr.

I'm not starting with the bears though. No. I'll start urban, exhausted and hot beyond belief. I can smell my flip-flops melting in the sun and my hair singeing and I'm trying to decide whether or not to have wasabi mayonnaise on my hot dog.

I am in a sizzling Vancouver, near the Art Gallery, on a street food cart tour with The Tour Guys. We are slurping lychee basil lemonade and I'm scoffing a Japadog complete with seaweed, teriyaki sauce and, after some thought, the aforementioned mayonnaise. My mouth ignites. I have never felt so hot, inside and out, and never tasted anything quite so delicious.

My two year old is also happily munching street food and singing 'Aquabus, Aquabus', his new preferred mode of transport. I feel like we've been picked up by angels and transported to the land of delicious-hot.

It wasn't angels that got us to t'other side of the Altantic, but a hop on Blue Islands and a skip and a jump on the splendidly economic Canadian Affair. Its heavenly staff smiled and cooed at the monkey/toddler when he barged into them for the twentieth time on the eight-hour flight, while I wondered if I would survive the trip sane.

This was a late Summer/Autumn impulse trip, with very limited preparation time. As the toddler is obsessed by vehicles, I researched transport options thoroughly. But wasn't quite so thorough with the small detail of where we would stay.

Not to worry, on arrival and a few recommendations from locals later, we were happily installed, with a room to ourselves, at the International Youth Hostel. It's friendly, peaceful and budget-wise gave carte blanche to be extravagant for the rest of the trip. The main attraction though was the fact that we were practically sleeping on the sands of Jericho beach.

Here we had our first few invigorating breaths of Pacific Ocean air and first glimpse of Vancouver's maritime beauty and style. In the morning the view shimmers blue and wide against a backdrop of mountains, and features paddle-boarders, kayakers and the odd passing sail and tanker. In the evening the view still shimmers but you can't see so much through the throngs of tanned beauties playing beach volleyball, and the overriding scent is of the many, many beach barbeques being gobbled after work.

Sunset beach downtown was buzzing the whole time we were there. With music festivals and then with the Pride celebrations, a parade of colour, leather, sequins, studs and chocolate wrestling as far as the eye could see.

Stanley Park is a different sort of space, green and peaceful, and home to the Spirit Catcher miniature steam train. This is Terry's train Vancouver style; you chuff through the forest pursued by people dressed up as frogs, eagles, bears, princesses and the sasquatch, keeper of the forest in the First Nation legends and basically a Yeti with an environmental conscience. Be warned, it is illegal to kill a sasqwatch in British Colombia Awesome, as they say.

We just had time to catch a glimpse of Stanley Park's towering totem poles and face off a beluga whale at the aquarium, before going to catch a little rainbow painted Aquabus across the Burrard inlet, to Granville Island's huge and funky food market for dinner. Mouth watering cakes, arancini, saturn peaches, strawberry nougat, wild salmon any way you want it, peppery baked sweetcorn and maple waffles... Mmmm.

The train to the valley of dreams

Vancouver is incredible, hard to stop because it's so much fun. But leaving it was pretty cool too. On the trail of the bears we climbed aboard a Rocky Mountaineer train early in the morning and sped north out of the City on the Sea to Sky Climb. A little black bear cub scampered cheekily just next to the track. The train is a stunningly beautiful way to reach the mountains. The surroundings flood in on top of you in the glass-domed carriage. Blue sky above, blue sea below, it feels at times as though you are plunging through the ocean.

We chugged around the shores of Howe sound, hugging the rock face, past sunken ships and waters known to house giant octopuses, beside waterfalls gushing down from the glaciers, and climbed steadily to the Cheakamus canyon and its swirling river. The snow-capped peaks of the Tantalus mountain range came into view, Mount Tantalus being the highest and named because it's such a tantalizing sight for travellers.

The two year old was ecstatic, and remained in human rather than monkey form for the entire journey. Transfixed at the window, he turned only to joyfully shout 'TRAIN' or 'BABY BEAR' or to accept drinks and his breakfast pancakes off the ever-attentive staff. People, and to his delight a dog, came out and waved as the train went by.

If you had arrived in Whistler a hundred years ago, you wouldn't have used the train and you wouldn't have been served blueberry pancakes or yoghurt parfait. The first people to plant their feet, and dreams of starting a resort, in this area came in 1911 and walked with a packhorse for two days. Myrtle and Alex Philip built a fishing lodge, which became a popular destination.

was seeded half a century earlier. In the village, the Olympic plaza now hosts outdoor concerts and tourists can have a go at bobsled or skeleton at the Whistler Sliding Centre. Yikes. If you do, you have to visit the loo beforehand because of gravitational pressure on the bladder.

Bear country

There are about ten thousand permanent residents here and at least that number of transient young people working in the resort (most that I met dream of catching a Canadian to marry so they can stay).

I did though manage to find the one person in Whistler who harbours dreams of moving to Jersey. Karen, a mortgage broker and her fireman husband regularly scour the States of Jersey website for jobs and visit every year to see family. On quizzing, she knew all the names of the parishes. Karen loves bears though. She plays baseball every Thursday at some playing fields just outside the village and usually the audience includes several large black bears. So for Karen, Whistler is Jersey but with bears.

Human-bear co-existence is crucial given that there are about two million visitors to Whistler annually. In late August, we saw a whole load of Darth Vader style armoured mountain bike riders descend on the mountain for downhill and slope style acrobatics at the Crankworx festival. Road biking has also taken off around Whistler, culminating in the GranFondo, an annual ride from Vancouver up the Sea to Sky highway. And just after the Darth Vaders left, an army of yoga enthusiasts arrived for the Wanderlust festival.

But despite all the energetic bending and biking, not being up for anything too

Before heading up into the trees, we all had to sign a waiver saying we wouldn't sue if we happened upon a tetchy bear or (eek) a cougar. Our guide Chelsea reassured us it's never happened. I did overhear that a bear devoured someone's lunch on the golf course while we were there though.

strenuous is ok too. Monkey-boy in back carrier, I signed up for a walk into the enchanted, green world of the ancient rainforest, on a tree top tour along wobbly walkways suspended in the forest canopy, with Ziptrek Ecotours.

Before heading up into the trees, we all had to sign a waiver saying we wouldn't sue if we happened upon a tetchy bear or (eek) a cougar. Our guide Chelsea reassured us it's never happened. I did overhear that a bear devoured someone's lunch on the golf course while we were there though.

Happily, the most we saw of any wildlife during our wander among the cedars, hemlocks and firs, was the work of a woodpecker and occasionally a human on a zipwire shooting through the forest canopy or over the greeny waters of the glacier fed creek thrashing around, about 50 metres below.

The next day we got an eagle eye view of the same forest from the jewel in Whistler Blackcomb's crown, the PEAK 2 PEAK gondola between the two mountain tops.

Those massive trees shrank to shrubs, broccoli and then to velcro more than 400 metres below our feet. I could hardly look. We soared between the peaks in a glass bottomed cable-car and then went up even further on the 7th Heaven Express ski lift to the very top of Blackcomb, 2284 metres above sea level. It's the site of the Horstman glacier which was busy with skiers and snowboarders. We also spotted a deer and a hoary marmot, an extremely cute giant squirrel, the animal that gave Whistler its name because it whistles.

The bears are a constant presence. Even if you're not bumping into them or having your golf clubs used as toothpicks by them, every bin is a clanging bear-proof affair. There's a special bear-human conflict hotline, 604-905-BEAR. Whistler has won several high profile environmental awards and takes this seriously. The Get Bear Smart Society has posters and info-boards throughout the resort reminding you that this is bear country and with advice on what to do if you meet one.

Another side to Whistler can be found out of the village, walking and biking in the forests, made easily accessible by the network of valley trails around the deep blue lakes. Lost lake, Alta Lake, Nita Lake and, my favourite, Alpha Lake. Swimming in crystal clear water, surrounded by mountains and trees, oh and sunbathers, canoeists, kayakers, paddle-boarders, wind surfers, boats...

Among the cool, light paddled trees is where the bears can be spotted munching on berries. As long as there are enough berries to be had, otherwise hungry bears often go in search of peoplefood. Bears can break into cars and homes, if they're attracted by carelessly placed garbage. If that happens, it can lead to a bear being relocated or even destroyed. Although Fat Tony's Pizza made the most of a bear break in last year with the slogan 'even the local bears love our pizza'.

The bears in Whistler all have names: There's Marisa, who's the oldest at about 20; Michelle; Olivia; Brownie; and Slumber, the Alpha male. Slumber apparently has a war wound above his left eye from fighting other males. I haven't seen Slumber myself yet. Er did I mention we're still here? I'm coming back sometime soon, honest. Gotta go now, we've got a train to wave at and some bear spotting to do.

omputers weren't quite up to the task of making magazines, so the Gallery galley slaves would have been hard at work laying out interviews with Mr and Mrs Battle (Jason Donovan & Maria Whittaker) with the aid of glue and scissors. Any models who needed airbrushing would need an actual airbrush, not to mention enough hairspray to burn a hole in the ozone layer.

We'd also be pursuing an 80s party line of relentless positivity about Jersey and its attractions, weather and people. As the extract below will make very clear, no writer would be brave enough to cross the absolute power wielded by Humphrey the Lion and the cabaret cartel - Jersey propaganda was so strong that there are still people living in St John who think that a holiday in Majorca can give you rabies.

A warm welcome to sunny Jersey: Island of Bergerac, jewel of the English Channel. There's something for everyone here - the kids can build sandcastles on our golden beaches whilst mum snoozes, Gran shops for sterling jewellery and dad has a pint of best and a game of darts in one of the traditional pubs that are just around every corner.

Jersey is peaceful and relaxing, but if you want thrilling entertainment we've got it covered. You'll think you've stepped onto a classy cruise liner when you visit one of our sophisticated wine bars or many cabaret clubs, and if the entertainment gets a little 'naughty' there's always bingo for the ladies! Best of all, the speed limit's so low here that gentlemen are fine to drive home after a few drinks.

Attractions and amenities

There's so much to do in Jersey that you'll be lucky to fit it all in one trip - maybe that's why people always come back! Why not start at Fort Regent, where kids can run wild on the ghost train, dodgems and pirate boat of our amazing funfair whilst mum and dad take a well-earned break with a glass of sherry in the Piazza tavern or the High Dive Bar. There's American-style burgers to eat, thrilling mini-golf, jungle gym with a pirate skull and a pumping Rollerdisco on Friday nights. You'll hear the latest hits from New Kids On The Block, Fine Young Cannibals, Duran Duran and T'Pau, and there's even a raffle!

No trip to Jersey is complete without a visit to the Fantastic Tropical Gardens, where you can marvel at the sights and sounds of far-away Mexico, Thailand and Africa - courtesy of a few donkeys, some guys from Lisbon and a lot of makeup. You'll realise there was no need to holiday 'abroad' - because Jersey has the best of both worlds!

Kids of all ages can play the latest games like Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Operation Wolf and WWF Wrestlemania at our amazing arcades - Funland in town and Belle Vue Pleasure Park out west. Dad might even win a fortune on the one-armed bandit! We've got go-karts, banana boats and pedalos galore, and pool inflatable madness at Pluto's Playtime every Saturday.

Here's a small selection of what? on this summer:

* Leah Bell and Johnny De Little Present Las Vegas Style cabaret at Fort Regent. Buffet dinner £6 extra. Support from Stevie Ocean and Bobo the Clown.

* Cannon & Ball, The Krankies and Russ Abbott in residency at Caesar's Palace. (Dinner jackets only, no perms)
* The Black And White Minstrel Show, back by popular demand at Les Arches niteclub. Free pina colada for the ladies, followed by a haircut competition judged by sports legends Jocky Wilson and Ian Botham

* TV's John Nettles (Bergerac) will be guest of honour at a school fete every Saturday (weather permitting) * Hackey sack, Nerf ball and breakdancing at Inn On The

Park, followed by DJs Warren, Biko, Warren and Warren

s you read this the summer is on the downward spiral into Autumn, "Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness" as Keats would have it, so Gallery caught up with Jerseyski.com who have structured something for you something to look forward to as the days get shorter and we start the countdown to the Festive Season

Lots of skiers who ski once or twice a year find that it takes the first couple of days of their annual ski holiday to get back to the standard they were at last season, which is frustrating, to say the least! Perhaps the answer is to get some skiing in beforehand or maybe get some ski skills training to get off the "plateau" and on to the next level. So we thought we would rip up the rulebook which says most people go skiing from January through until March, and look at some pre season, (and pre-Christmas) ski alternatives.

We have a choice of 3 very different ski breaks this November and December, but they all have one thing in common, they are on Alpine glaciers which hold their snow nearly all year round!

WEEKEND BREAK

Our first trip is to Austria, flying via Gatwick to Salzburg with British Airways, for the annual "White Start" weekend on the Kitzsteinhorn Glacier in Kaprun from the 9th-12th November. Kaprun is a village that falls in the area of Zell Am Zee, and sits on the wide valley floor on the opposite side of the valley to Lake Zeller and the town of Zell Am Zee, in the Hohe Tauern National Park. Kaprun sits at the base of the Kitzsteinhorn, the only glacier in the province of Salzburg, which rises to a height of over 3,000 metres. Its height guarantees '100% Snow Certainty', which means that it can be skied as early as September and as late as May (9 months of the year).

We covered this resort in a feature in our February issue. The weekend is traditionally the start of the winter season for the locals, with the opportunity of testing the new season's skis from all the manufacturers for free, snow dances in the village, and a friendly relaxed atmosphere.

PRE CHRISTMAS TREAT!

Leave Jersey at 07.00 - arrive in Innsbruck at 11.50, be on the slopes by 13.30, I did it, so can you!

This trip is from Sunday 9th- Wednesday 12th December, for 3 nights and 2 1/2 days skiing, which includes flights from Jersey to Innsbruck via Gatwick with British Airways, with baggage routed through, transfers to the resort, half board hotel accommodation and lift passes. The destination for this offer is the Stubai valley which has four ski areas, all of which are covered on your ski pass. You can ski on Sunday afternoon at Schlick 2000 in Fulpmes, Monday and Tuesday can be spent on the Stubai Glacier, further up the valley. On the Wednesday morning you can either ski again or visit the Christmas Markets in Innsbruck, 20 minutes away, before your return flight departs at 13.20. This trip is suitable for skiers and snow boarders of all levels, even beginners!

ONE WEEK SKILLS COURSE

Determined to improve? We have a ski skills training week with the Warren Smith Ski Academy in Saas-Fee, Switzerland, flying direct to Zurich with Blue Islands, and Swiss Railways transfer from the Airport. Skis are carried free on Blue Islands, and complimentary champagne is served on the flight! Summer skiing takes place on the Allalin Glacier, which rises to a height of 4,027 metres. There's a choice of 2 weeks for this course, either 11th-18th November, or the week after, 18th-25th November.

Warren is one of Britain's leading professional freeskiers and an Internationally Certified Performance Coach and Ski Instructor. He has spent many years teaching recreational skiers, developing ski instructors and coaching racers all over Europe. The Warren Smith Ski Academy pro Improvement on this scale is deeply infectious, my advice is book now or be left behind in the doldrums of "old school" skiing!"

These courses are intended for low intermediate skiers and above who want to get better, but won't suit plodders or the faint hearted!

HEADING OUT

following her arcticle last month, Eleanor Lister updates us on her plans as she heads back out to the Steve Irwin and sets sail for the South Pacific...

n just a little over the week, I'll be back on the Steve Irwin. I'll be back with Sea Shepherd Conservation Society. Back to my friends and fellow crew members. Back to saving whales!

In the last month's issue of Gallery, I was telling you guys about the Faroe Islands and Antarctic whale defense campaigns I had been a part of, and a brief history of Sea Shepherd. I've been back home for a couple of months now, spending precious time with family and friends, enjoying and reminding myself of the beauty of Jersey, and in a little over a week I'll be on my way back to the Sea Shepherd ship, the Steve Irwin.

When I jumped off the Steve Irwin at the end of April, it was docked in Australia after this last Antarctic campaign: an anti-whaling campaign against the Japanese whaling fleet. I left Australia and headed home after being onboard for almost a year, to earn some money and see my family. Before I left the ship, myself and the rest of the crew had been busy with tours of the ship to the public, raising awareness about marine wildlife and their importance, fundraising, doing maintenance and generally fixing up the ship, in preparation for this next whale defence campaign that will be starting towards the end of the year.

I'll be leaving Jersey next week, and heading back to the Steve Irwin in Australia. My stomach is filled with knots (sailors knots?) knowing that I'll be away from home and family and friends for so long again, but so very excited knowing that I'm going back to doing exactly what I love best – being a volunteer crew member for Sea Shepherd.

The Steve Irwin is currently in Sydney and meeting up with our other ship, the Bob Barker and together the crews of both ships will be focusing on fundraising for campaign, I'll be meeting the Steve Irwin and her crew down in Melbourne. In only a few more months Sea Shepherd will be taking its 4 ships, the Steve Irwin, the Bob Barker, the Brigitte Bardot and the Sam Simon, down to the southern ocean whale sanctuary to oppose the Japanese whaling fleet for the 9th year in a row. Every year Japanese whalers return to the Antarctic Ocean Whale Sanctuary with strong hopes to kill a quota of over 1,000 whales. The primary whales focused on include Humpback, Minke and Fin whales, all of which are nearing extinction.

There has been a international ban on commercial whaling since 1982, but Japan continue to whale using a loophole in "medical research" There has never been any published data on any alleged research and Japan continue to make a profit from it. Needless to say, Sea Shepherd strongly opposes it. And so do I.

Sea Shepherd, with a crew of over 120 dedicated and passionate volunteers, 4 ships, a helicopter and a our small boats, there's no doubt that we'll be doing everything in our power to stop the whalers from once again, slaughtering these amazing cetaceans that are not only beautiful and intelligent, but also extremely important to the world's eco-system. I absolutely can't wait to take you all along on campaign with us! To bring you along and show you what we as Sea Shepherds do and what we hope to achieve.

Did you know, we have a Sea Shepherd Channel Islands chapter? (It's true!) I've been doing Sea Shepherd related activates right here in my home island with an amazing group of people – right here in Jersey – Sea Shepherd onshore volunteers that dedicate a bit of their time every week to meet up and help keep Jersey's beautiful beaches clean, raising awareness and importance of keeping our oceans rubbish free and spreading the word about Sea Shepherd.

Carrying rubbish bags around Jersey's shores, collecting crisp packets and bottles and fishing lines and other bizarre items that we've happened across and everything else that not only makes our lovely beaches messy, but also cause havoc with marine life.

Together, we've been spreading awareness throughout the island and doing beach cleanups weekly. If you're interested in getting involved as a Sea Shepherd onshore volunteer here in Jersey, pop an e-mail along to this address: channelislands@seashepherd.org

Head over to my blog if you're interested in reading my article from last month's Gallery: www.EleanorMarie.wordpress.com

I look forward to writing again next month while onboard the Steve Irwin, meeting the ship and her devoted crew, our preparation for campaign, and following us every step of the way.

CHANNEL ISLAND CULTURE FESTIVAL

he Channel Islands annual culture festival is back once again ready to offer a range of goods and services to tempt all your senses. This year it will be situated at the prime location of the royal Yacht hotel so those of you stuck at work in St. Helier can come and experience whats on offer in your lunch break. A marquee will also set be up in weighbridge place where entry will be free to the general public.

The event will commence on Tuesday 18th September opened by the constable of St. Helier Mr Simon Crowcroft. As usual there will be a fantastic range of Jewellery from semi-precious stones to handmade items and organic gems and eco jewellery. The food line up consists of Vitamix blenders, perfect pans, cheeses, sweets and many more!

To keep you on your toes there will also be some new comers to the 2012 festival including leathercraft, early American furniture with more to be announced. If that wasn't enough for 2012 the festival is introducing 'healthy living' with therapists from both the UK & Jersey in the lazy Jacks lounge at the Royal Yacht so come and be pampered!

Last but by no means least local exhibitors will also be attending including Sheila Baudains photography, Steve Davies pencil drawings, the loving chair company with more to follow.

On Sunday 23rd September the motorcycle rally will also be joining the festival starting and finishing at weighbridge place. For the motorcyle enthusiasts there will also be static displays and motorcycle safety displays.

Admission is £3 for adults and £2 for seniors and students with children 13 and under free and advanced booking discount gaining you £1 off. Tickets are available from the lottery kiosk in king street 12pm - 3pm monday to Saturday, 8th - 22nd September. A 6 day ticket for £5 is also available where visitors can come in whenever during the festival.

OH

SWINGIN' IN THE SKY

To coincide with the Jersey International Air Display, the Glenn Miller Orchestra is once again flying into town. Reliving the spirit of the 1940s, this night of Big Band memories pays tribute to the late greats, Ted Heath, Louis Armstrong, Sinatra and, of course, Miller. Performing in US Army Air Force Uniforms, the 16 piece orchestra and two vocalists will take you on a nostalgic flight to times past.

GLENN MILLER ORCHESTRA THURS 13th & FRIDAY 14th AUGUST 8pm Tickets: £18-£27, Concessions: £2 Off

SOLO IN THE STUDIO While the Glenn Miller

Orchestra is hitting sky-high notes in the auditorium, Spitfire Solo will be giving a high-performance in the JOH studio. It's the first professional small-scale show to take place in the new space and Nicholas Collett, writer and star of this one-man play, will delight with this intimate, amusing and inventive piece of theatre. He plays ex-Battle of Britain Pilot, Peter Walker, who is fighting for survival for the second time around, this time from the comfort of the Silver Birches Retirement Home.

SPITFIRE SOLO THURS 13th & FRIDAY 14th AUGUST 8pm Tickets: £12, Concessions: £2 Off

ART DISPLAY

Keeping with the flying theme, the latest gallery exhibition at OH! Cafébar is dedicated to past air displays. Local photographer Ian Le Sueur is September's exhibitor with his aeronautical shots to complement the Jersey International Air Display. Exhibitions are in situ for one month. The gallery space at OH! Cafébar has become as popular as the food with local artists booked in until the end of January. Email marketing@jerseyoperahouse.co.uk

LAUREN RADLEY EXHIBITION

Lauren is a freelance illustrator and studied illustration and animation at Kingston University. She's been living and working in London since graduating and just moved over to Jersey a few months ago. She works for an illustration agency called YCN, and has recently done work for Coffee Republic and Ted Baker, amongst others. We didn't speak her in time to get an of her editorial work, and am about to have my first in Jersey! I which I guess could best be described as quite graphicy, colourful and playful. All my images are drawn by hand, and then the final image is created using photoshop and illustrator. I also have a little business designing wedding invitations, stationary, table decorations etc. If you could mention that Im available for commissions (including wedding invite design!), and that people are welcome to get in touch if they like my work (lauren.c.radley@gmail. com), then that would be great!

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE FESTIVAL

ersey Arts Centre is set to play host to The People's Choice Festival for a second year. This year sees an array of comedy, theatre, film and music chosen by YOU, the people of Jersey.

The Oxford Imps kick off with their improvised comedy sketch, followed by THE BEDLAM SIX on 3rd September. Since forming in late 2006, Louis Barabbas and The Bedlam Six, promoting their peculiar brand of Lyric-Driven Dirt-Swing[™], have infiltrated almost every creative niche, being adapted into animated short films, burlesque routines, motion picture scores and even a comic strip. They have recently travelled to Europe, USA and Mexico, presenting their infamous live shows that incorporate rock, jazz, folk and theatre.

The Mighty Boosh, Supergrass and BBC Radio are amongst their growing fanbase.

Next up is SECKON KEITA on 4th September, one of the leaders of the newest generation of African traditional musicians, Seckou Keita, from Senegal, fuses traditional forms and instruments with those of other cultures. Seckou learned the kora in the bosom of his family but he also developed a remarkable flair for drumming and percussion early in life. He started to perform at the age of seven with his uncle, Solo Cissokho, and by 12 years old he had his own band.

Midweek laughter is set for Wednesday 5th September as KEITH FARNAN'S MONEY, MONEY, MONEY takes to the stage. Having appeared on BBC's Michael McIntyre's Comedy Roadshow, Keith Farnan has rapidly established himself as one of comedy's most thoughtprovoking stand-ups and Money Money Money proves to be no exception. The show takes a long hard look at our obsession with money, especially Ireland's brief love affair with vast amounts of money and fiscal meltdowns. He also has some of his own cunning repay the €85,000,000,000 that Ireland owes Europe... Thursday 6th September leads into a more solemn affair, the film, DREAMS OF A LIFE is the poignant story of Joyce Vincent, who died in her bedsit above a shopping mall in North London in 2003. Her body was discovered three years later, surrounded by Christmas

ideas as to how the country plans to presents she had been wrapping, and with the TV still on. Newspaper reports offered few details of her life – not even a photograph. It took writer/director Carol Morley five years to piece together what journalists, politicians and police could not – the circumstances that led this apparently vivacious, beautiful woman to die alone, unmourned.

The People's Choice Festival culminates with a multi-sensory theatrical adaptation of Jean Giono's environmental classic, THE MAN WHO PLANTED TREES the inspiring story of a shepherd who plants a forest, acorn by acorn, transforming a barren wasteland. It is as much a touching tale as it is a hilarious puppet show, showing us the difference one man (and his dog!) can make to the world. Suitable for 7 years+. There will be a post-show discussion with Puppet State Theatre after.

Ticket prices vary for each event, go to www.artscentre.je or call The Jersey Arts Centre box office on 700444

he Bedell Creative Arts Programme is currently inviting musicians to send their original music of any genre for consideration to be developed with professional guidance before being showcased at a concert in September 2013 at Jersey Opera House.

Whether you consider yourself a classical composer, part-time songwriter, or if you create electronic music - as long as it's original and it's yours we want to hear it. Once all applications have been submitted, six local musicians will be selected to take part in our mentoring programme to build towards a showcase concert in September 2013 which will feature the music of the chosen artists. The work will be selected by our expert tutors who will judge on the compositional merit of the work, rather than the performance or production quality of the submission.

APPLICATION FORMS CAN BE DOWNLOADED AT: WWW.ARTS.JE To enter, simply send your music (audio recording and/or written/ notated score) along with your completed application form to: Jersey Arts Trust, St. James, St. James Street, St. Helier, JE2 3QZ or by emailing Russell Abraham: russell@arts.je

THE BEDELL CREATIVE ARTS PROGRAMME -SEND US YOUR MUSIC!

THE DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSIONS IS MONDAY 1ST OCTOBER 2012

The Bedell Creative Arts Programme is an exciting new initiative, seeking out undiscovered artistic talent in Jersey. Over the next year the Programme will be searching for local songwriters, musicians, dancers, designers and multi-media artists to develop original work and have the chance for it to be showcased in a unique concert at the Jersey Opera House. Leading industry professionals will be on hand to nurture and guide these artists to develop their own craft and collaborate with others to create dynamic new work. This opportunity is open to all, regardless of previous experience or formal training, and the Programme aims to reach the furthest corners of the community to encourage anyone with an interest in making new work to come forward.

ENTRY ONE CLAIRE RONDEL JUDGES' COMMENTS

This is beautifull made. It's interesting that the whole magazine thickness is used and fanning and culrling on multiple layers makes them stand out. Whilst there is another sophisticated dress in the shortlist, this entry is great fun. You'd have to be strong to wear it though; to hold a dress made of such a quality magazine... (thanks Pat. Ed.)

THE INAGURAL GALLERY PAPIER MASHUP: RESULTS

aper was invented in China - where else - in around 105 AD made from rags, used fishing nets, hemp and China grass. It replaced the problem of all writing being done on pure silk which along with the developments in writing materials and the growth of literature a cheaper and more practical material was necessitated.

With paper now available to the masses it made its way to Japan with paper folding and the art of origami now a recreational and ceremonial activity. This art has developed and modernized, crossing the Atlantic with artists developing the fine art of origami to create intricate modern paper art. For examples see Peter Callesen with his delicate plain paper sculptures and also Chris Natrop's draped installations.

History lesson over. The modern issue is how we can restrict the amount of paper, now of course made from trees, in order the help sustain our environment and cut green house gases and so on.

Recycling may seem like a modern concept. However, this is not the case as recycling became necessary during the war due to the financial and material shortage restraints. In the 40's and 50's recycling efforts were largely forgotten due to the cheap and easy disposition of rubbish via landfill, yet now again we see the resurgence of a recycling culture leading to the question does it just appear in times of hardship and financial trouble? With the fashion of recycling has come the fashion of upcycling especially furniture with companies dedicated to finding disposed furniture, giving it a vintage overhaul and selling it on with a very gross profit margin.

Not only is there the 'popularity' of recycling as a society but also vintage culture. The term vintage actually means original and the term retro defines a new design that is based on a vintage style. In this context it is easy to argue that we are living in a retro rather than the overused 'vintage culture. It is however, due to the overwhelming popularity, easier than ever to purchase vintage pieces. Urban Outfitters 'UO renewal' allows customers to purchase vintage, recycled or re-made clothes online and in store and of course people have taken to ebay and etsy to sell on their vintage and or upcycled products. For inspiration you just have to look to the rapid emergence of instagram and pinterest where people are sharing their obsession for all things vintage. Or is it retro?

Whatever the correct terminology we cannot resist looking back to the old a fresh relief from our fast paced pop culture and a distraction from the hard work that is modern life. With all that in mind and in the spirit of recycling and 'retro' culture gallery set a competition; the use old magazines to create something new. We put up a £500 kitty for a winner and let people come to our warehouse and collect the old magazines we've got back from hotels for the last year.

Over the next few pages you'll see our entrants and winner of our £500 prize. Hopefull you'll enjoy the innovation and ideas as much as we have. We'll be doing the competition again next year and opening it up to schools too. If you'd like to enter email mashup@gallery.je

OURJUDGE

Those in the art work of Jersey will be familiar with this year's judge. As codirector of the Harbour Gallery and the Art in the Frame foundation, Pat Robson has a wide range of intersest in all forms of art and craft. Have a slight bias toward textiles, Pat has seen ten years of Jersey art adorn the walls of the Harbour Gallery in St Aubin so we thought it fitting that she cast the vote on this years's Papier Mashup. She is always on the look out for a clever and inventive use of materials combined with a good use of line, colour and design. Characteristics she tells us all our entrants this year have shown.

Her comments can be seen with each piece. Thank you Pat!

Not only is there the 'popularity' of recycling as a society but also vintage culture. The term vintage actually means original and the term retro defines a new design that is based on a vintage style

ENTRY TWO JUDGES' COMMENTS

This entry makes good use of folding, Taking the hexagon as a base and producing in many different forms. Some elements of the design are sadly not paper however. It looks like a futuristic theme park design when viewed as it it were to be buildings. Has a lot of similarity in techniche to that of a quiltmaker.

ME

This entry is totally different from the rest, a very attractive piece that offers up more each time you look at it. The patterns of the paper mache when viewed from above look excellent. The design carries a naivity to the nature of the art that makes it beautful. That is particularly relevant if the peice has been worked on by more than one person, as in this case.

< Yes, it's meticulous. That is a paper penguin reading a miniature gallery. Robert suffers from OCD (Obsessive Compulsive Disorder) and has been teaching origami to Headway members. Robert highlights that problems or dissabilities affect 5% of the population and these minorities deserve recognition. Each penguin is different, representing 4% of the overall 25 penguins. Both the penguins and the sailboat are pure origami models.

ENTRY FOUR JONATHAN VIDEGRAIN JUDGES' COMMENTS

This chandelier entry is very cleverley done; a lot of though has gone into it. The use of different parts, such as the lips from a particular page of gallery, as the flames is excellent. I could see it in a shop or as a permenant decoration. It has a playful Christmas feel too, aided by the hanging garlands. I commend it as it must have taken a great deal of preplanning.

ENTRY FIVE WINNER CHERYL NOBREGA

JUDGES' COMMENTS

A truly sophisticated design, allowing for very few mistakes in the making. The use of colour and selection of particular elements of colour from the magazine is exciting and quite brilliant. The pattern on the rear of the skirt fits together beautifully, really art deco is style, and the eyelets placed in the bodice are beautifully integrated. This design belongs in a gallery in London, perhaps an exhibition at the V&A. Translated into an outfit in fabric, it would be amazing but would perhaps also lose some of it's incredible raw paper charm. A worthly winner!

ow many times do you hear this statement in Jersey: 'There's just nufink to do...' Kids, tweens, teens and young adults across the island grumble and groan that our little rock has little to offer in terms of entertainment and things to do... 'Jersey's boring, there's nowhere to go, nothing to do... BLAH BLAH BLAH...' Hush!

Bite your tongues grumblers – Every Thursday there is a brimming melting pot of happenings thanks to Jersey Heritage and their team of ace sponsors and fabulous volunteers. For your aMUSEment, Jersey MUSE has been hosting an array of live talent, musical treats, photographic fabulousness, magical mystery bus rides to Heritage's stunning sites and more EVERY Thursday - Have you been along to MUSE yet?

If you have been (or actually, even if you haven't but have comments about MUSE), go to www.surveymonkey.com/s/ jerseymuse and complete the survey to be included in a prize draw to win an overnight stay in one of Jersey Heritage's incredible sites or two tickets to this year's Cider Festival. MUSE is super-interactive and this survey is one of the many ways Jersey Heritage is trying to ensure the best experience for MUSE-os.

The few MUSE events we've popped down to have been great, with photographic projections accompanied by live scores, art installations, music music music and of course the trip to Hougue Bie – all phenomenal.

GALLERY CAUGHT UP WITH DANIELLE MAS-TERSON, EVENT COORDINATOR FOR MUSE, TO FIND OUT WHAT'S BEEN GOING ON AND WHAT PEOPLE CAN EXPECT FROM MUSE...

1. GIVE US THE LOWDOWN ON MUSE, WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT?

MUSE is all about showcasing local talent and encouraging islanders to get involved in Jersey's cultural scene. MUSE is a programme of cultural events hosted by Jersey Heritage on Thursday nights for the after work and after school crew. We've got tonnes of live music, films, debates, art, workshops. Start your weekend a little bit early or just come along to chill out and take in some local culture.

2. WHAT HAVE BEEN THE HIGHLIGHTS SO FAR?

Highlights so far have to be whisking Muse attendees away on our mystery bus to destinations like Hamptonne and La Hougue Bie Chapel, the red carpet fashion show in the Merchant House Courtyard, and bringing so many local artists together for the 'From These Shores' exhibition.

3. FOR ANYONE WHO'S YET TO GO TO A MUSE EVENT, WHAT CAN PEOPLE EXPECT?

You don't need to be a total culture vulture or a raving film buff to come to Muse. Every event is a melting pot of local culture. At MUSE you can expect live music performances from Jersey's finest talents, screenings of classic and cult films, exhibitions of local art, design and photography, all washed down with drinks and nibbles at Jersey Heritage's most iconic sites.

4. TELL US MORE ABOUT THE SURVEY AND

MORE IMPORTANTLY, THE PRIZES?!

Whether you've been to MUSE already or not, you can take part in the survey. Just follow the link and tell us what you think. To say thank you for your feedback on our events, we will enter your name into a prize draw to WIN a stay in a Jersey Heritage Coastal Tower or two tickets to the Cider Festival. Cider or a staycation on us!

5. HOW CAN PEOPLE GET INVOLVED IN MUSE?

If you like the sound of MUSE come along to any Thursday night event and check it out. You can contact us on the MUSE facebook page or drop an email to info@jerseyheritage. org. Whether you've got an idea for an event, or if you'd just like to find out more, we'd love to hear from you.

So, basically MUSE is a great mixture of local, cultural talent... There is something for everyone and it's on EVERY Thursday... Think music, think art, think fashion, media, in fact, don't think, MUSE. The aim here is to encourage folk to take Jersey Heritage to their hearts, the idea is to give younger Jersey peeps an idea of how important Heritage is – put it this way, today's pop culture (including us at Gallery!) is tomorrow's Heritage. So, if you've yet to nip down to the Museum and Merchant House Brasserie after work on a Thursday do so, this week!

KEEP ABREAST OF THE HAPPENINGS ON JERSEY MUSE'S FACEBOOK PAGE AND DON'T MISS OUT WWW.FACEBOOK.COM/JERSEYMUSE

BRAND NEWS

WHAT IS NEW AND EXCITING THIS MONTH ...

IT'S SUCH A PERFECT DAY

Keld Mikkelsen is the founder and owner of Day Birger Et Mikkelsen and he is a man we admire. Fashion is deep in his DNA. From his involvement with the textile industry even before his 20's to a decade spent working in Asia. Keld was fascinated by the exceptional craftsmanship in Hong Kong and India. He decided to merge ancient embroidery, patterns, prints and trimmings with contemporary silhouettes and tailoring. Transporting these amazing crafts to Denmark, where his flagship store is.

Their latest collection, which is now in store at Nautilus, embodies all that wonderful unique heritage; with elegant Asia precise tailoring, mixed with an up-to-the-minute muted palette. There are several stunning pieces that have gone straight onto our wish lists including this perfectly prim laid back buttoned shirt which will see us through all the diverse scenarios life throws at you from cliff top walks to a chic dinner with friends. Thank you Mr Mikkelsen!

NEW BRAND ALERT!

We spied with our fashion-hungry little eyes a lovely new brand for the island in Eclectic in Liberty Wharf. Twisted Muse is the creation of veteran British designer Jules Copsey. Their new autumn/winter pieces are all ideal wardrobe staples with broken striped long sleeved vests and feminine draped oversized tees which you can just live in day-in-day-out.

Lots of items from the range have distinctive design features such as cool raw edges, asymmetric lines and digital printing. Creative Director at Twisted Muse Jules Copsey has said "The Twisted Muse brand offers a clear, concise collection that delivers an effortlessly cool look for fashion conscious consumers, while its competitive pricing structure means it's an affordable luxury brand." Make sure you check it out when you're next passing.

THE CHANGING STYLE OF SHOPPING!

Think how much fun shopping would be if your girlfriends could always be on hand to offer advice and you could enjoy a reviving cuppa or glass of wine whenever you liked, all from the comfort of your own home.

Shopping parties offer great retail therapy without any High Street hassle and they are growing in popularity here in Jersey.

Owner of By Beautiful Things, Kathryn Filleul has become the first consultant in Jersey to sell a range of gorgeous Danish clothes through Party Plan! The company is called Friendtex and offers quality women's clothes at affordable prices and can only be bought through a Friendtex Fashion Consultant.

With over 1,600 consultants in Europe, Friendtex has established a great reputation in the fashion industry over the past 25 years. Sizes range from 8-22 and any ordered items take a week to arrive.

Home shopping parties can be booked for any number of women and can be organised as fundraisers or charity events. All hostesses receive 10% of their party sales in clothes or jewellery. In addition to taking the clothes to women's houses Kathryn also takes along her own selection of handpicked accessories which she sources from a range of trade fairs. She commented "Spring/Summer was my first season with Friendtex and I have already got 16 confirmed bookings for parties in September and October.

Home shopping is a relatively new concept to the Channel Islands but one that is popular with a growing number of women. It gives mums the chance to get together and shop without distraction and professional women the chance to shop outside of normal working hours. It also provides a relaxed atmosphere for those who do not like the challenge of the High Street or who find online shopping difficult without the chance to try before they buy."

Friendtex are looking for more fashion consultants throughout the Channel Islands and UK.

BANG ON TREND

WHO TO ENVY, WHAT TO WEAR AND THE NEW SEASON ITEMS TO WISH FOR

TIMELESS VINTAGE TREND

When you think of pearls, they conjure up images of classic refined beauty and elegance. Throughout history women have had a lover affair with pearls, even Cleopatra wore them. However it is Ms. Coco Chanel who would probably get the accolade of pearls biggest fan, as she was never seen out without her signature pearls layered to perfection.

Pearls used to only be available to the super rich and in Breakfast at Tiffany's, Holly Golightly dons dainty strands of pearls in an effort to be in the crowd of high society. Fast forward to 2012 and with the excitement mounting for Baz Lurman's take on the famous Great Gatsby, set in 1920s America, there is about to be a huge boost for beautiful vintage style pearls.

VINTAGE JOY

ndrea Le Blancg is passionate about vintage clothing. For over 20 years she has been scouring high and low for gorgeous vintage finds to take home and treasure. Being a lover of all things vintage she clocked that this September issue of gallery was going to be dedicated to all things old and got in contact. We couldn't resist meeting someone enthusiastic so popped by her lovely home to find out more about the world of Vintage fashion and get some great tips and hints!

WHAT ATTRACTS YOU TO VINTAGE CLOTHING?

I've always liked times gone by I love TV shows like Charlie's Angels and The Monkees, the women all look so glamorous. I used to live in Colchester in Essex, it has a really big student population where everyone dresses a bit 'out there', so I guess being surrounded by all those people dressing uniquely rubbed off. It's also great knowing that when I buy vintage I know no one else will be turning up to the same party in the same dress!

WHO IS YOUR STYLE ICON?

Anita Pallenberg who is an italian-born actress, model and fashion designer. She was the partner of Rolling Stones Brian Jones, before moving on the Keith Richards of the same band! I like her care free thrown together look, but she is always elegant.

WHAT IS YOUR BEST BARGAIN?

A suede cape I got on American Ebay for £10. I love a good cape. Last Autumn I went on a bit of a cape crusade looking for the perfect one from all over the world.

WHAT ARE YOUR TOP THREE FAVOURITE VINTAGE FINDS?

1) My Mother in Law, Valerie Le Blancq, runs Vintage Joys of Jersey which is a pop-up vintage shop, and she found me an amazing brown Biba bag. Biba was a global fashion phenomenon in the 70s and it is so exciting to come across original pieces in good condition.

 This little faux fur jacket I got in a charity shop is gorgeous, I have quite a few like it! (pictured wearing)

3) I got this straw hat in Hospice the other day. I noticed in Vogue that brands like Chloe and YSL were doing similar versions; fashion

AMERICAN SUEDE CAPE AND BIBA HANDBAG

WHERE DO YOU GET YOUR VINTAGE CLOTHES?

As well as the vintage shops here I go to car boot sales; the one in St John is good, as are the ones on Gorey Common and up at Corbiere. Ebay is also great, especially American Ebay which has some brilliant sixties items in good condition. Also the Red Cross shop in town has a vintage section upstairs and The Hospice Shop out in St Ouens is full to the brim with vintage bits and pieces.

IS VINTAGE EASY TO WEAR?

Yes, I try not to go over board and wear it head to toe, because it can look like you are in fancy dress! However if you team items carefully with modern staples it can create a really beautiful individual look.

WHAT ARE YOUR TOP TIPS FOR VINTAGE SHOPPING?

Smell things! Sometimes you just can't get rid of a nasty odour. I'd also recommend checking armpit seams to see that the item is still in good nic and also scrutinise wools and cashmere for moth damage. Once you've got your new item home remember that they can be very old and so do need to be treated with a little more love and care. Another thing I would say is beware of sizes. Most items seem to come up very small, so don't be afraid to go bigger, you can always nip things in a bit. I'd recommend making friends with a great tailor!

WHAT IS YOUR FAVOURITE FASHION ERA AND WHY?

It has to be the sixties. So much was happening socially in music and film and that was reflected in the wild clothes which were such a far cry from the conservative fifties. However I do love the twenties too, fashion was all so restricted before then and the cool drop waisted flowing flapper dresses were wonderfully glamourous and decedent.

IS THERE A DREAM ITEM WHICH YOU ARE CURRENTLY HUNTING FOR?

An Ossie Clark vintage dress would make my life complete!

VINTAGE JOYS OF JERSEY WILL BE AT THE ST AUBINS VINTAGE FAIR IN SEPTEMBER OR YOU CAN CALL VALERIE LE BLANCQ TO HIRE ITEMS ON 482099.

Tom. 16, Student 'I just put it on'

Style Stalker: 'Although he may not know it, Tom has created a casual yet cool outfit. The mustard colour of the chinos can sometimes be hard to pull off, however Tom achieves it by keeping the other colours and textures simple, completing the outfit with just a flash of blue from his shoes.'

Hermione. 16, Student

'As the weather is still bright, I kept a summery look but jazzed it up with a cropped jacket and leopard print to keep my outfit bright'

Style Stalker: 'This look is effortlessly stylish; the summery dress being given a bit of edge with the shoes and military jacket. I also love the retro style sunglasses that give Hermione's look an unique twist.'

Chris. 16, Retail Assistant 'I just put whatever on this morning!' Style Stalker: 'Chris keeps his look classic, yet with denim being in this season, has given this trend a nod with his denim collar, brightening up his outfit with the light pink shade of his top.

Sandra. 40ish, Homemaker 'I wanted a casual outift, but added the blazer to smarten it up a bit, then accessorized with my Longchamp Bag'

Style Stalker: 'Starting with simple faded jeans and a white tee, Sandra is the queen of accessorizing as by wearing subtle, elegant Chamilia bracelets and keeping to her blue theme with a blazer she makes sure Longchamp bag in contrasting bright red is really emphasised. '

Tracy. 33, Secretary 'I chose this outfit as the sun was coming out' Style Stalker: 'With the feminine floral print of the trousers this look instantly becomes summery, yet Tracy gives it a little more edge with a denim jacket and very in season studded bag.'

Ailsa 38, Lettings Manager 'I like to look classy and elegant and smart for work'

Style Stalker: 'Sticking with a limited colour pallete for her accessories, Ailsa really lets the gorgeous claret red of the jumpsuit stand out.'

The classic beauty products are the ones which work. They are the ones that have stood the test of time and gained a global following. When Sisley's Sisleÿa Global Anti Age launched in the US there was a 2,500 stong waiting list of people who wanted to try a products which can claim that 89% of women tested found their skin was visibly younger-looking, firmer and brighter, and a staggering 98.5% of those tested found a significant improvement in skin hydration.

The popluarity of this single product has helped build a brand. It is definately one for the wish list. Pop into Voisins and see the experts on the Sisley skincare counter.

PRETTY IN PINK

These two new autumn perfumes are perfectly pretty and feminine. The Lancome La Vie Est Belle is for women who have that special aura of an indefinable "Je ne sais quoi". It is natural and simple with high notes of Iris and an orange blossom and jasmine heart, ideal for bright, but wild and windy autumnal walk. The Givenchy Dahlia Noir is a floral-fruity mixture supported with woody accords, one spritz conjures up images of long happy lunches and cocktails with the girls. Make sure you pop and try them both out.

WHAT BEAUTY SECRET DO TWO OF THE WORLD'S MOST PHOTOGRAPHED WOMEN SHARE?

THE ANSWER? LONG LASTING FALSE EYELASHES

We met up with Beautician Kelly Phillips from Rio Hair and Beauty to find out more about this treatment that everyone is going crazy for.

Kelly explained that they are the perfect way to instantly accentuate your eyes, making you look more feminine and photo ready in an instant. There is also the added bonus that they are incredibly low maintenance, doing away with the need for mascara, and most people find that they can go without their usual day eye make up too, as the lashes are enough of a wow factor. So there will be no more panda eyes for you as you emerge from the pool!

Kelly was trained in London and couldn't wait to get back here to start. Each treatment is bespoke for the client, Kelly commented "We can achieve anything, from big Bambi eyelashes, to just a subtle sexier side lash boost. It is totally up to the individual, I have lots of different length and thickness of lashes, so that I can create the exact look my client wants."

This is a great treatment if you have a special occassion coming up where there are going to be cameras about, and they last for weeks!

To book call 734458. Treatment lasts about 1 hour and costs \pm 70 for a 1/2 set (which is plenty!)

WORDS DR JOANNA KUMPIN

BE AWARE OF GUM DISEASE!

Gum disease is a very common and often silent disease.

It's estimated that half the adult UK population has some degree of gum disease. Studies have suggested an association between periodontal disease and the likelihood of delivering preterm, low-birth weight babies, developing cardiovascular disease and having difficulty controlling blood sugar levels in diabetics.

Periodontal disease ranges from simple gum inflammation to serious disease resulting in major damage to the soft tissue and bone that support the teeth. In the most advanced stages it leads to tooth loss.

Plaque is the main cause of Periodontitis. It's a sticky substance containing bacteria which gets harder over time forming "tartar".

Gingivitis is a mild form of gum disease. It results in red and swollen gums, which can bleed easily.

Periodontitis is the more advanced form of gum disease in which the gums create spaces called "pockets". The bone, the main support for teeth, is damaged leading to loose teeth.

Symptoms of gum disease:

- Bad breath that doesn't go away
- Red or swollen gums
- Tender, bleeding gums
- Receding gums (teeth appear longer)

The types and number of treatments vary depending on the extent of the disease. Routine cleaning by a dentist or hygienist will remove tartar but more advanced stages may require deep cleaning called root planing. Antibiotics may be used to assist treatment but will not resolve the problem alone. Lasers and surgical treatment have been also effective. Success of any treatment depends on patient's daily home care.

WELL TREATED

LAURA GALLAGHER,

newly appointed Spa Manager at Grand Jersey spoke to Gallery about her role, hopes and visions for the Spa.

WHAT DO YOU DO ON AN AVERAGE DAY?

I over see the daily operations of the Spa and Leisure facilities which keeps me busy throughout the day.

We have a team of 14 people here in the spa and we ensure that everyone is trained to the highest standards; this allows us to create the ultimate Spa experience for our guests.

HOW DOES THE SPA AT GRAND JERSEY COM-PARE WITH THE PREVIOUS SPA WHERE YOU WORKED?

My last role was in down town Toronto at The Ritz- Carlton. We had a very large spa-23,000 square foot and with a spa of that size came, challenges and a demanding work environment.

The hectic city life was very different to island life which is much more peaceful and enjoyable.

I have found Jersey to offer a more naturally relaxed state of mind due to the surroundings and lifestyle people tend to lead here.

Having beautiful beaches on our door step I think certainly helps!

WHAT IS THE SPA'S USP?

I think that our unique selling point has to be the fact that we have an amazing brand like ESPA, it is exclusive to both The Spa at Grand Jersey and the island. We feel very privileged to work with this highly respected product.

We believe and stand by ESPA's philosophy which is "we believe, as our world increases in speed, there is a powerful and deep need to stop, consider and rediscover our natural balance."

WHAT HAVE YOU FOUND MOST PEOPLE LIKE ABOUT THE SPA AT GRAND JERSEY?

It has to be the staff; this week alone we have received 3 thank you cards and a bouquet of flowers thanking our staff for the amazing experience they had received. We like to build solid relationships with our spa clients and members and make sure that they always leave happy, rejuvenated and wanting to come back.

CAN YOU CREATE BESPOKE TREATMENTS FOR DIFFERENT NEEDS?

Yes, everyone is different and we embrace that. We aim to create a personalised package to ensure that we meet our guest's needs and requests.

This year we have also seen an increased demand for pre and post natal treatments which is an area we specialise in.

We have even held Spa hen parties which have gone down really well and are perfect before a night out on the town.

WHAT IS YOUR FAVOURITE ESPA TREATMENT?

It has to be the Advanced Back, Face and Scalp with Hot Stones. I find it takes me a good 2 hours to really zone out, unwind and relax. I find this treatment to be a powerful stress reliever; it has been designed to help restore balance to vital energy points.

HAVE YOU GOT ANY SPA SUMMER TOP TIPS?

The ESPA Salt and Oil Scrub is an excellent skin softening body exfoliation. It really prepares your skin for a great tan throughout the summer and leaves your skin feeling moisturised, smooth and soft.

WHAT PRICES DO YOUR TREATMENTS RANGE FROM?

ESPA treatments range from £38 for an express massage to £110 for an Advanced Back, Face and Scalp with Hot Stones 2hr treatment.

WHAT ARE YOUR FUTURE VISIONS FOR GRAND JERSEY'S SPA?

I am very excited and happy to have joined the Spa here at Grand Jersey. I work with an excellent team and together we will strive to provide excellent treatments, personalised service, in a friendly and relaxed atmosphere.

AUTUMN WELLBEING FAIR ANNOUNCED

The Autumn WellBeing Fair will be held at the Radisson Blu Waterfront Hotel over the weekend of 8th and 9th September 2012.

Organised by WellBeing World, a membership body which was established last year and now with more than 90 wellbeing service provider members, the WellBeing Fair is the third such event to be held.

Earlier in 2012, WellBeing World organised Jersey's first-ever 15-day WellBeing Festival comprising as many as 30 individual events held at WellBeing World member locations around the island including the Hotel de France, Grand Jersey, L'Horizon Hotel & Spa, the Ommaroo Hotel, and also the Jersey Opera House Studio. It also included the Spring WellBeing Fair, which was the Festival's flagship event.

Internationally acclaimed musician, Robert Norton, was invited to Jersey as part of the Festival and audiences heard him play at the Spring WellBeing Fair, the Opera House Studio, and the Jersey Cheshire Home. Entitled 'Live in Jersey', a recording of the music Robert created during his visit has since been made into a CD and this will be available at the Autumn Fair.

"WellBeing means different things to different people, and can encompass exhilaration, inspiration, relaxation or simply calm and peace of mind. The dictionary definition talks about a satisfactory state of health, happiness, prosperity and abundance, and WellBeing World covers all of these things," commented Founder and Director, Beverley Le Cuirot.

The Autumn WellBeing Fair will include Acupuncture, Chiropractic, Cognitive Hypnotherapy, Cosmetic Dental, Exclusive Hotel Spas, Facial Reflexology, Health and Beauty, Holistic Therapies, Nutritional Supplements, Organic Skin Care, Sport and Fitness, Statement Furniture, Music for Relaxation, Weight Management ... and much more to relax, energise and make you feel good.

It will also introduce new members including the Jersey Squash and Racketball Club; Bowen Therapist, Antony Bryant and Chiropractor, Acupuncturist and Ergonomic Assessor, Grant Henderson. A Preview Day and a programme of Talks will be held on Saturday, 8th September (11am to 6pm), and the main exhibition day will be Sunday, 9th September (10am to 6pm).

Payable on the door, admission is £3; a weekend pass is £5; and children under 12 go free.

More information is available at www.wellbeing.je or contact Beverley Le Cuirot at Beverley@wellbeing.je or tel 07797 727 209

THE COSMETIC Skin Clinic

DEBORAH FORSYTHE MEDICAL AESTHETIC PRACTITIONER AT THE COSMETIC SKIN CLINIC, BASED AT THE WELL REGARDED COSMETIC DENTAL GROUP, IS A FONT OF ALL KNOWLEDGE FOR THOSE OF US WHO ARE DETERMINED TO GROW OLD DISGRACEFULLY!

When tackling age old issues of wrinkles you know you are in safe hands here - for the past 12 years, she has been a Consultant for Q-Med, the world leading biotechnology/medical device company. Deborah is a member of the Allergan faculty of Vistabel Validators, responsible for validating practitioners on injection techniques.

Internationally renowned as a leading lecturer, trainer and expert in aesthetic practice, Deborah Forsythe has for the last 6 years had a pan-European portfolio in aesthetic education, speaking at both National and European professional congresses. As head clinician at the University of Central Lancaster where she lectures on non-surgical facial aesthetics for postgraduate medical education, Deborah knew she needed to find another colleague on the island to cope with the growing demand for the treatments the clinic offers. 'I am delighted to bring Mary O'Keeffe-Burgher on board at The Cosmetic Skin Clinic', says Deborah. 'With Mary's dental training and facial aesthetic experience we can offer a truly holistic approach to caring for your skin - and your smile!.

Instantly labelled as 'The Jersey Lip Queens' for the pretty pouts (rather than trout pouts) they have created for the ladies of our island, we asked them to discuss the most requested treatments at the clinic.

'Wrinkle relaxants have to be the umber 1 request' says Mary, who loves using this treatment to wash away a 'world weary look'. The tiny injections switch off the message coming from the brain that make the muscle active. 'But youthful skin is not just about eliminating wrinkles, says Deborah. 'We evaluate the patients skin condition once we understand their lifestyle and expectations of their treatment with an hour long consultation. Together with our patient, we determine a treatment plan and this will stabalise their condition. And then we sort out a bespoke maintenance programme which of course can change over time.'

In at Number 2, are volumising dermal fillers for their increasing list of smitten patients. 'Loss of volume and definition can be corrected and a baby boomer girl can come for treatment and instantly look 5 years younger at dinner that night'. In skilled hands such as Mary and Deborah's' the 'down in the mouth' look can be a thing of the past as can the witchy chin. pouchy jawline and best of all - you can get your cheekbones back! Lasting from 7-9 months and longer for Sculptra, why bother with the dangers and downtime of permanent surgery and the risks of general anesthetic? 'Less is more' is our mantra', explains Mary. 'We are on a journey together with the patient and it would look ridiculous say, to go from a thin lip to a big luscious pout in one fell swoop', she explains.

Katie Park was first in the queue to be treated for poor lip volume as soon she knew the Jersey Lip Queens were working from the practice. 'I had always toyed with the idea but was too scared to actually go ahead - I mean what about all those horror stories... and of course there is no way I could have any time off work - plus despite my work, I am a complete baby when it comes to needles!' Katie pouts soo prettily, 'Deborah is just a terrific person: she completely got my concerns even though she has probably heard them a million times before! I didn't feel a thing except a little tenderness that night and wow - what a result. Once the swelling settled down, I decided to up the volume and I liked that Deborah did this transition from my mean looking top lip slowly so I got used to the idea. I love my lips now and realize that my request to get rid of my thin top lip would have simply not looked right without the bottom lip being balanced by a little filler too. Next on my list is a sneaky visit to Mary for a tad of Botox me thinks!' Katie lets slip with a wink.

At number 3 - 'This is a tie breaker between gentlemen and ladies due to it being summer right now' says Mary who we have to say is the perfect advert for The Cosmetic Skin Clinic, 'For ladies their attention to detail means they understand that no matter how much they indulge in their facial skin, ageing hands will tell it all. Restylane vital is not as instant as fillers but after three treatments with this amazing product that hydrates, hydrates, hydrates, the difference means you can show off your Big Diamond Ring without showing off your true age', she says as my eyes are drawn to her lovely BDR!

So what is it with the chaps? Do they really admit to such procedures? 'Absolutely not! Particulary about their favourite summer procedure. Mary's technique with toxins - Botox to you and I, means the gentlemen of the island will never have to suffer again from the ladies tittering about their sweaty pit syndrome! 'We might chuckle, but it causes real distress when anyone suffers from excessive perspiration and they get the tell tale signs under the arms of their shirt' explains Mary. 'Treating hyperhidrosis is one of the most satisfying procedures I do and is the most requested procedure for my male patients' Maybe treating hyperhidrosis is not the most glamouress or anti ageing but what a confidence booster!

Finally we asked Gallerys' New Best Friends, do they have any insider tips - 'Of course' says Deborah 'Plenty, after years and years of experience! However being situated in a dental practice where the dentists can provide the most beautiful of smiles, we can offer to complete our patients fresher look with a fresher looking smile. After all you wouldn't just paint a room and leave the woodwork looking chipped, yellowing and old would you?' And with that final note our Jersey Lip Queens air kiss us with their pretty pouts and trot back to the clinic to work more of their magic.

One Friday evening last month some gallery guinea pigs were treated to the new Danny's at Home cooking experience.

I'LL TAKE DANNY

s the sun set, we eight, we lucky eight, were joined by Danny on the precipice of La Roque to be treated to the man, at home. His two restaurants, renowned for their fresh, bold cooking are now the springboard for Danny's new enterprise; small scale, intimate and fun private functions, tailored if needs be, to the most idiosyncratic of requests.

This is about personality in all senses. The mantra that emanates from his restaurants is brought straight to the home. This is about new flavours, strikingly pleasing combinations and a sating sensory experience. Spurred off the back of his own cookbook, Danny's at home will bring to your own table the now mature fruits of over 30 years of experience, experimentation and locomotion in the world of food. Let us begin. Not a fan of exact methodology, Danny escorted us through a robust, fascinating and educational three-course meal. This was a carefully planned and executed service, bulked out by his gregarious nature. We ate, he talked, he demonstrated, we learnt.

Himself a student of taste, he educated this largely heathen bunch through the science of taste. We began with a basil leaf. Nose pinched we chewed this bland cud, nose released and the full intoxication of basil engulfed our olfactory system, as Danny explained this was in fact the little known Umami taste. Everybody at the table loved the educational and cookery demonstration aspect of the experience, as each foodie gambit he offered spurred some unusual and great table conversation.

Right there in front of us, with his sidekick apprentice Taylor, Danny rustled up our starter. Tender, shredded meat of confit duck leg, tossed in a little sesame oil with crunchy vegetables and passion fruit and soy dressing. A winner in all eyes and an artful combination with the sweet and salty dressing that uplifted the dish and put to practice his understanding of taste. Now this was fusion: the main was supreme of chicken, a great red wine sauce, silky mash, salty Parma ham and a hint of truffle oil. Cooked as we sipped his, I must say, excellent choice of wines; albeit an expectedly Antipodean affair.

This is about personality in all senses. The mantra that emanates from his restaurants is brought straight to the home.

Danny was keen to stress that this was stuff you could do at home. This is not food that will alienate you, it might even inspire you. To conclude was a perfect little mousse of chocolate and coffee with hazelnut biscuits, a fine ending to a worthy feast.

It seems Danny's at home is genuinely and sincerely about spreading the love of good food, its preparation and evolution, into our homes. It really lets you enjoy being a host. Simply put this is the recipe for a cracking evening of entertainment and delicious food from one of the island's most noteworthy chefs.

Danny at Home is a bespoke experience which is easily tailored to your exact needs; from formal sit down dinners for up to 12 people to brilliant BBQs he can do it all. This would also make a great corporate team building event, so wave this article under your boss' nose. For more information on the different dinner parties on offer visit www.dannys.je or call Danny's in St Aubin on 747306 t's always nice to be offered a beer. If it's the brewery doing it, all the better. That's what you can experience later this month as part of Cask Ale Week. This year's event will be following the 'Try Before You Buy' theme. What's not to like eh? It has a new strapline too – Only in Britain, Only in Pubs! By Britain they mean Jersey too, clearly.

CASK ALE WEEK 2102 {28th September - 7th October}

The Liberation Pubs, Victor Hugo and the Liberation Brewery are getting on board in a big way. Not only are they embracing the 'Try Before you Buy' ethos in their pubs during Cask Ale Week, but they've planned a whole host of culinary delights, special events and promotional offers in their pubs and eateries to make it all the more cause for celebration.

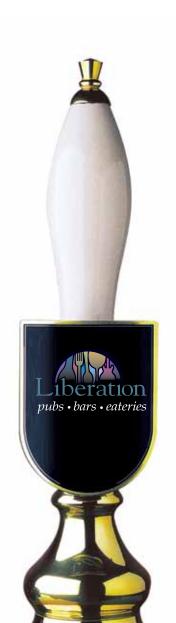

In the words of Paul Nunny, Director of Cask Marque, which is steering this year's event, 'Cask Ale Week is dedicated to raising the profile of cask conditioned beer, getting people to sample local brews, plugging that gap in knowledge and enticing drinkers back through the doors of their locals.' The theme and the strapline

BEER: making you look suave and sexy for years

94 gallery

Only in Britain, Only in Pubs are aimed to do just that, with the initiative supported by the lovely people at both CAMRA and the IFBB (Independent Family Brewers of Britain).

Where does one go to bask in the glory of Cask Ale Week? Think 'Liberation' -You can sample this lovely local brew in selected Liberation pubs across the Island, such as St.Mary's, Halkett, Post Horn, Townhouse, Cock & Bottle and Five Oaks, to name but a few. Or, if you fancy something a little 'further afield'- the brewery is preparing a brew of IPA especially for Cask Ale Week (back by popular demand). For those of you who aren't well acquainted with the lovely IPA (India Pale Ale), this was originally brewed for the UK ale lovers and featured at last year's Jersey Beer Festival (amongst others) proving extremely popular with the locals alike. Head Brewer Paul Hurley has been inundated with requests for this brew on his charity tours of Liberation Brewery, so it's back by popular demand at the likely watering holes for Cask Ale Week.

WHAT'S ON

GRUBS UP

If you're one for pairing food and beer in one delicious union, opt for a hearty portion of Liberation Ale battered Fish 'n' chips at selected Liberation eateries, washed down with a pint, naturally. Or if pork is your preference, during Cask Ale Week you can chomp down on a delicious pork pie with your pint for just £4.95. If this is whetting your appetite, head to either Five Oaks, Halkett, St.Marys, Post Horn, Cock and Bottle or the Townhouse pronto!

BE IN THE KNOW

Have you ever looked at freshly poured pint of ale as it sits in your hand and wondered just what magic and wizardry went into its creation? If so, discover the answer by booking a place on one the Brewery Tour on Thursday 4th October. Pat Dean and Peter Corocan will be enlightening 20 lucky people who sign up to the special Cask Ale Week 'behind the scenes' tour of the Liberation Brewery. Avid ale lovers be quick – places get snapped up pretty quickly! Email : patrickdean@liberationbrewery.com

NOT ONLY IN PUBS...

The strapline may say 'only in pubs' but Liberation Group is the exception to this rule... Cask Ale Week is all about being social and if that means having a BBQ at home with your mates, why should that deny you the enjoyment of drinking our local brew? Liberation Group has the perfect solution for this conundrum and it goes by the name 'Party Polypin'. The same magic juice that you get at your local Liberation Group watering hole, but portable AND with 20% discount during Cask Ale Week! Good? Great more like.. head down to Victor Hugo for this special offer or you're missing out!

It's a social thing. As Cask Marque tell us, "If you're interested in the future of local communities, you should be interested in the future of pubs, and if you're interested in the future pubs, you should be interested in the future of cask ale."

IF YOU'D LIKE TO FIND OUT MORE ABOUT HOW YOU CAN GET BEHIND CASK ALE WEEK, VISIT WWW.LIBERATIONGROUP.COM

MOOVE OVER PRE-PACKED.

Yes, you herd it here first... Katy Pierce has been into the gallery office lately, tantalizing us with her tasty dishes and promises of wheatgrass shots and other healthy sustenance nibbles. We're excited to introduce you to 'Moo', Katy's new business – a health bar on New Street, is set to open it's doors toward the end of August.

Moo stands for mostly organic origin, and as the name implies, the food at Moo is mostly organic, much of it locally grown, all of it made with love. Think fashionable frozen yoghurts (yum!), raw juices, nutritious salads and soups and expect delicious energy boosting muffins, tasty raw chocolate and wheatgrass shots... Basically, uber healthy munching without any compromise to flavour. Moo's menu has been created by holistic health coach and natural foods chef, Jennifer Moore. Jennifer specialises in all natural, wholefood and has trained in various dietary theories including raw foods, macrobiotics, ayurveda, gluten free, vegetarian and vegan; she received her chef training at the prestigious Natural Gourmet Institute in New York City. Superfoods are the basis of Moo. All of Moo's products are brimming with goodness - soul food at it's very best. www.facebook.com/ilovemooo

ATLANTIC CROSSING

After months of preparation a team from The Atlantic Hotel set off last night to embark on a once in a lifetime opportunity to showcase the island of Jersey and all that is wonderful about our local produce at one of the very best culinary festivals in the world. Atlantic Hotel owners, Patrick and Treena Burke, Executive Head Chef Mark Jordan and Glenn Noel will travel from Jersey to Cologne to participate in the Althoff Culinary Festival on Sunday 26th August at Grandhotel Schloss Bensberg. Mark has been selected along with 19 other Master Chefs from around Europe who between them have an astonishing 36 Michelin stars.

The Mermaid at Lakeside has recently had an extensive refurbishment, gone are the faded flowery carpets and worn out furniture; the whole place has been completely transformed, with care being taken to preserve the building's beautiful heritage and charm.

There is now a lovely outside decked area where you can sit in the sunshine over looking the lake and enjoy the new menu! It is all enclosed, so the kids can safely run about, or they can enjoy the new family room. Hidden down a little lane beside the brand new Lakeside Manor opposite the airport we popped in to meet Richard Beaumont The Mermaid's new Head of Hospitality to find out more about their new food menus:

What were the main considerations when creating the new menu?

I really wanted it to be inexpensive and fresh because fresh food taste better! It was also really important to me that we locally sourced as much as possible. I wanted people to be able to look at the menu and instantly recognise lots of classic favourites; nothing too fussy just great simple gastro-pub style food. I also wanted to give people choice; we have an à la carte menu, a set menu and daily specials as well, so there is lots to choose from.

What is your favourite dish served here?

I am a fish chef, so it would have to be the slow cooked local sea bass, which comes with delicious tender Jersey royals. It is light and fresh which is how I love my food.

What are your most popular dishes?

Our starter of bread-crumbed white bait with tartar sauce and salad really flies out! Then our beef and prawn Espetada main has been incredibly popular too.

What would you say is the most unique point about the food at The Mermaid? It is definitely value for money. The quality and quantity of the food is brilliant for the price.

VINTAGE VINO

Happiness is a wine of the rarest vintage...

e couldn't very well produce a vintage issue without a mere mention of wine... But what is vintage wine? When it comes to liquid grapes, vintage is the big one, the thing most people tend to find complicated and confusing. The bottom line is that it's all actually quite simple: A wine's vintage simply tells you which year the grapes were picked.

We came across a most interesting article in a Sunday supplement, which tells of a vintage wine so good that it comes with a ceremony... Not the usual ceremonious pomp that we all indulge in when buying wine in a restaurant, oh no, this takes wine tasting to a whole new level of ostentation...

Let us introduce the 2004 Block 42 vintage from Penfold's in Southern Australia... Not only does it come in a futuristic vial (not dissimilar to something one might see in Rob Pattinson's 'Twilight'), but it is delivered, in person, by one of Penfold's senior winemakers for a special opening ceremony. To the Gucci crew of Jersey, you know who you are – the types to splash magnums of bubbly all over scantily clad chicks in Marbs, even you will struggle to get your paws on a vial of this heavenly liquor... There are only 12 'ampoules' of this wine in the world, sold for a gargantuan £111,000 each. That's about £22,200 per glass. Salivating?

The Block 42 vintage has been described as having an 'intense blackcurrant, chocolate and liquorice aroma' and ought to be drunk before 2030... It'd take that long to pay for an ampoule, unless you sold your house maybe? As lovely as it all sounds, perhaps that bottle of Châteauneuf-du-Pape isn't looking so shabby after all. We'll leave you with this quote from one of the most recognized Champagne's in he world... Now raise a glass, cheers! "Come quickly! I am tasting stars!" - Dom Perignon (1638-1714) at his first sip of champagnet.

Martin Flageul introduces...

Pinot Grigio

words | Martin Flageul AIWS, Wine Consultant

Pinot Grigio is fast becoming one of the most popular white wines from Italy but its provenance does not need to be Italian. In fact this grape variety originated in France in the Alsace region but is now grown successfully in Australia, New Zealand and California as well as other regions and countries around the globe. Try Pinot Grigio with your favourite creamy pasta dish, seafood and even spicy dishes but for a real treat serve it with wild mushroom risotto.

PINOT GRIGIO, Bottega Vinai, Trentino, Italy

£8.49 per bottle

Estate bottled Pinot Grigio from Bottega Vinaia is the outcome of the terroir of Trentino vineyards coupled with finest grapes of the region. It offers an alluring floral perfume and appealing pale straw gold colour the wine has intensity, character and finesse and a firm dry finish.

PINOT GRIGIO, Sutter Home, Napa Valley, California, USA

£6.39 per bottle

Pinot Grigio Sutter Home displays fresh, full flavoured fruits including white peach, melon and citrus aromas and a firm structure with medium bodied palate. Initial floral aromas lead to a round textured fresh yet semi-sweet flavour.

PINOT GRIGIO, Brown Brothers, Victoria, Australia

Brown Brothers Pinot Grigio bursts with pear and peach aromas with whilst in the mouth distinct savoury characters and delicate acidity. The slightly green hue on the light straw colour is appealing when young and the freshness is enticing.

PINOT GRIGIO, Private Bin, Villa Maria, East Coast, New Zealand

£9.49 per bottle

Villa Maria's Pinot Grigio pays homage to the crisp fruit focused wines of Alsace. It has intense aromas of quince, ripe pear, red and green apple with a hint of spice with a gently off-dry palate, which, although creamy, has a crisp acidity and mouth-watering finish.

Vintage Properties: properties with classic charm

Property Profile: we take a look inside the amazing Mill House by St Catherine's Woods

Jersey's most comprehensive property platform for home buyers and sellers. Use one of these brands and get your property advertised in the right Places, in print and online.

Introducing one of the Jersey's finest examples of architecture and property planning. Turning a dilapidated, tumbledown farm into a beautiful, modern family home, Barnes Collie Fischer never cease to amaze. Faced with the issue that The Planning Department was adamant that any new construction must follow and not exceed the existing footprint, a large family home boasting all manner of trendy extras and perfect dwelling amenities was achieved to the highest of specifications.

Only in Jersey could a property so resplendent find itself in an equally idyllic setting. The Mill House in St Catherine's is contemporary country living at its most desirable. Ancient woodland and a heritage rich coastline surround The Mill House, with modern local amenities literally minutes from the front door. The thoughtful design of The Mill House combines a historic site, materials hewn from the heart of Jersey and every modern convenience, yet blends these aspects together into a truly timeless dwelling that is at once an escape from, and a part of the world surrounding it.

The property was a working farm, belonging originally to nearby Rozel Manor, and even more recently local farmer Graham Corson, who utilised the abundant cotils to grow fine Jersey Royals between the mid 60s and 2008. Designated as a 'building of local interest', the Moulin de Perelle water mill has stood on the spot between St. Catherines woods and Archirondel slipway since the early seventeenth century.

Although The Mill House boasts copious amounts of glass, from walls to the atrium in the entrance hall, thanks to the positioning within five and a half acres, privacy is indubitable.

The title Mill Farm is very appropriate, as the site has seen use as both a water mill and farm for centuries. Although through the years aspects of the mill itself have been removed, leaving only the timber beam work, the mill area has undergone much excavation, and is now a very special part of the house.

The original property was acquired by Mr Bruce Robinson of Larsen Construction - renowned for his affinity for retaining the character of old buildings, whilst bringing them into the age of information technology using new utility options and improved use of light and space with the redevelopment of The Mill House, Robinson enlisted the expertise of award winning architects Barnes Collie Fischer, to undertake the technical aspects of the planning.

The traditional Jersey Granite was previously hidden under a jacket of render and the house has undergone clean modern treatment against damp that allows the exterior to display it's heritage as a traditional Jersey farmhouse, albeit interspersed with modern glazed panels that allow comfortable vantage to the occupants of the surrounding haven for birds and wildlife. Although The Mill House boasts copious amounts of glass, from walls to the atrium in the entrance hall, thanks to the positioning within five and a half acres, privacy is indubitable. Natural light and relaxing green vistas are some of many wonderments of this exceptional property.

The concept of a traditional south elevation and a modern insertion to the north creates a contrast between traditional and contemporary; this is something of a theme to The Mill House. The juxtaposition of classic Jersey and in vogue expectations of the modern buyer, are all stacked up to perfection within this exceptional home. Light and space have been perfectly considered against the darker, narrow area that is the main building.

The old corrugated iron clad buildings at the rear of the property have been lovingly converted, with the resulting hidden treasure of a cinema room somewhere inside, behind a bookcase. The beautiful heart of the home is topped with an asymmetrical roof over the kitchen, allowing light from the east, providing natural sunlight even throughout the winter months. The spectacular architects have incorporated some trendy features at The Mill House, and did we mention that there is also an indoor pool?

There are so many important advantages to owning a brand new home. Of course it's widely known that new build properties are more energy-efficient and easier to maintain than older ones, but it's much more than that.

Why those in the know buy new

"I didn't want to risk buying a second hand property. You never know what you are going to find once you've moved in. Everything in my apartment has a superb finish and the developer has already contacted me for a 6-month check to see if I need anything sorting out."

Tom Wilkinson

A real sense of excitement

As most new home owners will confirm, there's a real sense of excitement when you buy new because your property is a blank canvas for you to put your own stamp on. And you certainly won't have to deal with any decorating horrors left behind by the previous owners!

Buying new is easier

The advantages of buying new are apparent from the outset. When you buy a second-hand property, it usually involves a chain of buyers - which is very often fraught with complications and could even fall through at the eleventh hour. With a new home, it's ready to move into when you're ready to move. In addition, the buying process itself is sometimes cheaper because, house builders often provide financial incentives to buy new - such as low deposits, first time buyer schemes, and payment of duty or legal fees.

Then there's quality and peace of mind to consider. All new build schemes have to comply with the States of Jersey Building Control Department and are checked and signed off to ensure compliance with current standards.

Say goodbye to DIY Sundays

What's more, you'll be able to wave goodbye to 'DIY Sundays' as your new home will require far fewer repairs than an older property inevitably would.

The layouts of new build homes are also ideally suited to modern lifestyles and tastes because they take into account customer feedback telling house builders what they most want and expect from a property.

Did you know ...

...that living in a new home you'll make significant savings in energy bills. A four-bedroom detached new home could be 55% cheaper to run – over £1,300 in today's market - according to the National House-Building Council Foundation and Zero Carbon Hub. Insurance premiums are often cheaper too.

...that buying off-plan can help you personalise your new home even more? Never be daunted by buying off-plan, because it could be one of the best moves you ever make. Not only will you be able to choose your favourite plot, the house builder will usually offer a range of customer options - such as floor coverings and tiling and of course a choice of kitchen fittings - prior to the property being built so these preferences can be worked into the finished product. When you walk in, you'll already find everything exactly to your own tastes.

A four-bedroom detached new home could be 55% cheaper to run

A three-bedroom end terraced home could be 52% cheaper to run

A one-bedroom ground floor apartment could be 47% cheaper to run

A two-bedroom apartment could be 45% cheaper to run

Modern build is safer

If you're unfortunate enough to suffer from allergies or asthma, a new build home could even provide you with some relief. With improved technologies and regulations, there are less toxins used in their construction, and improvements to building practices and regulations now require improved natural ventilation in and around new properties. Safety is also better than in older properties thanks to the use of higher fire-rated materials and mains electric fire and smoke alarms. And, of course, there'll be no old or defective wiring to upgrade or replace.

St Helier

An amazing home in a unique location, well presented bright and spacious this modern detached family home is set in a small select close of similar properties with country views but only 15 minutes walking distance to town. There are 4 bedrooms plus a study (could be bedroom 5) and a dining room. The property has been recently upgraded to a very high standard ensuring top quality fixtures and fittings to include new modern high gloss cream kitchen units with granite worktops, integrated Bosch appliances, Villeroy & Boch bathrooms with travertine tiles and under floor heating, Sanos surround system in the kitchen, diner, lounge and bathroom. Externally there is a gated front entrance with parking for 4 cars and a single garage and a large tiered manicured garden.

A stunning Jersey farmhouse set in a tranquil green lane in rural St Mary. The property was the subject of a 'roof-off' full refurbishment just a few years ago to create a 4 bedroom + playroom, 3 bathroom family home. The accommodation, set over 3 floors is bright and spacious and also boasts a study area. The large south facing landscaped garden is well stocked with shrubs and is fully lit at night. To the rear is a pleasant courtyard with a large single garage with staircase to upstairs storage plus parking for 3 cars and visitor spaces. A real gem!

INTERIOR FINDS

This is the latest collect by Jersey Pottery. Inspired by the Garden of Eden, the vintage design brings to life the Eden of Milton's Paradise Lost; Exotic birds "spread their painted wings" and "blossoms and fruits at once of golden hue" appear "with gay enamelled colours mixed".

Whether you are looking for gift or a little luxury for your home the collection contains an array of objects d'art including mugs and plates; passport covers and luggage tags; wrapping paper and file folders.

INTERIORS & EXTERIORS

A BULTHAUP WOW-FACTOR TRANSFORMATION

Charlie and Angela had been working on their house, rebuilding their four bathrooms, and improving windows in other rooms. Their kitchen was the next big project.

The brief they gave Stewart Carr at bulthaup Winchester was to create a light, airy, highly contemporary and cutting edge kitchen in line with the bathrooms they had already completed.

Stewart worked with Interior Designer Lynne SKelton to get the maximum potential out of the space. The utility room used to be next to the kitchen, separated by a small patio, and it was decided to extend the kitchen out across the patio to meet the utility. This provided the necessary width to enable a fabulous long central island - something that Angela had always wanted.

Lynne was keen for the new space to stand out structurally from the rest of the house and created a huge glass corner giving clear views of the garden. A large electric glass roof light in the ceiling further enhanced the feeling of light and space.

Charlie and Angela decided to finish the central island in applewood with a slim and practical 10mm stainless steel worktop. This is their main preparation, storage and cooking area; it includes an Atag induction hob and a seamlessly integrated bulthaup sink.

A tall run in Alpine white laminate with laser welded edges was created to discretely hold a Gaggenau fridge freezers, ovens, a wine chiller and a crockery cabinet, with internal drawers for easy access right to the back. The opposite wall IS the designated washing up area with a wide bulthaup stainless steel sink and draining area, Miele dishwasher, and further storage.

"The finished result really is incredible" Charlie enthused "Angela and I are bowled over with just how fantastic it looks."

BLOOMING BRILLIANT!

Words | Rebecca Ransom Director, Ransoms Garden Centre

In the world of plants, gardens and flowers, the idea of 'vintage' relates to our own fondest memories of those plants, scents, places and the people who we associate with them. We all have a trigger plant in our memory or mind somewhere, but you may just not be able to name it. Here are some of the most classic plants and flowers, that when brought together in one garden will truly make your patch the most memorable piece of vintage gardening going!

ROSES

I love classic English roses with big dopey flowers and a subtle scent of myrrh.

LAVENDER

Has greatest scent, it is easy to grow and adored by every generation; this one is the ultimate classics.

FORGET ME NOT

A wonderful little plant that adores the slightly damper shadier gardens.

HONESTY

This is a personal favourite, not only do they have beautiful flowers, the seedpods form gorgeous moon like plates that glow when the light hits them.

SWEET WILLIAM

A Stunning sweet smelling biennial with pretty heads of glowing pinks, reds and crystal whites.

JASMINE

Again loved for its scent which it releases in delicate waves in the early evening.

HONEYSUCKLE

This is so easy to grow, it has flowers that look like pale sea anemones.

BUDDLEJA

This has always been popular due to its huge attraction to butterflies and bees. It is a stunning plant, easy to grow, loves the sun and can make a stunning hedge.

HYDRANGEA

Some love these plants, some don't, but this is quite simply vintage Jersey, huge rounded heads of the purest shabby chic. I love them, no pests or disease and easy to grow!

SO, TELL US WHAT INSPIRED YOU TO GET THIS OFF THE GROUND?

I have worked for myself for the past 14 years but have always been nervous of the economy to branch out and employ staff, opening a new business is a nerve racking decision, but then this opportunity at DW in st brelades Bay hotel came up i decided it had to be now or neva!!

WHAT DID YOU DO PRIOR TO STARTING THIS BUSINESS?

I have worked in the Beauty industry for more than 20 years, on leaving school I worked for Estee Lauder, and then decided to go to college at Champneys in Tring. On leaving I worked for 3 years at The Sanctuary in Covent Garden. It is actually all I know and I still love it as much as I did 20 years ago.

DID THAT TEACH YOU ANY LESSONS THAT HELPED YOU SUCCEED?

Well always in the first few years of any career you make your mistakes. After 3 years at the Sanctuary i felt confident to branch out on my own. the beauty industry is always changing and updating so its important to keep up. You can never think your ahead of the game.

WHAT'S THE HARDEST LESSON YOU'VE LEARNT SINCE STARTING THE BUSINESS?

The paper work and the fact you never switch off. I spend most of my time working now, and treatments themselves have become a small part of that work load. It is great stretching my mind and implementing my ideas, I have learnt so much so far and I am really enjoying working with my fantastic team.

ANY FUNNY STORIES THAT YOU HAVE ABOUT THE BUSINESS STARTING OUT ?

Believe me there are always funny stories in the beauty industry, but client confidentiality is always a must! It is a wonderful industry to be in because everyone who comes to see you is there because they want to be and not because they have to be.

WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS FOR THE FUTURE ?

To work really hard and make a huge success of Bellezza and enjoy the journey along the way. I intend to give the best service to both local people and passing trade. Nothing is to much trouble and increasing on my a loyal client base is my challenge.

WHAT ADVICE WOULD YOU GIVE TO WOULD-BE ENTREPRENEURS ?

I do not really think I am in a position to give advise just yet!! I suppose so long as you have a good support structure around you, and you are confident in your field, then believe in yourself and go for it. A smile on your face goes a long way, Generally people want you to succeed and I have been overwhelmed with the support I have had.

ABOUT THE BUSINESS

Situated with the newly renovated luxurious St Brelades Bay Hotel, Bellezza is an oasis of calm. Its contempory style and outstanding views bring a sense of immediate relaxation. Treatments are offered using top quality brands such as Dermalogica, OPI and Bio Gel amongst others. They offer essential beauty maintenance, nail care, facials or more indulgent body treatments emphasising 'Beauty in the Bay'. They are open 7 days a week with 4 late evenings. If you book a treatment over 60 minutes you are also welcome to use the facilities to include the pool, fibre optic steam room and Jacuzzi.

TV PERSONALITY NAMED AS GUEST SPEAKER AT THE JERSEY CONSTRUCTION AWARDS 2012

S ustainable design guru and television presenter Oliver Heath will be guest speaker at the 2012 Jersey Construction Awards in September.

Known for his roles in the BBC's Home Front and Changing Rooms, Channel 4's House to Home and ITV's Front of House, Oliver's particular expertise lies in showing people how they can make sustainability a part of their lives, without compromising on style. Most recently, he has acted as a guest designer to the ever-popular BBC DIY SOS, working alongside the regular team. Oliver can also be seen presenting seminars at events such as EcoBuild, Grand Designs Live and the Ideal Home Show. He has recently completed a full environmental refurbishment of his own home in Brighton, showing the benefits low-energy living, reuse and ingenious recycling. The house was awarded Super Home status by the Sustainable Energy Academy for reducing its carbon emissions by more than 75%. Last year he was awarded the British Institute of Interior Design's Retrofit award.

Jersey Construction Council Awards Committee Chairman Steve Jewell said he was delighted that Oliver had accepted the invitation to be guest speaker at the awards gala evening on Saturday 22 September. He said: 'We were looking for an inspirational individual and someone who was right up-to-the-minute in terms of being a trend-setter for the industry. In Oliver – with his fantastic credentials in sustainability – I think we have found that individual.'

In 2006 Oliver co-founded EcoCentric.co.uk, an online ethical retailer dedicated to products. After four years of successful trading he sold to a competitor and now has a new design company, Heath Design Ltd, which is based in Brighton. Oliver has written design columns for the Observer, Friends of the Earth, and House Beautiful magazine. He has released three books about home design and style – Oliver Heath's Home Book, Front of House and Urban Eco Chic.

Table bookings for the gala evening can be made by email to info@jerseyconstruction.org. For more information about the awards and details of the gala evening in September go to www.jerseyconstruction.org

Il six winners of the Jersey Director of the Year Awards earlier this year have progressed to be shortlisted in the national IoD Director of the Year Awards UK Final.

Graeme Millar, CEO of the JT Group, has been shortlisted in the 'Global Organisation' category; Kevin Keen, Chief Executive of Jersey Post, has been shortlisted in the 'Large Organisation' category; and Jonathan Carter, Director of the Jersey Heritage Trust, has been nominated in the 'Public/Third Sector Organisation' category. Meanwhile, there are three Jersey directors shortlisted in the 'Young Director' category. They are Sam Watts, Director and Co-Owner of Orchid Communications, Eliot Lincoln, Managing Director of Greenlight, and Grant Twine, Managing Director of Basel E-Business.

The shortlisted Jersey contingent, along with almost 60 of the UK's most successful company directors, will discover on Friday 5th October 2012 whether they have won a prestigious award at the IoD Director of the Year Awards UK Final ceremony, which will be held at the Lancaster Hotel in London.

The winners of the Jersey Director of the Year Awards were announced at a black tie Awards dinner in May, hosted by special guest speaker, renowned writer, broadcaster, former MP and Government Whip Gyles Brandreth. Rumour has it a few cu-razy waistcoats lightened the mood.

CHANNEL ISLANDS PR PROFESSIONALS COMPLETE CIPR INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS CERTIFICATE

SIX PR professionals have been the first in the Channel Islands to complete the Chartered Institute of Public Relations (CIPR) Internal Communications Certificate. Leonie Herve from Santander, Allison Rumens and Adele Morrow at Specsavers, Annalisa Detassis from Generali, Hayley Webb from Blue Islands and Nicky Martini from RBS International have all gained the professional qualification. The course covers the key concepts of internal communication including techniques, theories and skills needed to develop effectively as an internal communication professional.

SUISSE BLISS

Six Credit Suisse staff in the Channel Islands have recently passed the Chartered Institute for Securities & Investment Certificate in Private Client Investment Advice and Management (PCIAM) paper, which is the benchmark regulatory standard in the wealth management industry. Mo Baluchi, Ed Hurrell, Patrick Millar, Nick Lawlor, Allan Stewart and Tim Woosley's recent exam success takes the number of client-facing staff at Credit Suisse staff that hold a Level 6 wealth management qualification to 20. From 1 January 2013, the Financial Services Authority's Retail Distribution Review (RDR) will require all UK investment advisers to reach at least a Level 4 qualification.

GREAT NETWORKERS

The appointment of three network consultants at Cable & Wireless Communications (CWC) has led to the creation of a new Network Consultancy Team that will play a key role within the communication company's Business Sales Team. Robert Taylor, Chris Langlois and Simon Watkins have all joined the firm, bringing with them decades of experience in voice and data networking.

As highly qualified network consultants, their expertise covers all elements of communications networks. The team will play a vital role at CWC, working closely with business clients to ensure they understand all of their requirements and advising on the most appropriate solutions. On top of the advisory role, the team will design business networks and will liaise with account managers and other areas of CWC's Channel Islands business to ensure that all clients' needs are met and wherever possible, exceeded.

Importantly, all three members of the Network Team hold a variety of Cisco professional qualifications and are ITIL v3 accredited, meaning that they work to the highest standards for the delivery of professional IT services. Each of them also holds numerous professional level Cisco certifications.

Look at them, they've already networked their way between the ladies of the page!

GRAND PLANS

Grand Jersey has boosted their award winning team with the appointment of a new revenue manager and a new spa manager.

Louise Cleaver joins Grand Jersey in the position of revenue manager, with more than ten years experience as a hotel revenue manager, gained at a number of high profile establishments across the UK. Miss Cleaver is a member of HOSPA, formerly the British Association of Hospitality Accountants, and has an impressive list of achievements, ranging from helping hotels improve their financial performance in difficult economic times to managing high profile bookings, such as visiting football teams and famous musicians. Out of work, she enjoys horse riding, the Spanish language and actively fundraises for Cancer Research UK.

Laura Gallagher has been appointed as spa manager at Spa at Grand Jersey. She comes from a previous role at The Ritz Carlton in Toronto, where she led a team of 15 therapists and 12 other staff. Prior to that, she managed the spa and leisure centre in Mount Falcon Estate, a 4 star deluxe hotel in the West of Ireland. Miss Gallagher has also spent time working at spas in Australia and on 5 star luxury cruise ships. Out of work, she enjoys reading fiction stories, cooking hearty traditional Irish food and exploring new places. Her dream location to explore next is Bora Bora.

Charlotte is also a Fellow of the Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrators, and serves on the Jersey ICSA Council.

Collas Crill's Singapore team celebrated its first year in business last month. Named as the fastest growing law firm by The Lawyer, Collas Crill is the first and only Channel Islands law firm to open an office in Singapore offering Guernsey and Jersey legal services. Current head of Collas Crill Singapore, Sean Cheong, moved from Guernsey to set up the Singapore office just over a year ago. Marcus Hinkley, Collas Crill's Guernsey based fiduciary expert, is moving to Singapore to lead the team in September. He is joined by new partner Leon Santos, a funds specialist. Collas Crill managing partner Jason Romer said: "In our first year we have steadily increased the capabilities and strength of our offering in Singapore. Sean has done a fantastic job in establishing the Collas Crill office and brand in Singapore and the Asian region more widely. " Sean Cheong will in due course return to the firm's practice in Guernsey but will retain her ties to the Singapore office and Asia.

Tel: (01534) 832660

Over 80 employees from KPMG in the Channel Islands' Jersey office exchanged their office jobs for voluntary work in the local community. As part of the firm's annual Make a Difference Day - now in its fifth year in Jersey - employees worked on five preselected community projects throughout the week. This year's chosen Jersey charities were Maison des Landes, Little Oaks Nursery, Trees for Life, Aids Care Education Training and Jersey Cheshire Homes.

.....

MAKE A DIFFERENCE DAYS

LITTLE OAKS NURSERY Volunteer: Holly Clark

As part of our Make a Difference week, we were all given a fantastic opportunity to help improve the facilities of the Little Oaks Highlands Nursery. The Little Oaks Nurseries encompasses two separate purpose built nurseries; Little Oaks Highlands and Little Oaks Le Coie. Little Oaks Nurseries have charitable, not for profit status and are run by a committee consisting of past and present parents and management level staff.

Our Make a Difference team from KPMG all met at the Highlands nursery bright and early for a busy morning of painting fences and building picnic tables in their gardens. Apart from a drizzly half hour at the start of the morning, the sun shone brightly for the majority of our time there which kept the team smiling.

It was extremely evident from the start the difference we would make to the nursery after a morning of hard work. When we arrived, the fencing was a murky green colour which tended to blend into the surrounding trees. Furthermore, no dedicated seating was available for the children to use on sunny days when they would prefer to be outside. As soon as we got started painting and building it was clear to see how different the end result would be, which definitely spurred the team on.

The end result? Six brand new mini toddler sized picnic tables built and a newly candy coloured painted fence for the nursery children to enjoy. And of course, the entire KPMG team covered in pink, blue and white paint. Happy days!

TREES FOR LIFE

Volunteer: Natasha Hirani

After a morning of painting fences and building picnic tables, our team headed down to a rather overgrown field. Considering the title of our afternoon project was 'Trees for Life' - I had images of turning up to a field full of big Oak trees where we would be doing a review on how well each tree was growing.

How wrong could I have been! There wasn't a tree in sight - and it turned out that was precisely why we were there. The trees that had been planted had been completely hidden by weeds. Our job? To make the trees visible again and provide them with the right environment and surroundings they need to grow.

One thing I learnt from our task is that I completely take for granted how much work and effort goes into keeping our Island's countryside as beautiful as it is. Jersey Trees for Life was established in 1937 as the Jersey Branch of Men of the Trees and its main objectives are to encourage the protection, preservation and planting of trees throughout the Island and to foster within the community a love and appreciation of trees for their amenity, ecology and other values.

With the help or our KPMG team, we were able to clear a lot of the surrounding weeds and overgrow that were stopping the lovely trees from growing. It certainly wasn't an easy task - but after lots of chopping, digging and clearing we were left looking at a much clearer area for the trees to grown and a much nicer environment for the surrounding wildlife to live in.

JERSEY CHESHIRE HOME

Volunteer: Andreas Zoumaras

The Jersey Cheshire Home provides a permanent home for 23 residents of all ages and physical ability. The charity homes and cares for disabled individuals and is able to provide them with an opportunity to lead an independent and meaningful life, aided by the assistance of both permanent and volunteer staff, without whom would not be possible.

We were given the opportunity to help redecorate parts of the home, indoors and out, to brighten up the corridors and outside walls to give the home a fresher feel.

I appreciated the time and efforts put in by Ann and Jim, who gave us an insight into the high quality care that they provided for the residents and how they always look to make a difference and keep a smile on the resident's faces, through visits out of the home and even holidays overseas.

It was interesting to hear the carers personal experiences and challenges that they have faced, and stories of the residents' reactions when they achieve personal goals which they originally thought would not have been possible.

Maintaining the high quality of life for residents is a huge task and keeps the staff extremely busy and I hope that our help has brightened up the home allowing staff to concentrate on the more important aspect of taking care of the residents. Go team!!

MAISON DE LANDES

Volunteer: Brian Bethell

Maison de Landes provides much needed holiday accommodation for visitors to the Island with special needs, although locals with disabilities can and do use the hotel as well. The hotel is run by a charitable trust supported by the Lions Club. One of the aims of the hotel is to make the guests visit to the Island as fulfilling as any other visitor to Jersey would expect. This includes day trips around the Island which change depending on the day.

The outside of the hotel has some lovely gardens and open space which is very well kept by Jackie Ollerenshaw and her team. Our task set was to improve some of the landscaped areas and assist with various building projects which included rebuilding a greenhouse (which sounds easier that it was), removing some walls to improve the look and feel of the garden, building some trellises against one of the walls and finally finish building a patio area. The challenge we were set was great as you really could appreciate the before and after benefits of our work and we really did make a difference. It is not often people let an accountant use a drill so it was great fun as well.

During our project we also got to speak to Jackie about what they did at the hotel which helped us really appreciate the challenges the charity face when allocating budgets and setting fees for guests as naturally there is a happy medium that you need to achieve. It was clear that they really appreciated our help for the projects that otherwise would not have been completed, which is great and gave all those involved a sense of satisfaction.

PIECES OF THAMANIYA?

BARCLAYS WEALTH HAVE JUST RELEASED A REPORT INVESTIGATING TRENDS SURROUNDING TREASURE; WHAT PEOPLE WORLDWIDE CHOOSE TO SEEK AND TO STORE, AND WHY.

Rather than ill-gotten gains from the high seas, they've chosen to focus on items such as classic and vintage vehicles, jewels, precious metals, antiques and art, to name a few. Their research showed that those ages 55 and over preferred to seek antiques and fine art, whereas those under 45 prefer cars, wine, precious metals and jewellery. Automobile collectors averaged a USD$641,000 investment in their hobby, with the average treasure held by high net worth individuals accounting for 9.6% of their total net worth. Treasure collectors often express an interest in thinning out their collection, but rarely manage to let go of their booty, on average needing to realise a 62% increase in value in the first year in order to justify letting it go. Having said that, few collectors acquire their treasure solely for financial reasons, preferring to collect purely for enjoyment, heritage or for social purposes; showing and sharing with family, friends or colleagues.

K-N-O-W-L-E-D-G-E 11+14+15+23+12+5+4+7+5 = 96%

but ,

A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E 1+20+20+9+20+21+4+5 = 100%

However,

B-U-L-L-S-H-I-T 2+21+12+12+19+8+9 +20 = 103%

combined with arse kissing

A-R-S-E K-I-S-S-I-N-G 1+18+19+5+11+9+19+19 +9+14+7 = 131%

leads ua to conclude with mathematical certainty, that while hard work and knowledge will get you close, and attitude will get you there. Its the bullshit and arse kissing that will make you really shine.

Carey Olsen advises Terra Firma on its acquisition of Four Seasons Health Care

Carey Olsen has advised leading European private equity firm Terra Firma on the acquisition of Four Seasons Health Care (Four Seasons) for a total consideration of up to £825 million.

Four Seasons is the leading independent provider of health and social care in the United Kingdom (UK). The company operates 445 care homes and 61 hospitals and specialist units in the UK, Isle of Man and Jersey. It employs more than 30,000 staff caring for more than 20,000 residents. Four Seasons has taken a sector lead in the development of specialist services for residents with higher dependency needs including nursing care for infirm elderly, respite, step-up and step-down care and an award winning specialist dementia service that is studied by care providers internationally.

Terra Firma is a leading European private equity firm specialising in buy-outs of large, asset-rich and complex businesses. Carey Olsen advised Terra Firma on the Guernsey and Jersey legal aspects of this transaction. The Carey Olsen team was led by corporate partners Tom Carey and Guy Coltman who were assisted by senior associate Geoff Ward-Marshall and associate David Taylor. Other firms, who acted for Terra Firma on this transaction, included Slaughter and May as lead English legal counsel and Cravath Swaine & Moore who advised on US financing issues.

The acquisition, which completed last month, is being financed through a mixture of equity and new debt, with the debt being arranged by Goldman Sachs and Barclays. Carey Olsen partner Tom Carey said: "We are delighted to have been instructed on Terra Firma's purchase of Four Seasons Health Care which is one of the most significant leveraged buyout transactions this year."

Sharon Thérin Legal Assistant | Collas Crill

Getting on the property ladder is exciting but the legal jargon is often confusing!

Collas Crill's 'Queen of Apartments' Sharon Thérin explains some phrases you might come across and what they actually mean.

Legal advisor: Why do you need one? When you buy a property there is a lot of paperwork to do now to ensure it all goes ahead smoothly. But think ahead, too – we help ensure that nothing exists now that may effect your flat or house, or delay the sale, when you come to sell it in the future.

First time buyer: Someone who has never owned or had an interest in a property in Jersey or off-island.

Share Transfer: Buying your flat by acquiring shares in the Jersey Limited Company that owns the building. Your 'shares' give you ownership of your flat and an interest in the common areas.

Flying Freehold: Buying your flat through purchasing a share in an association before the Royal Court. Co-owners of the whole building form an association. Each co-owner has sole ownership of their flat and an interest in the common areas.

Lender: Your bank, or other financial institution, which has agreed to give you a mortgage to buy your flat.

Independent Financial Adviser: A person who has access to various bank loan products and can advise you on the best one to apply for and help you with the mortgage application process.

Valuation Survey: The (basic, cosmetic) property inspection completed by a qualified surveyor. It's for the benefit of your lender so they know the property is worth the money they're lending you.

Searches: As your legal advisor we contact utility companies, check boundaries and points of entry to ensure nothing has been carried out without planning permission, and access to your property is in order.

Title Searches: Your conveyancer ensures the property that your flat is within is all in order to ensure you can enjoy full use of the property. We also review your company or association records to see what members have been discussing to ensure they aren't planning major expenditure on the property that could affect you when you move in.

Certificate of Title: Once we have completed necessary searches we need to confirm to the lender that everything is in order. This is a tick list of confirmations that your lender needs to enable them to decide whether or not they lend you the money to buy.

Articles of Association: The document you are given when you buy a share transfer flat. It details the rules and regulations of the limited company and its administration.

Declaration of Ownership: The document you are given when you purchase a flying freehold property. It details the flats, common areas and associated administration.

SO HERE HE IS; FEATURING AS OUR SPORTSPERSON OF THE MONTH IS ONE OF THE NEWEST ADDITIONS TO THE JERSEY RUGBY CLUB'S FIRST XV, AND HE'S ONLY JUST FINISHED SCHOOL. AS JERSEY RUGBY GOES FROM STRENGTH TO STRENGTH. MEET JAMES VOSS. SOME HOMEGROWN JERSEY RUGBY TALENT.

I started playing rugby at the age of 9. I grew early, so it seemed to be the obvious sport to choose. My first experience came at De La Salle, where I played in the school's team, but at 15 I decided to join the Jersey Rugby Club's Colts team. From here, I quickly made my way into the County teams for under 16s, under 17s and under 18s. However, this commitment to Rugby was taking too much time away from my schoolwork and exams. For this reason, I stopped playing County level rugby, only continuing with the Jersey Colts Under 18s. It was whilst playing for the Colts in September 2011, at 17, that Ben Harvey [Head Coach of Jersey First XV?] asked me to start training with the Jersey First XV. Within only a couple of months, on the 10th of December, I managed to make it onto the pitch for my first experience of professional rugby. The game was against Birmingham, and after playing for the Colts for so many years, it was very surreal to find myself on a pitch with people my own size. My first contact in that game is a memory I will never forget! It didn't take me long to realise that I was playing at a whole new standard, and the pressure to perform really encouraged me to work my hardest. I played a couple more games that season, against Sedgley Park and Stourbridge.

Once again, the issue of schoolwork against my commitment to rugby arose. This time, it was University that presented a challenge. In May, with the help of Ben Harvey, an opportunity was presented for me to go to Hartbury College, a place known for its rugby, on a full scholarship. However, Ben, who wanted me to continue playing Jersey, offered a full professional contract. Despite the chance to play in the university leagues, I signed the contract in June 2012. I felt that the chance to play in my home team's Championship side would give me time with a higher standard of play, and the coaching staff in Jersey are excellent.

I finished school on the 22nd of June, and instantly started preseason training. I learnt the hard way that you need to be fully dedicated to this training, paying the £50 late fine on a couple of occasions. We train 6 days a week, with three intensive work days and two cardio sessions to allow us to recover. It's difficult, but I'm constantly reminded that I'm getting stronger and fitter, ready for the Championship season.

James Voss is undoubtedly one of the rising stars of Jersey sport, setting a great example of commitment, sacrifice and perseverace to the younger sportspeople coming through the ranks in various clubs. We're happy to support such a talent as our player.

At 6" 6', Voss is a monstrous presence on the pitch, even amongst professional players, proving that, with continued rigorous training, he should have a long career in rugby ahead of him. By the time this magazine is out, the first game of his Championship season will have been played against the Cornish Pirates, and James has his fingers crossed that he'll be able to help get the season off to the kind of start that will get us yet another promotion into the top flight of English Rugby. Forget Yohan Blake, James Voss truly is "The Beast" of young sportsmen on the island.

Pilates is now being offered at Jersey's new centre for dedicated sports medicine, which is just one of the wide range of specialist services available. Grace Hoy is the resident Pilates instructor at the centre, and offers one to one and small group Pilates sessions. Grace is a qualified level 3 Pilates instructor who has practised Pilates for over 12 years throughout her training and professional career with the Royal Ballet School, and whilst dancing professionally with companies such as the English National Ballet and Scottish Ballet.

Pilates is a scientifically proven exercise system which strengthens, tones and stretches all the muscle groups. The Pilates techniques teach you to use your body in a healthy and effective way in all aspects of everyday life. Pilates is suitable for everyone regardless of age, gender or fitness level. By focussing on improving posture and mobilising joints in the body, Pilates will help to alleviate aches and pains, and strengthen weaker areas aiding the prevention of future injury. Grace offers a full range of sessions from beginner to advanced level on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday mornings, with further dedicated small group sessions (maximum of 6 persons) on Thursday evenings.

SPORT OF THE MONTH

Given our Sportsperson of the Month, Jersey Rugby Club seems a good place to start our look into the different sports organisations around the island. With rugby being played on the island for almost 150 years, the Club has is one of the oldest sport organisations on the island. Since joining the league in Hampshire in 1994, and going through numerous changes to the squad, the JRFC's First XV have moved like a wrecking crew through the leagues, becoming a dominant force in the world of English rugby. After their 19-win run last season in National League 1, the fine-tuned machine, led by Ben Harvey, must now face the challenge of Championship Rugby. However, after last year's games drawing in innumerable crowds of middle aged men and keen drinkers, the Club will undoubtedly have the support of everyone to plough through yet another league, taking us up to get revenge on the Tigers next season. The tidy contribution from the States hasn't gone down too badly either.

With the success of the First XV, it's easy to forget about the younger players at the Club in the many youth teams that the JRFC offer. Ranging from the Under 7s to the Colts Under 18s, anybody can get involved with the sport, and even find their way into other squads, like the Hampshire county team or eventually the First XV.

If that's not incentive enough to sign up, we also have the Siam Cup, or the annual Guernsey beating. The cup is the second oldest rugby honour in the world, and needless to say The Donkeys' record is laughable, with 15 wins to our 53. All teams take part in this event and it's a garunteed victory on the calender every year!

Joining the club is easy, just contact them at: Tel. +44 (0) 1534 499929 Email: jrfcamemberships@hotmail.co.uk jerseyrugby.club@jerseymail.co.uk

- AUTO RE-UNION -

THIS MONTH, I READ OF A STORY THAT ON THE FACE OF THINGS APPEARED TO BE 'JUST ANOTHER BARN FIND', BUT UPON CLOSER INVESTIGATION AND TO MY DELIGHT RAN MUCH, MUCH DEEPER.

Whilst opinions differ when it comes to the done things with classic and vintage vehicles. One school of thought is that they should be fully restored to the highest of standards and preserved in moistureless, air conditioned cocoons, there to be admired my few or by many. Others prefer to preserve them in a different way, by leaving them in an 'original' and unmolested state, regardless of the levels of decay that have already been administered by the winds of time. Another alternative is to patch up or restore to a certain extent and then do exactly what the engineers, designers and manufacturers intended of them: drive.

Personally, I'm an advocate of all three, depending upon the vehicle in question. For example, as much as it seems a shame to disturb the as-new condition, carefully packaged gold mine of Supermarine Spitfires recently located to be unearthed in Burma, you have to admit that to be able to witness a fly-by from a squadron of original Spitfires wasn't something most of us would have expected to potentially have the opportunity to marvel at in our post-war lifetimes.

Managing to defy the effects of world war, time and crookery, and surviving in the face of such adversity, to an extent, Audi have managed to acquire and restore the third of five surviving examples of the archetypal Auto Union racing cars. Almost toy car like in stature, the Auto Union, along with the Mercedes-Benz offering of pre-war competition cars, was an almost unstoppable racing force. A child of the streamlining era and with its engine at the rear, the Type D cars' V12 engines were fitted with twin superchargers and were capable of travelling at speeds in excess of 300kph, even having being timed at 380kph on Berlin's Avus racetrack in 1937. to recover the twin-supercharged car you see here. To his advantage, he was from a White Russian family and still fluent in his mother tongue despite having emigrated to the USA decades before returning to negotiate the sale of the two Auto Union cars that he discovered in Russia. Or what was left of them, as they had long since been dismantled.

TWO HUNDRED AND THIRTY SIX MILES PER HOUR. IN 1937. NOTHING SHORT OF AN ABSOLUTELY PHENOMENAL FEAT OF ENGINEERING AND DRIVING PROWESS, IN BOTH SENSES OF THE WORD

Two hundred and thirty six miles per hour. In 1937. Nothing short of an absolutely phenomenal feat of engineering and driving prowess, in both senses of the word.

When the Soviet Army occupied the vehicles' home in Zwickau following World War II and the collapse of Germany, they were commandeered and removed to the Soviet Union in reparation and soon became lost deep within their vast, 8.6 million square mile state and soon after secured behind the Iron Curtain.

With all hope of recovering any of these iconic vehicles (the only known surviving example having been taken victim to a bombing attack in Germany) it wasn't until the 1970s that word came out of one languishing amongst the spoils of the USSR and Paul Karassik, a collector of classic vehicles who had watched these cars race in Belgrade as a young child growing up in Serbia followed the scent

Following the fastidious and definitive advice of Audi AG's 'Tradition' arm, assembly of the surviving components to form the basis of the restoration of the two vehicles began in England around 1990 with the intention to produce one Type D single supercharger car to 1938 specification as well as the twinsupercharger to 1939 specifications. With no surviving bodyshells to use in the restorative work, complete replica bodies were crafted before the finished articles emerged in 1993 and 1994 respectively, just in time for both vehicles to appear on the starting line of the Eifel Classic at the Nürburgring the same year - for the first time since 1939.

Audi purchased the twin-supercharger Type D in July 1998 and in 2000 Paul Karassik sold the single-supercharger example to another private collector after the Balkan war in 1999 prevented his dream of seeing the car run once again in Belgrade, 60 years after it had last been seen there. Good news for us Brits though, you can expect to see this Type D at the Goodwood Revival this month from September 14th to 16th.

A story that's far more than the sum of its parts, you have to admit, whether you're a purist, a driver or firmly in the preservation camp, it would have surely been a shame to leave these particular examples decaying in a wooden crate amongst Soviet tank components rather than preserve and exhibit these iconic racing vehicles for the world to admire and enjoy.

Can you have your mechanical cake and eat it? Probably not, but hopefully this tale will aid at least one of you out there reading this when deciding where to carefully draw the hairline pinstripe between which direction to move in when it comes to the future of that barn find, or family heirloom that may be hiding in your garage or other outbuilding. Do you pour thousands of your valuable and irreplaceable man-hours or hard earned pennies and pounds in their thousands into recreating it to its former glory, just tart it up a bit, or keep it hidden away to enjoy as an art form with a cup of tea in secret every now and then? And if one of the former, do you hit the road in it once it is 'finished' (let's admit it, no project is ever truly finished) or then choose the latter option additionally?

Only you can make that decision, so if you're fortunate enough to have a special vehicle in your possession, regardless of value, be sure to make it wisely.

IF YOU MISSED THE BOAT (FIGURATIVELY SPEAKING) FOR THIS YEAR'S GALLERY RALLY AND CAN'T WAIT UNTIL NEXT YEAR TO SCRATCH THAT OVERLAND ADVENTURE ITCH, THERE ARE ALTERNATIVES.

By the time this has been printed, August will have seen the 10th anniversary of the 'Staples 2 Naples' banger rally, and I'll have been foolish enough to have gone along.

Starting a short drive from Calais to accept the first of many en route challenges and taking in over 5,000 kilometers of France, Switzerland and Italy including Stelvio, the Eastern Alps' highest paved mountain pass and all of its sixty or so hairpin bends, before crossing the finish line in everybody's least favourite Mafia run town; Naples. It's a far cry from the five-star luxury of St Tropez, Monaco or Geneva that you'd get on the Gallery Rally, that's for sure.

Crucially though, the car must be prepared for a budget of under £250. Thankfully, we've managed to just about comply with this rule, selling pretty much all of the nice bits from our chosen steed, 'Operation Dessert Storm' (yes, with a double 's' - we're going to the home of Neapolitan ice cream after all) in the process. Gulf war M1 Abrams tank livery complete, a death-defying drive revealed an impressive fuel leak (now fixed, thanks to my BMW oracle) and we seem to have a small, intermittent overheating issue but that shouldn't be anything running the heaters on full blast, slowcooking our feet in the footwells in the searing Italian sunshine won't solve. Oh well, at least it's a convertible...

NES HARD DRIVES

OH, THAT OLD THING? YEAH, IT'S JUST WHERE I KEEP ALL OF MY FILES AND STUFF...

Feed your inner geek's hunger with one of these puppies. Remember blowing frantically over the contacts of your favourite NES cartridge when it failed to load? There's no need to do that with these external hard drives, you'll be pleased to know.

They come in 1TB capacities, which quite frankly would have blown your tiny mind back in the nineties. There are some incredible looking versions based on special edition chrome and gold Link and Zelda cartridges out there, but personally I'd settle for anything other than Dr Mario, the thought of which still brings bitter disappointment to my mind stemming from the day I excitedly hurried home to play it having spent about a year's worth of pocket money in 101 Toys. Damn them, damn them to hell.

COMMODORE 64

HAVING RECENTLY CELEBRATED ITS 30TH BIRTHDAY, THE PERSONAL COMPUTER OF OLD IS SURELY WORTHY OF A MENTION?

Remember a time before the internet was in every home, USB sticks, data CDs, DVDs and BluRay when computers weren't portable, nobody knew what a gigabyte was and data was stored on 5 and a quarter inch floppy discs or casettes?

No? Then you probably haven't had to endure ten minute loading times after serving up a magnetic casette to a Commodore 64 and patiently waited for the counter to click around before snapping your joystick to a frantic game of Commando or Spy VS Spy. If you thought Angry Birds took an unacceptable time to load, you would have struggled growing up in the eighties where having a couple of slices of toast and a warm mug of tea whilst games loaded was common practice.

Addictive 8-bit music tracks were the order of the day, creating some classic compositions way before the time of Boy 8-bit's remixing attempts, and there was no hard disk, just 64kb of RAM. Yes, kilobytes - just one sixteenth of a megabyte.

With a manufacturing span of 13 years, the C64 was one of, if not the best selling home computer of its time. Numerous attempts to discontinue the model in favour of evolution were thwarted by the sheer popularity of the device, which was still selling over 1.5 million units per year at its peak in 1988, Commodore eventually filing for bankruptcy in 1995 having confessed that the external disk drives actually cost more to manufacture than the computer itself. Talk about margins!

Vintage technology journalism

Words | Grant Runyon, time traveller

n 1988 I upgraded my inky manual typewriter to the throbbing power of the Commodore 64 home computer, and since then I've known that my future as a writer lay in the world of high technology. For a few years I assumed this meant that I would eventually buy a computer so smart it could extract stories directly from my brain, but I eventually downgraded my expectations to owning a machine that would both correct my spelling and allow me to play Spy Hunter.

I've always wanted to try technology journalism, a permanently excited sub-genre of the writer's craft that is written mostly by whooping man-children who get stiffys over any device just because it's 2mm slimmer and can play Temple Run with a higher framerate. When I skim through those mags that have busty, iPad toting models on their covers, I envy those excited nerds, getting all the cool stuff for free despite not knowing what deodorant does or why black bedsheets are a bad idea.

Technology has been around for ages (at least as far back as Noah's Ark) so I wondered if the noble calling of technology journalism has been around that long too. Did the ancient Babylonians need a book from WHSmith to tell them what to install in their hanging gardens? Did Pythagorus do a keynote speech to launch the invention of the triangle? Did the first wheel come accompanied by a withering review from the stone age equivalent of Jeremy Clarkson? Obviously the last one was a trick question, as Jeremy Clarkson is as stone age as his jeans are stone wash, but I was able to answer the other two after the editor borrowed me one of the time machines from Napoleon Dynamite. I hope you enjoy this compendium of vintage technology writing from a time when cutting edge meant swords and knives rather than Mars robots and the Xbox 720, because my crotch feels like it got rammed by an angry hippo.

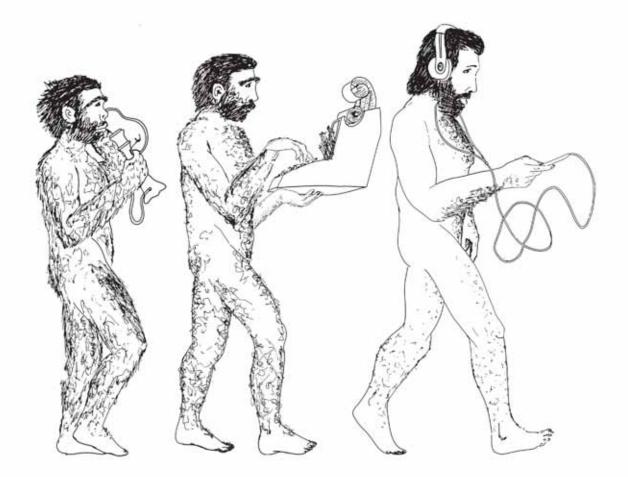

magic hot burn thing

Gurruk from sun-end of island walk here with great story, as Gurruk see great man strong Moggo bring new thing to island. This thing is like hot thing when skyflash burn dry grass but does not kill Moggo because he have great magic. Moggo keep burn thing in pile of sticks near his cave and sleep warm at night time. Other men now fear strong Moggo and all least hairy ladies from south of island have make themselves smell nice for Moggo. He make them stand in line and bring him tusk beast and fish to eat which Moggo make good with new hot burn magic thing. Gurruk would like ladies and tusk beast also, but does not understand magic of strong Moggo. Gurruk afraid of hot thing, so will make own new thing - round rock with hole in the middle that will make men tell story of Gurruk also and ladies smell nice for Gurruk. Round rock is not magic, but Gurruk can get round rock to top of hill because rock is round and smooth. Gurruk will wait til midnight, and drop round rock on Moggo whilst he asleep with ladies, and then smash magic hot burn thing. Gurruk very smart. Moggo soon be very dead.

I must report a weapon most deadly, sire

Hear ye noblemen, squires and knaves alike, for the Duke hath proclaimed that news be spoken far and wide of a most impressive contraption that he has caused to be assembled by his men at arms, with the assistance of bold wizzards and the most cunning blacksmiths of his domain. The warriors of fair England are justly renowned and most particular is the praise given to our archers, but his grace the Duke hath become vexed with the great demands of wages from these men of skill and honour, so hath resolved to replace them with a shooting weapon which is fully deadly yet simple enough that it can be operated by a pox-ridden stable lad. Behold the cross-bow, which will bury an arrow in a Frenchman with the accuracy of a master bowsman, but which does not demand of the Duke somewhere to sleep and a portion of boiled turnips for its dinner.

So proud is the Duke of this wondrous shooting device, that he will parade before you this evening, whereupon he will demand tribute from the newly jobless master bowsmen of this land, wearing naught but a comedy headpiece shaped like a giant apple, so confident is he of his dominance of the land. Prithee sire, do not be late for this wondrous occasion, for the bards shall tell of it for generations hence.

Mr Bell's fantastical and singular patented device for the sending of voices down wires

The golden era of the future utopia was ushered one step closer last week as mercurial inventor Alexander Graham Bell unveiled his latest creation to an exhilarated crowd of London gentlemen. A letter received this morning assured your correspondent that the entire city is abuzz with talk of the new device, which allows a man to shout at his wife or servants without the inconvenience of leaving his chair. Mr Bell reportedly speculated that the device could one day be utilised to shout at Prussians, uncouth colonials or even space-men upon the surface of the moon, though this was loudly dismissed as hogwash by harrumphing gentlemen from the semaphore industry. When asked if the device could perchance serve functions of essential commerce, Mr Bell was reticent, but did concede that it could one day be useful in order to conduct lewd conversation with house-wives and buxom serving-girls from Sweden and Denmark, many of whom are eager to converse with gentlemen from your area for a paltry remuneration of only six shillings per minute. Pray tell us, Sir, do you have need of secondary glazing or legal advice over mis-sold insurance on your pocketbook? I await your answer by return of post.

Samsung Papertrans 250: $30,000

You're a CEO, a fast mover, sharp suit wearer. When you need to get something done, you click your fingers and it happens like that: smooth. You've got a colour TV, an automatic Volvo and a fridge full of Perrier water. What you don't have is time to waste, which is why you don't have time to wait for the postman. Because time is money. By the time that merger contract hits Tokyo, some other guy could have got there fast, leaving you looking like yesterday's news. Only losers lose, which is why today's executive won't be seen without the new piece of miracle technology from the far East: the fax machine. It's sleek, grey and is smaller than an exercise bike, but what it does is as sophisticated as the MTV satellite. It takes your documents, and sends them to anywhere in the world in the blink of an eye. Whoosh. Like that.

The fax machine. Get one, or get lost. Hear that, postman? Your days are numbered.

NB. Please dont try and 'fax' gallery. It's before our time, we've only been around 8 years.

PHONE HOME

HTC DESIRE C THE BUDGET WITH TOP OF THE RANGE SOFTWARE, NOW AVAILABLE FREE AT AIRTEL-VODAFONE ON SELECTED PLANS.

The HTC Desire C is a fantastic budget handset, with features that far surpass its price.

The five-megapixel camera starts up super fast, and is capable of delivering some really decent pictures thanks to the face detection and smile capture features. For those who use their phone as their camera, this little handset will provide great quality shots without having to carry two different gadgets around with you.

With the latest 4.0 Ice Cream Sandwich, this cut-price handset is one of the first to join the high-end smartphone on software. The battery on the HTC Desire C is a trooper, lasting for a couple of days (with heavy use) before needing a recharge.

The HTC Desire C is a great looking handset too, with its dinky rubberised curved chassis moulding perfectly into the palm. Music fans will be glad to see the Beats Audio logo on the bottom of the cover, showing that Dr Dre has applied his musical skills to this handset too.

Pop into our store and try it out! After all, it is free on selected plans.

ALL GOOD THINGS ARE WORTH WAITING FOR!

That well-worn phrase certainly sums up the attitude at Apple Corp. Not only did the company scotch hopes that we'd see the iPhone 5 last year, choosing instead to upgrade the iPhone 4 to the iPhone 4S but they've carried on with the tease throughout 2012.

In traditional Apple style, secrecy has been high but some carefully controlled leaks have been used to drip-feed the 5's images and specs across the global media and there's even talk of a release date in mid-September, but remember, these are rumours, we'll only know what the real iPhone 5 looks like once it has been released!

The first reports that came out, suggested that the 5 has been completely redesigned. Illicit photos show a longer body, creating space for a larger screen and that the power adapter slot has shrunk (so it's probably time to upgrade those speakers you bought to dock with the iPhone 3G). That said, the redesign hasn't affected the overall look of the iPhone. Its clean lines, solid shape and one-button control are still fundamental to the phone's look.

Near-Field Communication (NFC) is a feature that has had Apple followers buzzing with excitement, particularly if it's incorporated with Apple's iWallet. Users will be able to make payments quickly and easily with a 'swish' of their iPhone instead of scrabbling around for the battered leather wallet they threw in their bag this morning.

Whatever the iPhone 5 brings with it to the market, people are already excited and preparing their camps outside Apple stores across the world!

BEFORE YOU GO SEARCHING IN THE LOFT FOR YOUR TENT, REST ASSURED THAT SURE WILL BE ON THE CASE AND YOU WILL BE ABLE TO PLACE YOUR PRE-ORDERS AT SURECW.COM AS SOON AS A RELEASE DATE IS ANNOUNCED.

SONY XPERIA P NOW AVAILABLE FREE AT AIRTEL-VODAFONE ON SELECTED PLANS.

The Xperia P boasts the brightest display of all smartphones on the market, allowing you to lounge in the sun without having to find the shade of a brolly to clearly see the screen of your phone.

The 4' Reality Display powered by the Mobile BRAVIA Engine includes Sony's WhiteMagic technology, making the colours look as sharp and clear as if you were sat inside. But don't worry, it won't drain your battery. WhiteMagic automatically adjusts the brightness of the screen to surrounding light, so when the light is not so strong, the Xperia P uses less battery power. The build and feel of the phone is fantastic, and the glossy screen and aluminum chassis make it look extra special.

The HD camera on the Xperia P is really fantastic, and Sony have even added a Sweep Panorama, similar to the one seen in their digicams, to allow users to experiment a little. Thanks to the Exmor R for mobile image sensor you capture stunning pictures, even in low light. Download a movie from Video Unlimited, connect your Android to your TV and the TV launcher pops up automatically. This smartphone really does make things easy for you.

Come into our store and try it out! After all, it is free on selected plans.

SURE TO PROVIDE FREE WIFI AT JERSEY AIRPORT

Sure and Jersey Airport are delighted to announce that WiFi access will continue at the airport, after Cable & Wireless Jersey secured the contract to provide free-to-public WiFi at Jersey Airport.

Working in partnership with Jersey Airport to provide Internet access to passengers via Sure WiFi from today (17 August 2012). Sure will also provide connectivity for Jersey Airport itself and the many business which operate from the site.

Myra Shacklady, Group Commercial Director, Ports of Jersey commented: "With some 1.4 million travellers passing through Jersey Airport every year, it's essential that we provide a WiFi solution that is robust enough to handle these volumes in an efficient manner, yet is still cost-effective to run. The partnership approach suggested by Sure, along with their expertise in network design, delivered on both these aspects."

CHANNELONLINE.TV APP

ITV Channel Television have released a free mobile app on the iTunes store that will ensure you're never too far away from the latest local news, sport and weather. It's updated 7 days a week and was created entirely in-house at the TV Centre here in Jersey.

AIRTEL-VODAFONE STOPS ROAMING CHARGES FROM WRECKING HOLIDAYS

A deal with global Wi-Fi services provider Boingo gives users access to more than 500,000 Wi-Fi hotspots around the world at a fixed monthly price and number of minutes with uncapped data download. Connecting to the internet in this way, rather than roaming on foreign 3G networks, gives users access to faster speeds and, importantly, no nasty bill surprises.

Under the terms of the arrangement, Airtel-Vodafone customers pay a fixed price of £34 per month to access the Boingo network through up to four mobile devices, such as a laptop, smartphone, tablet, games console, camera or MP3 player. As part of the package, they will also gain access to the BT Wi-Fi network, formerly known as BTOpenworld.

'If customers take up the deal and use Skype or a VoIP handset then they won't even have to worry about call charges when travelling,' said Mr Campbell.

Jersey Electricity Powerhouse : 505460 Don Street : 510010

he's most at home with HOUSE music... Jersey's very own superstar DJ, Hannah Jacques is a force to be reckoned with on the decks, recently back from a massive couple of weeks following her colossal win of the annual Radio One Superstar DJ competition! Gallery caught up with the girl of the moment to find out what kick started her musical career and how it felt playing alongside big names such as Annie Mac in Ibiza... hosting our meeting in the sun, Hannah sporting a tattoo with the lyrics of her favourite track, Red Carpet's 'ALRIGHT...' A most apt tat indeed, as everything is set to be more than 'alright' for our Hannah as she springboards into some stomping opportunities over the coming months!

So, Hannah, where did your DJ pas sion come from?

Well, I've always been musical, since I was about 3 years old... I loved my singing lessons and I was always entering competitions at school to compose stuff and be involved in any musical productions... I did music GCSE a year early... Music is basically in my blood. It was my boyfriend Tony Safe who got me into DJing though... Without him, it wouldn't have happened. I was about 18 and he was resident at the old Liquid nightclub... He invited me into the DJ Box and it was my first real experience of the feeling you get from behind there; watching all the smiling faces, reacting to the tunes he was playing – I was just like, THIS IS AWESOME! Tony and I got together and he had decks at the place he was living, that was it, I just thought, 'I'm gonna have a go at this!' So I just picked up some vinyl and had a mess around.

What would you say to budding DJs? Learn from vinyl! Have a few months on vinyl, practice, practice... If you can DJ with vinyl then you're instantly recognized as credible. Nowadays anyone can press 'SYNC' and think they're a DJ. If you can mix with vinyl, then you can mix anything. In fact, when I move house soon, I'm setting some proper old decks up so I can keep on playing about with vinyl.

After you'd mastered your craft by rocking your way through Tony's record collection, where did it all start in terms of playing out in Jersey?

I played my very first gig in 2009 at Tunage on the Terrace. Those nights were fantastic, they started in 2008 but died a bit on their arse after Liquid closed – people just cant be bothered to walk the five minutes over to the Waterfront... It's such a shame. It was originally Dave Smith (my brother in law), who gave me the chance to play there and I remember playing this Lighthouse Family remix which just went off, I had such a great response that it gave me a real buzz. That was it then I was hooked. I remember being so nervous, playing with my hair and licking my lips - everyone was taking the piss out of me! I moved back to Jersey some time afterward and luckily Dave invited me and Tony to play in various places around the island. Then we started our own night, 'Old Skool Reuinion' at the Bowling Alley... that was my first big gig and I was still shitting a brick back then in 2010!

How did the Radio One competition come about?

Well I was meant to register for it last year, my friend Marguerite was on at me to enter but I missed the registration last year... I'm kind of glad I missed last year as I've had another year to refine what I'm doing – it paid off as I entered for this year and won!

Growing up, music plays a big part in our lives I guess, what kind of music inspired you through those formative years growing up?

I was into musicals! I went to drama school, my whole life was musical theatre... Fame, Grease... Maybe not My Fair Lady! I was basically musicals, musicals, musicals... I had a job in Mamma Mia in London, but there wasn't much in the way of opportunity aside from that... Apart from musicals, I was into Stereophonics, Red Hot Chilli Peppers, Eminem, anything my sister was listening to really! Now it's heavily house music.

Is there any music you really don't like?

Dubstep. It needs to be put in the bin and forgotten about! I wont ever grow to like it – apart from when I was in Ibiza, Zane Lowe came on after me in Privilege – he plays a lot of hip-hop and dubstep and I did find myself dancing... The slow running man dance move! Anyway, I will proudly say, ordinarily, I can't bear Dubstep.

Who are your most top rated DJs?

I have a small love affair with Sami Divine, she played in Pure at the beginning of the year and I just loved her set. Love how she reads a crowd. My other fave is Nervo, I caught them when I was on holiday in Ibiza (before my latest trip playing there)... Nervo are twin girls, they're just brilliant... It was when I walked into Ushuaia, they were on playing a track, which I have in my collection - that was a defining moment as I said to one of my friends, 'This is where I want to play one day...' Then three weeks later I was!

So are you more drawn to female DJs? Do you reckon they read a crowd best?

Not really... I think that was just coincidence. I can't really say who my real favourites are – there are so many.

What are your thoughts on the local dance music scene?

It's such a shame there's not more places to play... and later closing times for the clubs that are open! Pure has the best sound system and Martin is amazing, so generous and so enthusiastic with the local scene, doing all he can for us locals... We need more Martins! If Mimosa played the music I liked then I'd go there, it's a really nice club. The best thing would be The Splash with a late opening and a Café Mambo vibe down there - the sunset is priceless. Something needs to be done! Given the right venue and the right capacity, with a later time – people could afford bigger DJs which in turn would give local upcoming DJs a chance to play on a platform with some bigger names... *And give us nicer doormen at the entrance of clubs some are just grumpy!

What's your view on Jersey Live?

I think Jersey Live is wonderful. The ticket prices are extortionate, but I understand it costs so much to put on such a massive event, booking lots of big acts as they do. Madness was my favourite act there so far... That was great. It was a shame I couldn't get in the dance tent to see Sasha last year, I reckon they need to kick the kids out the dance tent earlier... Give them a kiddy area and leave us to the adult area! I'll be playing the Full Flow tent again this year - that's my home at Jersey Live... We make it into a real party. I'm looking forward to Jaguar Skillz this year, he's a sick DJ... If I could control the dance tent, I'd book Nervo, Fat Boy Slim - what was that at the Olympic Closing Ceremony by the way?! Whilst on the topic of Jersey Live, THANK YOU TO GRIFF FOR THE INVITE TO PLAY.

So, keep on top of Hannah's exploits as she's off to Manchester after this interview to meet with agents and generally boost her already growing profile, playing in the UK and making the most of her current springboard into Superstar DJ Stardom... Twitter @DJHannahJacques

BURN BABY BURN

INTRODUCING... DANTÉ'S - JERSEY'S FIRST FREE TO RENT PRIVATE HIRE NIGHTCLUB!

Gallery went underground to take a sneak peek at Jersey's first free to hire nightclub. In the depths of the Merton Hotel, a door opens into one hell of a venue... A fully decked out nightclub with its own bar and retro seating, wicked disco lighting and funky dance floor, Danté's is set to take Jersey's parties to a whole new level.

Have you ever wondered what to do for your hen do, stag do, birthday party, corporate function or charity event? Danté's is the answer... Chatting to managers, Oliver and Norbert, we were given the full treatment and as the lights went down, the music cranked up I couldn't help but wonder, what about the hotel residents? No fear, Oliver explained how Danté's is fully sound proofed so it can be as loud and bouncy as you like! We like, we like!

With a capacity of approx. 80 people, Danté's lends itself perfectly to those wishing for that nightclub vibe without having to venture to a nightclub in town... No queues, no paying on the door, no grumpy doormen... Flowing drinks and food can be arranged, super friendly staff and a sunken dance floor, old skool disco lighting, bring your own iPod, band or DJ, or Danté's can help arrange one for you – what more could you really want to party? Did we mention it's FREE?!

Consider this; you and a 79 of your closest friends, a wild party, overnight stay and full English the next morning to wash away the cobwebs (aka, hangover)... The Merton is also famous for its pool, so if you fancy a dip after burning the midnight oil, feel free - that'd be FREE too after an overnight stay. Could this get any better? Danté's is awaiting your call, get in quick and chat to Oliver or Norbert to arrange your ideal party... Call 724231 or go to www.mertonhotel.com for more info.

MUSE PRESENTS ANY GIVEN SUNDAY

Toast and Jersey Heritage continue their successful run of cross-arts events at the Museum and Merchants House Brasserie, with the chosen theme for this event, 'Urban.' Headlining are local boys Any Given Sunday, whose blend of hip hop, funk, folk and rock sensibilities has made them a favourite on the island live music scene. A support bill will be announced closer to the time, and the AV Theatre will be playing skate videos featuring local skate board dynamo Steve Harben. All recorded and produced by local film makers, the videos showcase the tricks, athleticism and agility of one of Jersey's most talented and respected skaters. Thursday 6th @ Museum Brasserie. 6 – 9pm Free entry

ALBERT LEE

Universally acclaimed double-Grammy winning guitarist Albert Lee headlines a very special show at the Opera House in what is sure to be one of the highlights of the local live music events calendar. Needing no introduction to country music and rock fans, he's widely acknowledged as one of the world's finest axemen, and has worked with some of the biggest names in music, from Dolly Parton to Eric Clapton and The Everly Brothers to Emmylou Harris. He is also a member of Bill Wyman's Rhythm Kings and fronted the band at the O2 arena on the night of the Led Zeppelin reunion concert. This is bound to be a busy one, so buy early to avoid missing out! Saturday 22tnd @ Jersey Opera House. 8 – 11pm Tickets £20 from www.jerseyoperahouse.co.uk

VANGUARD PRESENTS PRESSURE & ARBY (ROOD FM/DUBSESSIONS) TERMINAL STATE + NIGHTSHIFT + MC WILDEE

TEENAGE CANCER TRUST MASQUERADE BALL

Teenage Cancer Trust's Jersey Appeal have worked tirelessly in recent times to raise funds for a brand new uniit in Southampton to treat 16-24 year olds in the region (including the Channel Islands), and this Masquerade Ball in the Royal Yacht Hotel's Celestial Hall is the latest of their series of exciting and imaginative fundraising events. Featuring a drinks reception, 3 course meal, raffle, auction and dancing, this is the perfect night out for those that like their parties with a dash of opulence. To say that it's all in aid of a good cause would be an understatement. Gallery gives it a firm thumbs up. Saturday 29th The Royal Yacht. 6.45pm – 1am

Tickets £65. Please visit www.theroyalyacht.com for more details

THE FUTURESHOCK & ASYLUM PRESENT NIGHTWORKERS + GUESTS

Local indie promoters Asylum have teamed up with Guernsey's Futureshock for a pan-island affair this month. The Futureshock are a musc collective embracing rock, metal, punk and indie, an ethic reflected by this eclectic line up. On the bill are Brightonian-Jersey rock n' rollers Nightworkers, 2010 Jersey Live Main Stagers Last of the Light Brigade and Of Empires, whose sound harks back to 70s hard rock, and a full band set from Jersey R&B prog-rocking 'supergroup' Harlequin Knights. For any fans of alternative indie music, this is the perfect way to round off the month.

MUSIC

It struck me that the vast majority of drum companies all offer standard made drum shells, so I have developed my very own unique shell constructions with numerous options on offer including mixing woods and exotic wood veneers.

A different drum started teaching the drums in 2003 after receiving a Higher National Diploma at the Brighton Institute of Modern Music. It was while studying at BIMM where I discovered that a lot of the famous and well respected drummers I was meeting didn't have any type of musical grades. On discovering this, I decided to create my own way of teaching that focuses primarily on my years of being self taught, without the use of books or standard sight reading.

With DRUMOLOGY, I have condensed everything that I have learnt in the last 19 years into lessons for my students utilising songs by popular bands that they all respect. I prefer to teach my students exactly what they want to learn, because within all of the songs they are taught are all of the fundamentals of drumming, it's just a matter of finding patterns within the tracks. Once they have learnt the important basics, then it is time to create their own 'voice' on the drums, then after you can slowly introduce other musical styles to develop their knowledge of music.

In 2011, I became the only teacher in the Channel Islands to offer lessons online via Skype. This has given my students the extra option to have lessons in their own homes on their own drum kits if they prefer. It also saves on petrol money for their parents! My tagline for DRUMOLOGY sums up my ethos – 'A Different Approach to Rapid Learning'. In 2009, after dreaming about it for many years, I finally set about experimenting to create my own drums. After planning and developing for two long years, SUPERNOVA DRUM CO. was born!

My main aim for SDCo. is to always push the envelope in terms of what we offer to the drumming community as there is so much competition globally. It struck me that the vast majority of drum companies all offer standard made drum shells, so I have developed my very own unique shell constructions with numerous options on offer including mixing woods and exotic wood veneers. SDCo. is the only company in the World to offer most of these shell combinations. I also have my own bespoke made drum parts to fully help us stand out from the crowd. I sell my drums locally through Island Music, but also sell my drums worldwide. SDCo. currently has nine Dealers in seven countries.

SDCo. has recently started to delve into the percussion market by making Cajons, a percussive box that is almost like a 'portable drumkit'. My main aim for the future is to employ local people and develop into one of the top musical instrument brands in the world. I am up against so many companies with endless budgets, but I love a good challenge!

TRACY'S DIRECTORY

Sometimes we're guilty of not getting out around the island and looking at professionals offering key trade services. Fortunately Tracy does. She's been out and found a load of great little businesses who'd like to let you know about what they do. She's been to talk to a variety this month. Who knows, they could be just what you're looking for.... Don't forget to tell them you saw them in the Gallery Directory!

Don't forget to tell them you saw them in Gallery! They may give you something extra...

Appetite began when we couldn't find a local restaurant guide that would tell us when all our favourite places were open, and what was on the menu. So we decided to write one ourselves.

The fourth edition of Appetite is out now and has all the key features you love about your food annual – easy to navigate sections, sample menus and clear contact details as well as a few extra tasty tidbits like interviews, features and special offers and giveaways for Appetite readers.
